F. W. Green has purchased of W. L. Collins the livery stable at Wilbraham, also the stage route between the two villages, with all necessary equipments.

The Advent quarterly Sunday school convention for the western district was held at the Advent Christian church, East Wilbraham, yesterday. A good programme had been arranged for the occasion and would have been fulfilled to the letter but for the absence of Elders J. E. Cross and F. Burr, who were detained by unavoidable circumstances. Elder G. H. Wallace, as president of the convention, acted as chairman and delivered the opening address. Prof. Hatch, a graduate of Bates college, was also present. Though deprived of his sight he is a remarkable man, and one who never fails to interest all who are fortunate enough to hear him.

WEST WARREN.

Charles Palmer has moved to Warren.

Mrs. A. Pierce of Lynn is visiting Miss J. Johnson.

Mrs. Rufus Baker has returned from a visit at Palmer.

Mrs. George Thayer was in town last week, visiting old friends.

Miss Jennie M. Barton of Millbury was in town Memorial Day.

William Shean, 2d, has rented the George Barton house on Main street.

Misses Lillian Crouch and Minnie Brooks visited the schools in Holyoke last week.

A large party from this town visited Forest Lake Tuesday, the opening day at that place.

The Epworth League literary circle met in the M. E. church vestry Wednesday evening.

Six couples from here visited Holland Tuesday and stopped at the popular "Kinney House."

Welcome J. Bowdoin of Lawrence spent a few days with his cousin, E. M. Johnson, this week.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Warren M. E. church met with Miss D. P. Johnson Thursday afternoon.

The concert last Friday night in Washington Hall, given by the young people of the Catholic church, was a credit to its managers. They netted $35.

WALES.

Lyman E. Royce of Northampton and George Switzer of Springfield are spending a few day in town, visiting old acquaintances and relatives.

Miss Alice Pepper of Springfield is visiting her parents for a few days. She came home to attend the golden wedding, but was sick and not able to attend, much to her disappointment.

Samuel Eager of Springfield came flying home on his wheel last Saturday, having made the trip in two hours and twenty minutes. He reports his time one hour from Springfield to Palmer.

Owing to the illness of H. A. MaFarland, who was to have been master of ceremonies at the Rogers golden wedding, J. M. Legon was drafted into service and made a very appropriate speech for the occation.

A Golden Wedding.

Saturday evening about 80 friends, relatives and neighbors called upon Mr. and Mrs. George S. Rogers to remind them that 50 years ago was their wedding day, and to congratulate them on this anniversary. This is an occasion which only comes once in about 200 marriages, but the Rogers family is remarkable in this line, as on Mr. R's father's side three such occasions have been held within the last 90 years, and four such on his mother's side. There were four generations represented on this occasions: Two brothers and their wives, J. H. Rogers of Brookfield and Clinton Rogers of Rochester, N. Y., also Mr. R's. only daughter, Mrs. David Boyden of Worcester, and her son Arthur. Among other guests from out of town were J. M. Lyon and wife of Stockbridge, George L. Webber and wife and Miss Edith Webber of Holland, W. P. Peele and wife of Stafford, Conn., Mr. H. A. Chilson and lady friend from Monson. Several letters of regret from friends not able to attend were read, among them being notes from Charles Royce of Boston and F. A. Royce of Palmer, both former residents. A bountiful collation was served. Several gifts and $108 were presented, more than half of which was gold. In responce to the presentation address Mr. R. very feelingly replied. The bride is now 69 and the groom 70 years, but look like a couple of about 45 and 55 years. At 10.30 the party broke up, and with a hearty hand shake bade Mr. and Mrs. Rogers God-speed on the remainder of life's journey.

WILBRAHAM.

The juniors of the academy had their class ride Monday.

Mr. Hewitt has taken the contract to carry the mail from the Street to the station.

The Ladies' Missionary Society met with Mrs. M. S. Howard Thursday afternoon.

The ladies of the South church will give a strawberry and ice cream festival next Thursday evening in the chapel.

The Congregational parsonage is undergoing repairs inside; papering, painting, etc., which is greatly improving its appearance.

Ludlow Grange gave an entertainment in the Congregational chapel last Monday evening. Wilbraham Grange furnished refreshments.

Fred Green has bought out Collins's livery stable at the Street, and the stage route which Mr. Collins has run so acceptably for many years.

To-day the seniors of the Academy took advantage of the privilege annually granted to the class, and spent the day at Riverside Grove, Springfield.

Considerable comment was made by the veterans and their sympathizers at the lack of interest on the part of the Academy students in regard to Memorial Day. The faculty would have been justified in making the attendance upon the short escort march compulsory.

The Wesleyan Academy ball team on Saturday won a one-sided and uninteresting game from the Delphians of Springfield by a score of 20 to 3. The game Memorial Day with the Holyoke High Schools was a reverse of Saturday's game in point of interest, though the score at the close was 12 to 3 for the Wesleyans.

Principal Newhall's sermon to the soldiers at the South Congregational church Sunday was preached from Christ's familiar reply to the Pharisee-Herodian inquirers concerning the piece of money with the superscription of Cæsar, "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's." The speaker said in the course of his remarks that the citizen, when he paid his tax, was discharging a Christian duty, and when he paid his pew rent he was contributing to the support of the nation; and the Puritan, with his holy bigotry, he considered a better citizen than the know-nothing socialist of the present time. The conclusion was a forcible appeal to the young men to perpetuate and protect the Union won by the fathers of a generation ago.

Tuesday was very generally observed as a holiday in town. Work on the farms was almost universally suspended, and a good-sized audience listened to Rev. Mr. Howard's patriotic address in the forenoon. The soldiers of the local organization, escorted by the Hazardville brass band, formed in front of the church and marched to the schoolhouse, where they were joined by the school children, and then returning stopped at the Academy, where, in response to a general invitation, about a dozen of the students formed in line and returned to the church. After the services the march was resumed to the Dell cemetery, where exercises were held under the management of the public school authorities, and the soldiers left on the grave of each soldier buried there a pretty bouquet of wild and domestic flowers.

WARE.

Miss Barker's school had a picnic at Sturtevant's grove Monday.

Quite a large party from Ware went to Forest Lake Memorial Day.

Judge Ely of New York has bought D. S. Kennedy's black mare "Dollie."

The Ware high school ball nine were beaten by the Warrens 11 to 4 Memorial Day.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians have voted to hold a picnic at Eaton's Grove.

It is reported that the price of meat has been raised the past week two cents per pound.

Charles P. Weeks and family of New York have been visiting his father, William H. Weeks.

Services were held this week in both the Catholic churches in memory of the late Bishop O'Reilly.

Mrs. George B. Canterbury, aged 50, died this morning of spinal meningitis. She was well known and beloved by all who knew her.

Albertine & Mahoney have put in an elegant soda fountain the past week. They are young men, and deserve their share of patronage.

The Diamond S. Company of Lowell has taken the store formerly occupied by C. H. Trowbridge, and opened to-day with a stock of furnishing goods, cloaks, etc.

Circle Canadien St. Jean Baptiste society is making great preparations for the celebration of St. John's day, June 23, by a grand concert, with festival and dance.

A. B. Celle has gone to the Adirondacks, where he will be chef at the Saranac Inn. His brother from New York will have charge of the business here during his absence.

Memorial Day passed off to the evident satisfaction of all interested. The address was excellent, and the after-dinner remarks by Rev. A. B. Bassett, H. M. Coney, John W. Robinson, George S. Marsh and others were listened to with interest.

Rev. O. C. Sargent of Claremont, N. H., will deliver an address on Japan in the Methodist church next Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission Band. The address will be illustrated by stereopticon views. There will also be singing; solos, and by a select choir.

The Ludwig Concert Company has been engaged to give a concert in the town hall next Tuesday evening, June 6th, for the benefit of All Saint's church building fund. Mr. Ludwig is considered the best singer that ever came from the old country, so there is no doubt those who attend this concert will have a rich musical treat, as well as helping to swell the fund.

The Masonic fraternity of the neighboring towns met with Eden lodge on Wednesday evening for the exemplification of the work. Day Spring lodge of Monson, Vernon of Belchertown, Eden of Ware, Quaboag of Warren, Thomas of Palmer and Mt. Zion of Barre took part in the work and lectures. Grand Lecturer G. H. G. McGrew of Boston officiated, and a banquet was served after the work.

The high school graduating exercises will probably take place June 24. The members of the graduating class this year are as follows: Katie Ratigan, Eleanor Hutchinson, Minnie Brannigan, Mabel and Mamie Osgood, Fannie Eaton, Maggie Prendiville, Helen Davis, Blanche Hatch, Ada Cummings, Maggie Fitzpatrick, Thomas J. Nelligan, Charles H. Davis and Charles Lindsey. Katie Ratigan has been appointed valedictorian and Eleanor Hutchinson salutatorian.

A fine social time was enjoyed at the chapel Wednesday evening. The singing by Misses Eaton and Davis was exceptionally good; Miss Lovett gave great pleasure by her violin solo, rendering the "Blue Bells of Scotland," in a truly artistic manner; P. J. Mulvany sang a bass solo, and for an encore sang "Annie Laurie," pleasing many who love the "old songs." The vacation scenes by stereopticon seemed to be greatly appreciated. Ice cream and cake was served, and all seemed happy.

Mrs. R. T. Hill of Washington, D. C., daughter of John W. Robinson of Ware, gave an intensely interesting address before the Social Science Club at the town hall Monday afternoon on "The Poor White." Having traveled through Southern Arkansas, where there are neither railroads nor public highways that would be considered passable in this part of the country, the conveyance being a "mule and a buggy," and dependent on the inhabitants for food and shelter, she was most admirably fitted to give graphic descriptions. She gave as the origin of the poor whites the servants who were sent here from the old country, commencing about 1619, who were indentured to the old planters for terms of years. They were not allowed any of the privileges of free men and women, with penalties for any wrong-doing in an extended term of service or whipping. Whoever caught a runaway servant received 1000 pounds of tobacco, and in addition to double service the runaway was whipped by every sheriff through whose parish he passed on his way home. When slaves were introduced the white servants were reduced to insignificance and shiftlessness, only working for a bare subsistence. The unhealthy climate has much to do in keeping this class of people in the condition they are. The future of the poor white is a question of civilization. With railroads and better highways the country will be developed. Improved agriculture, varied industries and better schools are only a question of time. The poor white must either progress or go under, as civilization advances. We wish Mrs. Hill might be persuaded to give the public a chance to hear this address, as from a hasty perusal of it we are sure it is the most interesting of anything we have had in Ware for many a day.

It is probable that the trial of Lizzie Borden will be conducted on the part of the government by District Attorney Knowlton, assisted by District Attorney Moody of the Essex district. Such recent tests as Attorney General Pillsbury has made of his strength show that while steadily gaining he is not yet able to undertake the protracted strain and labor of a capital trial without risks, which his physician will not allow him incur.

Julius Hecker of Holyoke was fatally injured at Springfield Wednesday by falling from the top of a five-story building to the basement.

Physicians Puzzled.

Many persons are unable to sleep on their left side. The cause has long been a puzzle to physicians. Metropolitan papers speak with great interest of Dr. Franklin Miles, the eminent Indiana specialist in nervous and heart diseases, who has proven that this habit arises from a diseased heart. He has examined and kept on record thousands of cases. His New Heart Cure, a wonderful remedy, is sold at LeGro & Lynde's. Thousands testify to its value as a cure for Heart Diseases. Mrs. Chas. Benoy, Loveland, Colo., says its effects on her were marvelous. Elegant Book on heart disease free.

Recovers His Speech.

Alphonce Hempbling, of Summit township, Butler Co. Pa., made an affidavit that his twelve-year-old son, who had had St. Vitus Dance for twelve years, lost his speech, was completely cured after using three bottles of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and also recovered his speech. Thousands testify to wonderful cures from using it for nervous diseases, dyspepsia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, headache, etc. Four doses of this Nervine cured Mrs. W. E. Burns, South Bend, Ind., who has been suffering with constant headache for three months. Trial bottle and elegant book at LeGro & Lynde's. (4)

Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills

Personal.

A young lady of seventeen summers, highly educated, refined, and of prepossessing appearance, desires to form the acquaintance of some nice young man, whom she would advise, if troubled with dyspepsia, to use that great blood purifier, Sulphur Bitters.

Poor, but Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who, while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who has been a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

Away with the wash-board —Use Pearline. As long as you use the old wash-board there'll be hard work and waste. That's what goes with it, and can't be taken from it. That's what it was made for. It's the rub, rub, rub, on it that ruins the clothes. It's the wash-board that wears you out. You don't need it.

Away with wash-day! You don't need that, either. You don't set apart a day for washing the dishes. Wash the clothes in the same way, with no more work, a few at a time.

But you'll have to use Pearline to do it. Pearline only can rid you of wash-board and hard work; with it you can do your washing when you like. And you can do it safely, too. Directions on every package.

A MAMARONECK MIRACLE.

HOW EDWARD HAVILAND SAVED HIS WIFE'S LIFE.

She Never Knew a Well Day in Seventeen Years—On Crutches Some of the Time—But Can Now Walk as Well as Any One.

MAMARONECK, N.Y.—Mrs. Edward Haviland of this place owes her life to her husband; who during her long and critical illness never gave up the thought that she could and would be cured, although it seemed sometimes like fighting against fate.

By accident Mr Haviland heard of the cures Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was performing, and brought this medicine home to Mrs. Haviland, who began its use with the most gratifying result. "Although I naturally shrink from having my name appear in public print," said Mrs. Haviland, "I think it is a duty I owe to those who may be suffering, that I make known my remarkable recovery. I was first taken with a severe pain in the chest and stomach. The pain gradually moved downward until it settled in the bottom of my right foot and from that followed suffering which even now I dread to think about. My right foot and leg began to swell, and the foot became drawn up until the hollow of it laid on my left knee. I was confined to my bed, being moved only once in fourteen weeks, after that I walked on crutches for over ayear. I had a large sore gather and break on my ankle, and the whole top of my foot was completely raw.

During all this time I tried many different medicines and several doctors, but received no lasting benefit. One day my husband brought me a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I began its use with but little faith, but before I had taken half the bottle, I was greatly relieved. The disease in my feet was not my only trouble; I also suffered from dropsy. I was so bloated that I could hardly move, I had not seen a well day in seventeen years, until my husband brought me this great medicine. I have taken five bottles of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and I feel like a different woman, my dropsy is all gone, and I can walk almost as well as ever, and to a woman who has not walked, only limped about for so many years, the use of my feet alone is like a new lease of life."

There are many others here who have been cured of disease by Favorite Remedy. In talking with a local physician, he said, "I use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy now for all diseases that arise from excess of uric acid in the blood, and have cured some of the most stubborn cases of rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney, liver and urinary trouble, although these diseases appear to be widely different, they all originate from the one source, this deadly 'uric acid.' Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy dissolves this acid, dispelling it from the system through the natural channels, thus curing disease. I believe every rheumatic or dyspeptic victim should use it." 1

It Cures Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Croup, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and Asthma. A certain cure for Consumption in first stages, and a sure relief in advanced stages. Use at once. You will see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Sold by dealers everywhere. Large bottles, 50 cents and $1.00.

W. H. HITCHCOCK.—W. H. BLANCHARD.

Mr. Peters, of Schohairie, on the World's Fair.

Like several other fellows with more time than common sense,
I went out to Chicago for to see the fair commence;
And such a muddle as was there I never seed before,
Not even when they're takin' stock up at our country store.

There was things that I thought was fine. They had one buildin' there
So big 'twould cover up my farm, with lots o' room to spare,
An' I ain't wanderin' from the truth an atom when I states
The grounds would hold Schoharie and its subbubs in their gates.

Some fellers said the architexture was so very fine,
An' mebbe 'twas, but I don't want much of that sort in mine.
It seemed to me like some big lot statchers broken loose,
With gables, balconies, an' things of very little use.

An' one thing that they thought was fine jest kept me on the smile;
A great long stilted thingumbob they called a Perry stile.
Up in Schoharie Perry 'd find himself a-feelin' flat
If he should try to sell us folks a stile or two like that.

As for the show, I s'pose 'twas good, but my! most of the things
They had there wasn't no more use than dudes or diamond rings.
Pianners, as was no more good to folks as couldn't play
Then jest so many snow storms when you haven't got a sleigh.

An' ploughs an' harrers built so big you couldn't make 'em go
Without enough o' horsefiesh for to run a tallyho;
An' slews an' slews of other things of jest the same poor kind,
That wouldn't please Schoharie while Schoharie had her mind.

An' so I thinks, an' so I says, Chicago's welcome to
The show she's got, and if she's pleased, what's that to me an' you?
Schoharie hasn't got no need for feelin' envious
Because Chicago had a pull an' got the fair from us.

An' when next autumn comes around, unless there's some mistake,
These foreign visitors will call Chicago's show a fake,
If they will only take the time to come here and compare
The Jackson Park exhibit with Schoharie's County Fair.

Scarcely anything in daily use is more common than paint, indoors or out; it is before us all the time. We could not do without it. Our doors, windows, walls, ceilings, stairs are all protected by paint, often beautified by it. A vast amount of money is spent annually in paint—much of it foolishly, for it is not a commodity that is well understood by the people. If they are buying almost anything else that is to wear, they will get that which looks the best, lasts the longest, gives most satisfaction and costs the least in proportion to its value.

With paint, they seem satisfied if it is called paint. Is it not reasonable to suppose that there is just as much difference in the quality of paint as of cloth, silk or satin? Chilton Paints cost more to manufacture than any other, but they cost the consumer less, because it takes less to do a certain amount of work, and when once it is done it need not be touched for years.

HOW "JACK" WAS WON.

The new church was finished, and it was Christmas week, and busy fingers were twining long wreaths, to make it beautiful. The song of the angels in sparkling letters gleamed above the Gothic arch, while beneath was one golden star. Great branches of pine, hemlock, and laurel, with scarlet alder berries, around the windows; the chancelrail, desk and pulpit wreathed with running pine and bittersweet; and in front the font in moss and snowy immortelles.

Back in a pew near the great door I sat, watching the young men hanging the long wreaths which were to make the church one arch of green, and around me were gathered many little helpers, breaking up and "bunching" the laurel, pine, and hemlock for me, as I tied the last, long, heavy wreath. Suddenly into the gleeful laughter and merry chatter broke a wail of discord: "Please, Miss W——, won't you come and make Jack Campbell behave himself? He just pulls our hair, breaks and hides the strings, and is throwing the nice greens into all the seats over in that other corner; and the carpet will be awful dirty! We wish you would make him go out of the church,—the horrid boy. He says it is 'only a gospel barn, any way.'"

I laid my long wreath carefully along on the backs of the pews, and walked over to the other side of the church to settle Jack. He was a tall, awkard, slovenly looking boy of seventeen. As he saw me, he pulled off his cap, and the big blue eyes under the broad forehead just sparkled with mischief. He was the terror of the neighborhood, a trial to his widowed mother, and a thorn in the flesh to all his relations. I was almost afraid of him myself, and yet I laughed at the pranks that the good souls of the entire neighborhood rolled up their eyes at in horrified amazement. As I stopped in front of him, he began breaking up the branches of hemlock into small bits, for convenience in tying.

"Oh, Mr. Campbell!" I began. "How nice those little branches are! Won't you please come over and help me finish my wreath? It is the last one, and we ought to hang them all to-night; and you bunch so beautifully."

Jack followed me across the church to my corner, sat down, and worked like a gentleman. He had tormented every one but myself for a week. The wreath was finished. Then I made up my mind that Jack must be kept out of mischief.

"Wait a minute, if you please, Mr. Bacon. Mr. Campbell and I have just finished this last long wreath, and he has the loop on his finger now, and I want he should take it up the ladder, and hang it in its place. If he comes to Sunday school next Sunday he will most likely sit right under it. That corner, seems to me, will be a good place for a young men's class."

The look on Jack's face was peculiar, to say the least. He had not been to church or Sunday school for years. On Sundays he went bird-nesting, fishing, roaming about the woods, or stayed at home and teased and worried his mother and little sisters.

"Say, Miss W——, are you coming over here to teach a class of boys? 'Cause if you be, I'll make a whole lot of fellers come."

"Of course I'll come, Mr. Campbell, if you will come and help me keep them in order. I cannot do it alone, you know. And then you will be such a help in singing. I heard you sing 'Nicodemus' the other night. Will you come?"

And Jack promised that he would be on hand when the bell rang, and he would have some other boys there also.

"But supposing they will not come,—what then?"

"If I tell them to come, they'd better not dare to stay away. If they do I'll lick every one of them. And they all know I can do it just as easy as wink."

Saturday night was Christmas Eve, and the new church was to be dedicated. In the corner, under the wreath he had hung, sat Jack. Rector and priests in their white robes came slowly up the aisle. From the organ-loft sweet girlish voices sang a joyful hymn, and then the people kneeled under wreath and star, cross and anchor, as the solemn words of prayer rose through the silence. Jack squirmed and fidgeted, drummed with his fingers on a prayer-book, scraped with his boots, made faces, held his hat in his hand, and looked toward the nearest door, but he could not muster up courage to go away. Again the music rolled away through the green arches, and Jack listened and kept quiet all through the sermon; and when the white-haired rector of old St. Paul's said, at the close, "When Christmas Eves have all passed away, together may we keep our Christmas in the skies," Jack looked downward and was still. He had heard every word of that sermon.

Christmas was bright and sunny; the soft, feathery snow lay on roofs and trees,—one of God's white mornings. I sat under Jack's wreath, wondering if those rough boys, his cronies, would come to Sunday school, and what I should do with them if they did. The young minister, straight from the theological seminary, came down to tell me that he admired my courage,—didn't I think I was too young? And he was so afraid that they would be exceedingly troublesome, and rather a discordant element in our school.

I listened, and said I knew they would do the best they could,—but I did wish in my heart that they would some day get him out and snowball him.

In they came at the last stroke of the bell,—nine rough, clumsy, rather shabby looking boys, in age from fifteen to twenty, Jack coming in last with the words, "I've brought 'em, Miss W——, and if they cut up I'll thrash 'em."

The novelty of their position, the new church with its greenness and beauty, kept them quiet throughout the short opening exercises; then when it was time for the lesson I said, "If this weather lasts, can we not have a sleigh ride, young gentlemen?"

They were astonished; they had come there to please Jack, expecting to be preached to and talked to about their sins and wickedness, and here the Sunday school teacher, with not even a Bible in sight, was talking to them about a sleigh ride. Jack found voice, "What sort of a sleighride?"

Promptly I answered, "A moonlight one." They were interested in who would go. I proposed to take all that an omnibus would hold of poor little children who never have good times, and some of their sisters or cousins to help me look after the little girls. It was easy to drift from the idea of giving a sleigh ride to the little ones, after they had appointed a committee to attend to all the arrangements, to the meaning of Christmas, with its joy of gifts and giving.

They had not the slightest idea that they were having a Sunday school lesson with the old, old story woven in. I learned years after that they carried a great deal away with them that first Christmas in the new church.

I had one idea, I think, all that winter,—to give them something to do as a class, to keep them together and interested in each other; and I was very careful not to be left out of any of their good times. The sleigh ride was a success; and then one tall lad told me, with a bright smile, that he should be twenty-one next Wednesday, and I found that his home people were willing, and we all went to the little home, and gave him a surprise party and a big illustrated book of travels. That boy is a Christian merchant in China to-day.

Every birthday gave us a merry-making, and when mine came I invited them, with each a girl friend, to a nice little supper, and they all came with well-brushed clothes, polished boots, clean linen, and conducted themselves like gentlemen, and then left me a nice photograph of the whole class taken in front of the church, with our minister on the steps.

Teacher in the Sunday school, you who have been discouraged and ready to give up trying to do anything with your class of rude boys on whom you seem to make no impression, do you not know how I prized that picture?

The class grew, and year by year old members went away and new ones came, but not one has gone backward.

There is a big, jolly prosperous farmer in the far West who each year, as near to Christmas as moonlight and snow come together, harnesses his team horse and gives the children of the town a sleigh ride. Away in Australia is an American merchant who gives them a moonlight sail on blue ocean waters, with big brothers and sisters to care for them. Another each year, at the Christmas season, takes all the children of the orphan asylum, and gives them candy enough to make them sick at the end of a Saturday afternoon ride.

Those boys are all gray-haired men now; two of them died in the war; one of them sails back and forth across the ocean under the German flag. I shall, I know, find them all safe at home some white, clear Christmas morning. And Jack—what of him?—a grand and God-like missionary in far-off India to-day. His wonderful power and influence over the other boys was one of God's gifts which he learned to value and use aright; and he says that the turning point in his life was when I called him "Mr. Campbell."—Florence Burnham in Religious Herald.

PROFESSIONAL REPARTEE.—Apropos of the lawyers pitching into experts on the witness stand in murder trials, the case is recalled where the lawyer looked quizzically at the doctor who was testifying and said: "Doctors sometimes make mistakes, don't they?"

"The same as lawyers," was the reply.

"But doctors' mistakes are buried six feet under ground, said the lawyer.

"Yes," said the doctor, "and lawyers' mistakes sometimes swing six feet in the air."—Boston Herald.

The Kind that Never Fails

Leon's Sarsaparilla Co., Belfast, Me.:
Gentlemen:—Last winter, like many others, I was attacked with the grip, from which I have never fully rallied. I lost my appetite and strength, felt weak in the legs, and was generally "used up." I tried various remedies, but received no benefit therefrom.
A short time since I was induced to try a bottle of Leon's Sarsaparilla, and its effect has been wonderful. I have no weakness in my legs, and my appetite is good, and my general health is improving as rapidly as I could hope for. My improvement has been so marked that my wife, who is troubled with a weak back, is now trying your medicine, feeling confident that it will help her. I take pleasure in recommending Leon's Sarsaparilla to all who are suffering from the grip.

It Tastes Good

One reason why Scott's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda has had such a large sale is because it is "Almost as palatable as milk;" but the best reason is that its curative properties are unequalled. It cures the cough, supplies the waste of tissues, produces flesh and builds up the entire system.

Scott's Emulsion cures Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, and all Anaemic and Wasting Diseases. Prevents wasting in children. Almost as palatable as milk. Get only the genuine. Prepared by Scott & Bowne, Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

Memorial Day.

DEDICATED TO MARCUS KEEP POST, G. A. R., OF MONSON.

Soldiers awake! The morning is breaking,
The reveille summons you, "Fall into line."
Out on the hillside your comrades await you,
Hasten your garlands of beauty to twine.

Gather the flowers that are brightest and fairest,
Fresh with the morning's baptism of dew;
Each in its fragrance a message shall carry
Of love everlasting, immortal and true.

When the cry of the nation had rung through New England,
Calling for aid in Columbia's name.
Up from the heart of old Massachusetts
Mighty and strong was the answer that came.

Out from the homes went the husbands and brothers,
Eager to battle for freedom and right;
Father and sons with the courage of martyrs,
Ready to conquer or die in the fight.

How the drums beat and the banners were flying—
How your hearts throbbed with the patriot's zeal;
Dreaming alone of the victory awaiting,
When to the Union your foemen should kneel.

Years passed away e'er we saw you returning,
Victors? Ah, yes! But a victory dear;
Bought with the blood of Columbia's bravest—
Bought with the graves that we garland each year.

Grandly they stood 'mid the smoke of the battle,
Nobly they fell with their feet to the foe;
Even the breeze, floating tenderly o'er them,
Sighed for the flowers of our army, laid low.

Up from the Wilderness, Lookout and Shiloh,
Out of the shadow of Andersonville
Rose the white lilly of Peace everlasting,
Bidding the tumult of battle be still!

Over the fields where the dead and the dying
Lay with their faces upturned to the sky,
Sweetly that heaven-born fragrance descending,
Wafted their spirits to freedom on high.

Back to the homes in their dear old New England
Loving hands bore them one sorrowful day;
Wrapped about them the emblem of freedom,
Tearfully, silently laid them away.

Out on the hillside they rest from the conflict,
Angels of peace shall their sentinel keep;
Under the flag that they loved and died for,
Glory-crowned heroes, they dreamlessly sleep.

Comrades, you too may rest there on the hillside
E'er we shall gather the laurel again;
May every heart by the army blue covered,
Throb with a loyalty never to wane

'Till the last reveille wakens earth's sleepers,
Telling the night of life's conflict is past;
Then, with the ranks to be ever unbroken,
The army shall march to "Headquarters" at last.

Monson, Mass. MRS. C. G. THOMPSON.

THE VOLUNTEER SOLDIER.

A MEMORIAL DAY ADDRESS, DELIVERED BY JAMES L. BOWEN OF SPRINGFIELD.

Comrades, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

What does it mean that we have come here to-day?

It is the most delightful season of all the year. The world is full of gladness and hope and promise. Springtime has come, and nature and humanity rejoice; we live in the midst of beauty and sweetness.

Yet at this joyful season there comes to us this most solemn day of all the year—this day when with a common and sacred purpose we turn from the delights which surround us to perform a touching and an ennobling service. The community, as with one thought and one impulse, joins in the observance. The husbandman leaves his fields, the mechanic quits his shop, the business man closes his counting-room; even the children are freed from their desks and their tasks that they may learn a lesson which books cannot teach.

Why do we thus come? and what is the lesson which is taught? Why on this day, throughout the length and breadth of our land, do we select a few of the many graves of those gone before, and do them special honor?—graves over which for a quarter-century and more, it may be, the grass has been waving. In many an instance they are the graves of men whose lives were humble and whose stations were lowly, as the great world measures human life; and it would not be surprising should the child or the youth of to-day look upon this ceremony with that degree of indifference which comes from but partial comprehension of what the observance signifies.

The lesson to be taught on Memorial Day is simply that we honor those graves, unheeding the rank or station of their occupants, because a citizen soldier, who so loved his country that he offered his life for it, finds there his last resting place; and we bestow the tribute which a grateful country gives to its heroes, the while the living veteran bends in reverence above the grave of his sleeping comrade.

We cannot better employ a few minutes than in going back to that memorable winter of 1860 and '61, when the eyes of all the world were fastened upon this country of ours. Here had been wrought out, by the wisdom of the Fathers, a new form of government—a government in which the will of the people, duly expressed, became the supreme power. Isolated though the nation was, and separated from the despotisms of the Old World by 3000 miles of ocean, its influence could not be avoided, even by this distance and this barrier; the seeds of freedom were swiftly and surely wafted across the billows, and were taking root in the hearts of the oppressed of all nations.

The crowned heads and the titled lords of other lands had watched this American experiment with an intense interest; they beheld it strengthening and prospering to a degree incomprehensible to them. They could but realize the danger to their monarchial and despotic institutions from this demonstration of the capacity of the people for self-government. They had comforted themselves with the belief that the republic could not long exist; that whenever the time of trial came it would crumble; that some strong hand would grasp the reins of government and establish a monarchy, or that general disintegration and political chaos would result. At last there had come the beginning of the crisis which was to solve the problem; and not alone the enemies of free government, but its friends as well, awaited with inexpressible anxiety the issue of the ordeal.

This crisis had come because of an evil which existed in the land. During all the years of material prosperity and of growing national power which the country had thus far seen, it had been harboring and fostering an institution directly and radically at enmity with the great fundamental principles of republican government—the institution of human slavery. From the days of the Colonies the conflict between slavery and freedom had been felt and recognized; and as years passed, and the protest against human bondage grew louder and stronger, the antagonism became more bitter.

In the presidentiai contest of 1860 the candidacy of Abraham Lincoln represented this protest—and he was elected. The threats of secession, of a destruction of the Union if it could not be governed in the interests of this demoralizing institution—this relic of barbarism—began to take tangible form. State after state seceded; property of the government to the value of many millions of dollars was seized by hostile bands claiming to act under the direction of their state authorities; the councils of the nation were found to be full of traitors, in whose midst President Buchanan sat helpless—dazed and confounded by the magnitude of the peril.

It is neither necessary nor possible here to recount in detail the history of those days. In a few months the new administration took its place, amid threats and fears and the bustle of hostile preparations, and the firm hand of Mr. Lincoln took the helm of state. Six weeks later the blow fell; Fort Sumter was fired upon and forced to surrender; the city of Washington was at the mercy of the conspirators; the militia of the loyal states were called on for temporary service; and presently, as the terribly earnest nature of the Southern revolt became evident, a call was issued for volunteers for longer terms of service.

This was the beginning of the great test, to give the solution of the problem toward which all eyes were turned with intense interest. Being without a standing army, educated in military service, the national government had no other dependence than its citizen soldiery—the men thus called from civil life to take up arms and engage in actual warfare thus suddenly precipitated upon the nation. There were a thousand questions which rose to the thoughtful mind. Would the people respond?—and if they did, would their service be worth the having? The pretentates of the Old World, who lived in the midst of vast standing armies, curled the lip in scorn at the thought of volunteer military service; sneering away the idea that anything less than long years of tactical education could make a soldier, equal to the terrible tests of the campaign and the battle-field! And we well remember how insolently the reckless demagogues in the seceding states boastfully proclaimed that even if the loyal people dared to take up arms in defense of the Union, one Southern chevalier could easily vanquish ten of the Yankee mudsills.

And it is but the truth to say that in many a thoughtful mind there were serious misgivings. From the close of the Revolutionary war down to that hour the land had, comparatively speaking, enjoyed a reign of peace. The war of 1812 had been largely fought upon the water; and even that was so far removed by years, with but here and there one living who had taken part in it, that it seemed to belong to some former time. In the later conflict with Mexico, though the American arms had been crowned with signal triumph, as the result of unquestioned valor, the armies which had fought there could by no stretch of the imagination be considered representative of the average Northern citizen, and the soldiership which he would furnish.

Meantime the rough and hardening experience of the Fathers had given way to lives of comparative ease and luxury, the pursuit of prospering industry, the ties of home and friends, and the enjoyment of pleasure in its thousand attractive forms. Men's nature had been softened and refined by generations of progress in civilization; they had come to look with repugnance upon warfare; to prize human life, to shrink from suffering in any form, either for themselves or for others. No wonder that the question was often and anxiously asked, whether from such material soldiers and heroes could be made, and that men feared to know the answer to the problem.

But the call went forth, and how surprising, how wonderful was the result. From old and young, from rich and poor, from proud and humble, there came one common response—"The Union must and shall be preserved!" Everywhere the enrolling offices were the centers of anxious throngs. From mere boys to gray-headed men, there was a sentiment, a universal impulse to go forth in that hour of need to their country's service. There came from the shops, the farms, the counting-rooms; from the halls of learning, from the clergyman's study, from all the thousand and one avenues of our busy life, such an out-pouring of patriotic devotion as history had never recorded. The woman who had read the exhortation of the Spartan mother to her son to return wearing his shield or borne upon it, with the yearning of a tender heart mingled still the pride of the matron of old, and sent her boy forth with her blessing; while the poor woman in humble life, who had perhaps never heard of the Grecian mothers, clung frantically to her son, wept over him—and bade him go! Fathers whose pride and whose hope for their declining years were embodied in some promising boy, spoke hopeful, earnest words of farewell; then turned to wipe a tear from eyes that were not used to tears—while not infrequently father and son together went forth to noble service.

Everywhere there was cheer, encouragement and inspiration for the departing volunteers. From every flagstaff floated that Star-Spangled Banner, which spoke in its silent fluttering with an eloquence no orator could match; the National colors—the dear Red, White and Blue—grouped in badge and rosette and many a form of beauty, were worn by matron and maiden, boy and girl, strong manhood and tottering age. Busy fingers of mother, wife, sister, daughter, in ten thousand homes, were engaged in preparing articles of convenience and usefulness for those about to go forth—beginning that work of devotion which for four long years, through all the terrible trials of crushed hopes, blighted aspirations, saddened lives and desolated homes, the women of our land were so nobly to carry on.

We must not forget that amid all this bustle of preparation, the booming of cannon, the strains of martial music, the excitement of the drill and the new life to which the volunteers were introduced, they had little realizing sense of the sad nature of actual warfare. They knew nothing of soldier life or discipline. There were many among them who had never even seen a holiday parade of a militia company; while not a few found it next to a physical impossibility to master even the most simple military evolutions. These men were in earnest, their hearts were true and strong; but how would they bear the supreme test of the shock of battle, when the deadly bullet should come hissing through the lines, cutting down friends on the right hand and on the left; when the horrible sweep and crash of artillery should tear away the firm ranks like grass, mangling the quivering flesh of schoolmates and boyhood acquaintances with terrible mutilation?

As regiment after regiment, with full ranks, bright banners and inspiring music, bade adieu to home and friends, and turned their faces toward the enemy, the loyal people spoke their farewells with bleeding yet hopeful hearts, and felt sure that those who bore the banners of Freedom and Unity would and must prove worthy the cause of their espousal. How impatiently was awaited the moment when these volunteers should proclaim to the world that the spirit of the Fathers dwelt in the hearts of the sons of those later days! And how intense the hope that when the strong army gathering about the National Capitol should advance in its might, and show to its opponents that there was an unalterable determination to protect the national life, the mad men whose hands were raised against the noblest and most hopeful government that the sun ever shone upon might be without the arbitrament of relentless warfare, to abandon their mad design.

With what heart throbs the nation heard the tidings from Baltimore, that the Massachusetts Sixth Regiment had been assailed by a frenzied mob, a few of its members killed and more wounded. How inexpressibly sad it seemed that those young lives should be thus wasted, and what a revelation it brought of the extent to which the poison of secession had spread through the land. But was there shrinking? Ah, no! The blood sprinkled upon the pavements of Baltimore was but an oblation to consecrate every loyal heart to meet whatever sacrifice the ordeal might demand. A few weeks later the wires flashed over the country the sad news that the gallant Colonel Ellsworth, whose fame had spread so widely, and from whose bright genius so much was expected, had fallen at the hand of an assassin. Oh, with what a shock these tidings came! Yet they were only the first pattering drops, announcing the deluge that was to make every home throughout the land a home of mourning for friends or loved ones fallen.

At last, through the sultry July heat, came the intelligence that the loyal army was advancing from the camps about Washington to meet the enemy, and that the first great battle of the war was to be fought. How anxiously the people waited for even the slightest additional tidings from "our boys"—for though perchance they might not be from our own homes, they were from homes like ours, they were our representatives, they bore our banners; in that broader sense in which to-day we claim their graves as our common shrines, they were ours.

The expected battle came! Like the billows of a storm-swept sea, the vast waves of humanity were borne here and there by the tempest of such a conflict as this hemisphere had never before known. Looking back now upon that struggle, we do not wonder that it resulted as it did; and we must believe that for the great purpose of the ages, it was best that victory did not then rest upon the Union banners.

The battle of Bull Run had been fought, and the enemy held possession of the field; but the citizen-soldier had suffered no discredit. He had shown a heroism worthy of all praise, and had attested to the onlooking world that in his home of comfort and enjoyment, from the lessons of his books and the associations of his friends, had grown up within his heart the sterling heroism which was ready to welcome death, if need be, for the vindication of his own and his country's honor. Experience only was wanting to make him the model soldier of the world; and this no more in the case of men who fought to save the nation than of the ones who sought its destruction. It is authentically stated, by the way, that at the conclusion of this battle, the Confederate soldiers, looking upon the retreat of the Boys in Blue with astonishment, threw down their weapons, officers as well as men, and started for their homes, supposing that the war had ended, and that their cause was established.

Then it was that throughout the loyal states the presence of actual warfare began to cast its shadow. Here and there a wounded man was to be seen, everywhere the center of an interesting group listening to the story of his experiences—which at that time seemed so like a leaf from the blood-stained annals of the past. Occasionally the sad tidings of some death in hospital or on the field came into a community with a sickening shock; or one who had gone forth the picture of robust health returned, the wreck and shadow of his former self; to struggle for a time against his fate under the kindly care of tender friends at home, then, with the closing hours soothed by their ministrations, to complete by his death the full measure of his sacrifice.

You who recall those days will remember how the lesson of the sacrifice was presented with a new force, when from lip to lip went the tidings that some boy from your midst had died of disease; and how with a shock it was emphasized when the message came from the field of battle that your first to fall in action had met a soldier's death.

Steadily the months of preparation went by; the autumn faded and winter came and went. The magnitude of the contest began to be realized as the flames of war lighted up the country for thousands of miles, and skirmish and battle became of almost daily occurrence. Yet thus far the conflicts had not been of great magnitude, as we review them now; and their importance, save as they prepared the way for what was to come, was not generally great.

So the spring of 1862 found the people everywhere impatient of what seemed to them the needless delay. "Why doesn't the army move?" they demanded. Perhaps they did not appreciate the preparation that was necessary, the embarrassments under which the government and its supporters labored; we look back now, and say that if it was to be done again, we would give the commanders their own time, and wait patiently; but in those feverish days it seemed impossible to abide the continued inactivity—we wanted the suspense over, and our friends at home with us again.

Finally the storm of battle broke on the expectant air, coming first from the West, with the inspiring capture of Forts Henry and Donelson and the stubborn fight at Pea Ridge. The North Carolina coast gave back the response from Roanoke Islands and Newbern, with their decisive victories, followed by the terrible slaughter of Shiloh. Then thick and fast the blows fell, now here, now there, till the land was filled and overflowing with the sad wreckage of the battle-field. We scarcely need to recall the terrible names, for they are written on many an afflicted heart, on the scarred and mutilated frame of many a veteran, in letters that can never be effaced—Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, the seven days' battles on the Peninsula, Cedar Mountain, Second Bull Run, Chantilly, South Mountain, Antietam, Iuke, Corinth, Perryville, Fredericksburg, Stone's River—all these, any of which might well rank with the famous battles of the world, crowded into eight short months! The mighty armies which had gone forth in the pride of full ranks and perfect soldiership, had faded away to mere skeleton organizations; the sad waves flowed steadily to the rear, bearing the dead to their nameless graves, the wounded, the disabled and the diseased back to their agonized friends, demanding in their places the robust and the brave who remained still in civil life.

Oh, in what succession the calls came, voicing the needs of the government for more strong men, to fill the places of the fallen! There was no longer doubt or ignorance as to the meaning or the cruelty of war; on every hand the costly sacrifices could be counted, and the end seemed no nearer. In the South, the iron hand of a relentless conscription was upon every man within the confines of the ten powerful states, to fill the depleted armies of the Confederacy; and the moral influence of all the monarchies of the earth, with the single exception of Russia, was opposed to our republic. These unfriendly nations gloated with delight at the anticipated fall of the government whose influence they feared, and every selfish interest prompted them to assist and encourage those who sought that end. There was, especially at that time, when the contest seemed most critical, the possibility, and to the public apprehension almost the probability, that in addition to the rebellion a foreign war might ensue. What was the resulting influence upon our volunteer soldiers, and those among the loyal people called by the voice of duty to fill the decimated ranks?

I have given much study and reflection to those times, and I ever wonder at the extent and cheerfullness of the sacrifices made by those whom we may call the substantial people in our communities—men who had pleasant homes and dear families to whom they were bound by every tie that the human heart can feel. You will recall them in your own community, for they were not confined to any locality—men who left these happy homes, and with no desire but to do the full duty of patriotic American citizens, enlisted as common soldiers in the Union army.

These men went forth to all that war implied of toil and suffering—to the weary rounds of camp duty—to the long, terrible march, carrying the burdens that became so heavy as the column tramped on its interminable way; sweltering while the fierce sun shone through clouds of choking dust, or plodding beneath the driving storm through seas of mud—they went to the bivouac, where the exposure and discomfort were such that not even exhaustion could bring sleep—to the encampment, the poisonous swamps, where disease, wan and deadly, stalked grimly by day and by night—to exposure on the bleak mountain sides, where the sweeping winds benumbed the limbs and froze up the life—to the peril of a thousand accidents—to the lonely vigil on the picket line, where the momentary inattention of a single soldier might imperil the entire army—they suffered the gnawing pangs of hunger for which there was no relief—they endured the slow wasting of disease in camp or hospital, with no home friend to minister, they went to the wearing duty of constant peril in the trenches—into the whirlwind of battle, where human life became as nothing, as less than nothing—to death at last and a soldier's lonely grave!

Wherever these men went, bearing the flag of Freedom, they bore it with a heroism which compelled the admiration of the world, and even of their boastful enemies in the field. They answered at once and forever the often-heard assertion that volunteer armies would not fight with the bravery of trained soldiers The deeds of sublime heroism wrought by these men are not surpassed by any which the world has ever witnessed. The Army of the Potomac, composed of volunteers who had gone forth from our Northern homes of prosperity and comfort, and of which many of your personal friends and acquaintances formed a part—men of intelligence and culture such as no army in the previous history of the world had ever contained in like measure—won a record for steadfast gallantry, for devoted heroism, for endurance and consecration, unparalleled on the pages of history!

In addition to its interminable marches and incessant manaeuvering against the principal army of the wily and desperate foe, it fought such a series of battles as no single army had ever before fought, or has since fought. Recall for a moment the imperishable names crowded within a compass of three short years—the campaign on the Peninsula, with a dozen severe engagements, Manassas, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, with its long series of desperate battles and forty-two weeks of siege, Winchester, Cedar Hill, Five Forks, the final assault and capture of Petersburg, the flight and pursuit of Lee's Confederate army, and its surrender at Appomattox. All of these rank among the great military events of the world; they were interspersed with a multitude of smaller engagements; and more than this, they were fought by an army which had never the inspiration of victory. With the single exception of Gettysburg, the legitimate fruits of which we must admit were not secured, it never till the final hour could feel that the enemy had been completely and decidedly defeated. In the terrible dark hours of repulse, of defeat, of disaster, it had still clung to hope through all of its suffering, still believed in the justice of its cause, still trusted in the God of Battles, and fought the good fight.

Broken and shattered by the retreat from the Peninsula and the defeat at Manassas, it had reorganized its bleeding ranks as its marched to Antietam and gave check to the invading, triumphant foe. With its brave batallions torn to shreds on the bloody slopes of Fredericksburg, and decimated afresh by the horrible carnage of Chancellorsville, it could hurry to Gettysburg—its glorious Sixth Corps making a march unsurpassed in the history of military achievement—and upon those rocky heights pour out the blood of 20,000 of its bravest, in everlasting compact that the cause of Freedom should not perish from the face of the earth!

Such heroism, such devotion, such offering of Self on Freedom's altar could not fail—had it done so, we might almost have doubted the eternal purpose. Peace came at last; came to a country torn and afflicted, filled with desolation and anguish; but over which, from Lake to Gulf, floated undimmed the Flag of the Free!

Then what a glad shout of joy from all the anxious hearts, when at last "our boys came marching home!" But the regiments which were welcomed back were not those which had gone forth, save in name alone. Instead of the long, handsome battalion line, there came only a little group of bronzed, scarred men, bearing banners rent and tattered on many a hard-fought field. Where were the comrades for whom tear-dimmed eyes looked in vain? The fair-haired boy who was the pride of his aging father and doting mother, upon whose strong manhood they had hoped to lean as their feet trod the down-hill of life?—the young husband and father, who had kissed the sorrowing wife and prattling child an affectionate farewell as he went forth breathing words of hope and courage?—they were not with those who have come home!

No, dear father, dear mother, dear widow and orphan, your loved one is not there! Among the noble army, 400,000 strong, who have died that the Union might live, he too has given his young life of hope and promise. Perhaps his fate came in the shock of battle, with his face to the foe and a smile of triumph upon his lips; perchance from disease, or wounds, or the horrors of the prison pen;—it may be that his last resting-place is near the home of his childhood; in some great national cemetery where thousands lie in death as they stood in life—side by side; or yet in an unknown grave, where even the loving hands of comrades could give but hasty and unmarked burial. But wherever his mortal remains may rest, Memorial Day means that his consecration, his patriotism, his supreme sacrifice, shall never be forgotten.

It is but natural that you, dear friends, who have gathered here to-day in this observance, should think of those whom you may especially and fittingly call your own; of the brave men from your town limits who went forth in response to the repeated calls; of those among them who gave their lives in their country's service, or who have since fallen by the way as the years have rolled onward; of these friends and acquaintances whom you recall from personal association. Let it be your special care that their memory is kept sacred for the generations that are to come. Time is drawing its softening, mellowing influence over the recollections of the past; we seem to think of those sad times and trying experiences as of some unwelcome dream. Even those who passed through the never-to-be-forgotten scenes to which I have briefly referred, look back upon them to-day as from a mountain height. The keen pain, the sleepless nights, the lonely vigils, the exhausting marches; even the charge, the repulse or the triumph, the wounds and the sorrows over comrades slain, are like half-forgotten dreams, growing fainter still as the years roll on. We think of our comrades less frequently as individuals, it may be; we remember them as heroes, dying in a noble cause—and thus their memory shall live forever. The years that pass shall brighten and purify and hallow it.

But in the broader sense all the graves of heroes throughout our land are yours, and those which you especially revere are but a part of the sacred, common heritage. On this consecrated day, a sympathetic impulse touches all hearts, and a united, grateful people join in a tribute which is sincere and reverent. To this observance Memorial day is solemnly set apart, and I plead that to this noble purpose it be held sacred. Let it not be given up to frivolous games and pastimes! Far be it from me to condemn sport and recreation, for I am in sympathy with it most sincerely; but surely for the sake of those of our comrades who suffered so much and who died, that untold millions might enjoy the blessings which are ours in so abundant measure to-day, with all the magnificent possibilities of the future, the whole country can well afford to set apart one day in the year for serious thought; one day in which to show that republics are not necessarily ungrateful; one day in which to teach the generation coming upon the stage of life's action the lessons of a pure and exalted patriotism; one day in which to proclaim to all the world that the truest wealth of any nation is the patriotic manhood of its sons.

And on this day of contemplation, if we are true to our best instincts, we shall seriously ask ourselves what our country needs to make it worthy of this supreme sacrifice, through which its salvation and perpetuity were assured; how we may still lead it upward and onward, the guiding star of the nations of the earth. For its material progress we need have no concern, nor for its standing among the great nations of the earth. But as we look abroad with an eye single to the nation's glory and its enduring welfare, we shall behold dangers and evils which should be feared and guarded against. We shall make sure that ignorance is rendered impossible by ample provision for universal education; and we shall also make sure that our boasted government of the people by themselves is not a profession alone, but an actual reality; that no matter what a man's social position, or the color of his skin—it shall be his privilege, at every election for which he is legally qualified, to cast that ballot which best represents his careful thought and his earnest conviction, and to have it honestly counted! We shall make sure that integrity in all the relations of life is regarded the highest quality of American manhood; and we shall show unmistakably that corruption in high places shall have swift and unsparing punishment. We shall proclaim, by our tongues and as well as by our votes, that trickery and deceit, false pretenses and double dealing, are as reprehensible and as disgraceful in politics as in any other relation of life; that he who would receive the suffrages and the confidence of his fellow-citizens in the nation must, like the knight of old, be "without fear and without reproach."

Do you say that this is an ideal picture? So it is; but it is an ideal which is not impossible of realization; it is one toward which I sincerely believe we are steadily making progress, and toward which we all may lend a helping hand. And as thus we labor for education and freedom and temperance and honesty, for the recognition of the truest and best and noblest in manhood, consecrating our sons and daughters to carry on the work after we shall have laid it down, we shall, in building a nation without stain, build the noblest monument to our brothers and comrades whose crowning sacrifice we reverence, to-day and ever.

Comrades, in some great conflict you may have seen a division or a corps lying in reserve, awaiting the call to action. As the battle progressed, or the plans of the commander were developed, the call came to regiment after regiment, and brigade after brigade. Over the crest they went, into the fight, out of the sight of those they left behind. To-day the veterans who thirty years ago were fighting for the Union and that for which it stood, for freedom, progress, and the uplifting of humanity, are waiting the signal—not to the conflict, but to cease from life's battle; to enter the Everlasting Rest; to lay down the shattered frame, the pains and misery which they have borne through these long years. Many of those who join in the reverent procession to-day will before the year shall close have heard the call of the great Commander, and when another Memorial day shall come, loving hands will bestow for their memory what now they give to others. Not for very long will the presence of the veteran, and the problem which it imposes, be with us. Not long will it be asked whether the great government which he helped to save shall in his weakness and his need give to him a pittance, as in the days of its need he gave to it of the strength of his young manhood, of his life-blood, and of the tears and anguish of his loved ones.

But the passing of the veteran from the field of his life-work does not and cannot undo that work. In all portions of the world there stand material structures, like the Pyramids of Egypt, the builders of which have passed even from the knowledge of the people. Columbus and Washington, with all who aided them in the prosecution of their heroic labors, have long since gone to rest; Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Farragut, Porter, Logan, Thomas, McClellan, Burnside, Hooker and Meade are with us no more, and 50,000 a year of their faithful followers join them in the great reunion. But the work which they did, founded in the hearts of mankind, giving to holy aspirations for humanity's welfare an embodiment in this united, magnificent nation, will endure, and will reach and bless all the peoples of the earth.

Go forth, then, comrades and friends, as often as Memorial day returns, to these sacred graves; bend reverently over them, and place there your tributes of affection and memory. The perfume of the flowers will sweeten the air which whispers above them, but the lives which these men laid on the altar of their country have sweetened and brightened the earth;—these floral tributes, bright and delightful as they are to-day, will wither and fade away; the deeds of these departed heroes shall live forever, in song and story, in hearts made happy, in lives freed from bondage, in a country made in truth "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

HEAVENLY CITIZENSHIP.

A SERMON TO L. L. MERRICK POST OF THE GRAND ARMY, BY REV. H. F. MOULTON, PASTOR OF ST. PAUL'S UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

"For our citizenship is in heaven."
(Revised version) Philippians III:20.

St. Paul, the great apostle of Christianity, wrote these words during the time of his imprisonment in Rome, to his Philipian Christian friends.

Philippi was under the control of the Roman government, and its inhabitants had all of the privileges of Roman citizenship. In this city of Macedonia St. Paul had preached and established a Christian church. Like a true minister he made many warm and sincere friends in this place; thus, when this man of God was in want and suffering his old parishioners sent one of their number to him with earthly comforts, such as personal care and contributions to meet the necessities of life. Thinking perhaps that he would not see his brethren in Christ again, St. Paul, out of the depth of a sweet Christian experience and life fashioned after the Master's, writes his Philippian friends in acknowledgment of their thoughtfulness toward him, and exhorts them to be loyal to their faith and true to the principles of Christ-like living.

In this epistle the Christian missionary calls attention to the fact that they were not, any more than we are, merely citizens of the temporal and earthly kingdom in which one may live, but also that they were as those of us this day—citizens of a more permanent and heavenly republic. As the citizens of Philippi, the Roman colony were citizens of Rome, the far-distant, imperial city, so the Philippians, like ourselves, were citizens of a more real and diviner kingdom.

The text impresses us with the conception of a citizenship which is continuous and enduring; one not narrow from sectional hatred nor conceited from national prosperity, but rather one broad in social brotherhood and humble in achievements—a citizenship catholic in thought, righteous in motive of action, and spotless in life.

It will undoubtedly do us good to-night to point out and emphasize in the presence of this honored company some of the qualities of life which we ought to cultivate in the rearing of a nobler and higher citizenship. It is said that after the retreat of the French army from Moscow, as Napoleon was late at night looking over charts and maps, a man tattered in garments, battle-worn and blood-stained, came into his tent. Gazing upon him the French general said: "Who are you, sir?" The man exclaimed: "Emperor Napoleon, I am the remnant of the rear body guard of the Imperial Army of France. As we behold these members of the Grand Army of America in this congregation, does the question arise "Who are they?" If so, from their thinned ranks, from their blood-stained colors the answer comes, clear as the bugle-call—"A remnant of a patriotic, self-sacrificing and true citizenship; one which defended and saved our country when menaced by one of the most inhuman, unjust, and irreligious perils known to man. Therefore we are reminded by the examples of citizenship so vividly now and here set before us in this beloved and holy Zion of ours, of some of the elements which contribute toward heavenly citizenship.

In the first place, we are helped in the gaining of a more thoughtful citizenship by keeping a holy memory of those engaged in the Civil war, who, as a Roman poet sang, deemed "It sweet and praiseworthy to die for one's country." No man can read the well-written histories, nor listen to veterans' accounts of the late war without being quickened with a truer conception of what it is to love one's nation, to live for one's republic, and to die for one's country. Consider for a moment the four long years of anxiety, privation and suffering endured by our heroes. Think of the sacrifices, poverty and tears of the homes they left for the good name of their government and freedom of enslaved fellowmen. Words fail to describe the despair which settled over men, homes, towns, states, and a nation, because one section of our land—the South—said of slavery: "We will save the institution and destroy the nation," while another section—the North—said: "We will destroy the insitution and save the nation.

There is a legend of the early days of our revolutionary history of a plot to blow up an arsenal situated in the midst of a New England village. The enemy had in the night laid a train of powder a distance of two miles away. This was discovered by a citizen of the town upon the very instant of its explosion. What did he do? He threw himself across the track of the line of fire; his body arrested the flashing flame; the scheme failed; a thousand lives were saved through the death of this brave and public-loving man. Likewise our republic was saved from a sin which would have shattered her fair fame and welfare by the courageous and patriotic soldiers of our rebellion throwing themselves across the track of a flashing flame of injustice. These men made sacrifices for righteousness willingly. They were cheered on by the thought of praying homes, and firmly believed in the Scripture proverb: "Righteousness exalteth a nation; sin is a reproach to any people." The men and women who bore the heat of the day and the fire of the battle in this civil calamity are indeed worthy to have the fitting inscription placed on their monuments that Sparta wrote on hers when she commemorated the dead of Thermopylae: "Go, stranger, and tell the Lacedonians that we died in obedience to her laws."

A good illustration of this obedience to one's country's demands is clearly brought out in an incident mentioned in a paper not long ago:—

At a dinner given by a Grand Army post recently, a gentleman was introduced as one who had lost his leg in the war, and it is easy to imagine the cheering with which he was greeted when he rose to speak. But he began by disavowing the introduction. "No!" he said, "that is a mistake; I did not lose anything in the war; for when we went into the war we gave our country all that we had, and whatever we brought out was so much clear gain." That is the spirit which says, for me to live is patriosm; if I can serve my country better with one leg than with two, if I can serve my country better buried under the soil of the South unhonored and unknown than coming forth from the war glorified, that is what I want to do.

Surely we should hold in remembrance these sons and daughters of America, whose characters were maked with the qualities of a heavenly citizenship. Let this memory generate in use and move us to a citizenship characterized by love of native land, a desire for political purity and an earnestness in all our nation's interests. As the sun of this season of springtime draws this whole green world to look up and drink in its light and fire, so let the glory that burns and shines in the deeds of those who played a part in the historic event of '60 draw us toward a more consecrated citizenship.

"While our banner bright waves o'er the land;
While our Union binds us heart and hand;
While our nation lives, proud, true and brave;
While our gallant ships whiten the wave;
While our love of country throbs in the heart
Never shall their memory from us depart."

A holy memory of these persons cannot otherwise than inspire us to a higher standard of citizenship.

"Now a nation calls them blessed
For the freedom which they bought;
And the world has been made better
For the lesson, nobly taught."

In the second place we should not only let the memory of the past in this particular urge us on to a larger citizenship in thought, but we should be also daily examplars of a heavenly citizenship in action, as were the faithful and untiring soldiers of the war, who with the honored Jefferson believed that "God had no attribute which sides with slavery. I tremble," said he, "for my country when I remember that God is just."

Men's thoughts may influence, but do not always fully control their actions. One may have the thoughtful convictions that a thing ought to be done, yet fail to do it for fear of displeasing, a displeasure which might result in the loss of votes at an election, or a position in a counting-room or reputation in society. Citizenship like this is weak and an obstacle to progress and good government. When we contemplate how much good citizenship can do for our nation's welfare, and the opportunities for its thorough and effective works, we are appalled and pained as we see it hesitate in local issues and lie silent in national campaigns. Mathew Arnold, when on this side of the Atlantic, was asked if he did not think that our country was great. "No" he replied. "I call it vast, you have not equaled your opportunities. "A profound truth," says one, commenting on this remark. "Individuals and nations are great when every opportunity has been used to reach the highest possible development. This will be when every citizen feels his responsibilities deep enough to move him to do his part in the conduct of the nation's affairs, though part of it be the casting of the ballot for the nominating of the ward alderman.

The citizenship which bears marks of the heavenly desires a free ballot and honest count, and men who regard their solemn and sacred oath of office of more importance than the personal interests of the voters who elected them. An old Greek has wisely said, "The character of a city"—as well a town—"is shown in the character of the men chosen to govern it." The truth is, that there is in every community a broad and fertile field for a working citizenship, to readjust and formulate civil laws, purify local politics, reform social conditions and enhance the just claims of education and religion.

These are some of the characteristics of a citizenship that is needed to be manifested in each of our individual lives—one which has been touched by the spirit of the poet who lived not only for his loved ones and heaven, but also:

"For the wrong that needs resistance,
For the cause that lacks assistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do."

Those of you who have visited the historic town of Plymouth have doubtless stood before the statue of Faith, with one hand pointing to heaven and the other holding an open Bible, and you also probably noted the four figures, emblematic of education, liberty, law and morality, which surround it. Here is exhibited a type of exalted citizenship, one which considers heaven as a final resting for ever soul, where its virtues will be rewarded and where its sins will be punished—also one which regards the Bible as a safe guide to keep it from the byways of error and sin, and in the way which leadeth to joy, peace and righteousness. Yes! A citizenship which emphasizes education of man, liberty of action, law abiding in conduct and morality in life.

This is no fanciful picture, nor dream of the imagination, but the real sketch of a true citizen—one who is able to weave out of the depth of his Christian soul the useful fabric of a working, honorable, and pious life. We need to be, each of us, this kind of a citizen; for as we take up the telescope and view our national and local skies we see clouds of peril which will burst with unrelentless fury upon our land as did slavery unless they are dissipated and the storms averted by stateman-like considerations in our halls of legislation and wise thought and actions in municipal affairs.

"A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith, ready hands.
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinion and a will;
Men who have known * * *
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking."

The memorial seasons as they come and go surely remind us that we want no more war in this fair land of ours, for what is more horrible and heartrending than a battlefield. "Next to defeat," says Wellington, "the saddest thing is victory." The South by defeat was crippled in every department of her life by the rebellion. The North, though victorious, has not as yet freed herself from the terrible pains, nor regained the losses incurred by this national disaster. We of the North gladly forgive our Southern brethren for their morally wrong and rebellious spirit, but so long as memory lasts we cannot forget the stings of this destructive occasion to human life and national prosperity. The past is past, and justice did its perfect work. The future is before us, with all of its splendid opportunities. Now let love render a like perfect service among a united people, marching under one and the same flag. In unison may all sections of our free and independent land pray: "Live on, my own, my native country; shine on, ye stars of love; wave on, thou banner of beauty."

Let us hold in gracious remembrance the lives of the actors in this sad drama of American history. Let us erect monuments, better memorial buildings—that the inspiring story of their services may not cease to lift the coming generations into a more loyal and devoted citizenship.

"Blest are the martyred dead who lie
In holy graves for freedom worn;
Whose storied deeds shall never die
While coming years their circles run."

With the goodly heritage which we have of heavenly citizenship, it becomes grateful, appreciative and duty-loving men and women to be living examples of a working citizenship, one of catholicity in thought, honesty in purpose, and love for Godliness. Our flag of stars and stripes means to us something more than pieces of cloth sewn together. It awakens memories of days long gone which fill our hearts with unspeakable sorrow and joy; moreover it symbolizes the citizenship which we have been enforcing. Concentrate for a moment your thought upon this national banner which we have here before us. Those red stripes symbolize the bloody sacrifice which one will make who loves his country's honor. The strands of white are indicative of the purity of motive which animates every true and loyal countryman. The field of blue represents the overruling power of a Heavenly Father, recognized by all thoughtful and pious freemen; One who rules not only in the blue heavens above but as well in the affairs of men. And the stars are typical of the hope which is cherished by progressive townsmen in the outcome of individual and public life.

May this flag of ours in some measure symbolize our individual citizenship. If so, it will be undoubtedly representative of our public citizenship,—for the latter always bears an resemblance of the former. Let us from this hour, in a more skilled way weave into our warp of daily life the spirit of self-sacrifice, purity of motive, belief in God, and hope in the final triumph of the good and existence after death by "Life's fair stream fast by the throne of God."

"So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to this dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave,
Like one who wraps the Drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

SHE SCARED THE SENTRY.

A story is told by the friends of a certain young New York woman, whose playfulness is understood among her intimates and enjoyed as such may be, when it is modified by a gentlewoman's instinct within the bounds of simple fun. The young prank player was recently abroad, and while walking out in Dresden one day the stolidity of the soldier sentinels, pacing back and forth like automata, attracted her notice.

A sudden impulse seized her to test this cast-iron rigidity, and, waiting till one had passed, she slipped into his little sentry box. When he reached it on his return, marching with measured precision, she suddenly jumped out before him, crying "Boo!" in his very face. The soldier was completely upset at this most unexpected performance and actually dropped his musket and ran away, while the young woman, having thus routed a portion of the German army, walked on demurely and rejoined her friends. The incident, it is said, came to the ears of the German emperor himself, who expressed a wish to meet this extraordinary young woman, but Miss admitted that her desire did not equal his, as she was not sure in quite what light her jesting impulse would be officially regarded.—New York Times.

WHAT IS A GOOD COW WORTH?

"The cow that can make 500 pounds of butter in a year is worth fully $500 as an investment, for her calf if well sired, is worth what it costs to keep the mother a year." At first glance it might seem that this was not true, but when we come to inquire into the business we find that it is true that as a business investment a cow that will make 500 pounds of butter at the average low price of 25 cents a pound would be worth $125, or at 30 cents it would be worth $150. Five hundred pounds is about the yield of four scrub cows, and we only have the one cow to feed, milk and care for generally. Of course she will eat a lot of feed, but that is no object at all; in dairying we use cows to convert feed into milk. As there is just so much butter in a bushel of feed, if we can get out more profitably by feeding it to one cow instead of four, we make that much gain, because in one case we have only one cow to supply with a life ration, while in the other we have three or four.

And there is one other point to which we wish to call attention. If we have a few extra good cows instead of a large lot of average ones, the risk of loss is less by the various diseases to which cows are subject. If we have ten good cows, the losses would in all probability be less in proportion than if we had 20 or 30 average cows, for we could—and no doubt would—give the ten cows more personal attention than the larger lot of the others. It holds good in all cases that we give better care to that which pays us best.

To go back—while we would not advise the purchase of dairy work at $500 a head (though a 500 pound cow is worth it) yet we would advise the purchase of extra good cows at an extra price rather than to buy average cows at an average price. Each one must be governed by his own circumstances in regard to experience in handling cows, making and marketing butter, and all that pertains to first-class dairying, as to what he shall pay for cows, but he must understand one thing plainly, that a cow must be up to a certain standard in order to pay any profit. When she goes beyond that standard she rapidly increases in value until finally we arrive at a cow that will make 500 pounds of butter in a year and be worth as an investment $500.—Thrifty Farmer.

UNPAID MONEY ORDERS.

There is now on deposit in the sub-treasury of New York city more than $3,000,000, representing outstanding money orders, and of this amount more than $2,000,000 represents money orders which are overdue.

Ten years ago Congress made an appropriation to pay the salaries of ten clerks who were to be employed to check up the books of the money order office, and also to prepare a list of the money orders which had not been presented for payment. The authors of this scheme were confident that if it were carried out that at least the owners of this large sum could be traced and the money refunded to them.

But owing to a false economy it failed to pass, and was heard of no more. Only one clerk is now employed checking up unpaid money orders in a little room on the top floor of the post office building in this city, and he is now working on orders issued in 1871. At this rate he calculates that he may catch up with his work in twenty years, but by that time most of the owners of the money will be dead and their heirs or executors very hard to find.

Now the rule is that when a money order advice has been on file in the post office for thirty days without being called for the postmaster who issued the order is notified, and is required to reply whether the order has been repaid; and if so, on what date. If the order has not been repaid, the payee is twice notified that his money has not been called for. Owing to this system nothing short of sheer neglect or carelessness will allow the money to go into Uncle Sam's strong box.

In the six months of 1892-3 $7,832,671 passed through the money order office in this city, and only thirty-three cents in that time remained uncalled for. The money was sent by a large firm in Connecticut, who were again and again notified before they called for their money. This shows the system now in use is a vast improvement over the old.—New York Press.

STEAMERS' COAL BILLS.

A paragraph has been going the rounds of our exchanges to the effect that an "ocean racer" burns about $13,000 worth of coal every trip. Very little calculation will show how extravagant this statement is. The American liner New York consumes about 328 tons per day, the White Star liner Teutonic about 316 tons, and the Cunard Etruria 330 tons per day at full speed. It has been stated that the Etruria at a speed of 18 knots burns only 275 tons per day. This consumption would send the greyhounds across with a total use of about 2000 tons in round figures. The price of coal in New York is considerably less than $4 per ton, and in Liverpool it is cheaper than here, but even at outside figures the cost of fuel per trip, it will be seen, does not exceed $8000, and we would not be surprised to find the actual average price paid to be less than $6000.

The fuel bills of such ships are of course far in excess of those of the average ocean steamer. Triple-expansion engines and improved machinery of the present day have made it possible to so economize coal that the consumption per indicated horse-power per hour has been reduced in ratio to much less than two pounds as against nine pounds in 1836 and 5½ pounds, in 1840. The Teutonic's average is quoted at 1.6 pounds per hour. The majority of ocean steamers of ordinary size traveling at an easy gait think a ton of coal per hour is quite extravagant for the propulsion. Our big new war ship Iowa will have a bunker capacity for only 2000 tons of coal to speed her at 16 knots, the Indiana's bunker capacity will be 1800 tons, the 3000-ton cruiser Cincinnati's bunker capacity will be only 556 tons, and the crack Japanese ship Yoshino with a speed of 23 knots, has bunkers to hold only 1000 tons. It is doubtful if the bunkers of any steamer afloat would hold $13,000 worth of coal if bought in New York.—Marine Journal.

SHE SENT HIM A NOTE.

Of course she was provoked when he passed her on the street without stopping to speak to her. He lifted his hat, it is true, but she recalled the time when he would have turned and walked several blocks with her, no matter how pressing his business. Hadn't they been sweethearts a few years before? Why should the fact that they had not met for three years so change him? Ought he not to be the more pleased to see her?

The more she thought of it the more she felt that he should have paid her some little attention, if only for the sake of old times, and when she reached home she was so angry that she resolved to make him repent his slight.

The next day he received the following:

"Mr. Filkins:—I believe you have a photograph of me—one that I gave you several years ago in a moment of girlish folly. I have since regretted that I was thoughtless in such matters. I will esteem it a favor if you will return the photograph at your earliest convedience. ETHEL DEANE."

She held that it was a cutting note, and that it would bring him to his senses if anything would. She told her best friend that she had brought him up with a round turn, but she didn't tell her best friend anything about the following reply which she received:

Miss Deane:—If you insist, of course I will do as you wish, but it will be a great deprivation to the baby. The little fellow is passionately fond of pictures, and for nearly six months the photograph of you has been regarded as his especial property. Still, my wife says she will take it away from him if you really need it. Very truly,
ALBERT FILKINS."

She didn't send for it. She didn't even bow to him when she next met him on the street. She didn't do anything except wonder when he was married and why she was so foolish. —Chicago Tribune.

"WORTH A GUINEA A BOX." SOLD ALL OVER THE WORLD.

TASTELESS—SOLUBLE.

In many towns where this wonderful medicine has been introduced, and given a fair trial, it has abolished the family medicine chest, and been found sufficient to cure nine-tenths of the ordinary complaints incident to humanity; and when diseases of months and years are thus removed or palliated in a few days, it is not surprising that Beecham's Pills should maintain their acknowledged popularity in both hemispheres. They cost only 25 cents, although the proverbial expression is that they are "worth a guinea a box," for one box will oftentimes be the means of saving more than one guinea in doctor's bills. They

The above articles will be distributed, by counties, among parties who chew SPEAR HEAD Plug Tobacco, and return to us the TIN TAGS taken therefrom.

We will distribute 226 of these prizes in this county as follows:

To THE PARTY sending us the greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS from this county we will give.....1 GOLD WATCH.
To the FIVE PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each, 1 OPERA GLASS....5 OPERA GLASSES.
To the TWENTY PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 POCKET KNIFE.....20 POCKET KNIVES.
To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 ROLLED GOLD WATCH CHARM TOOTH PICK.....100 TOOTH PICKS.
To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 LARGE PICTURE IN ELEVEN COLORS.....100 PICTURES.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DON'T SEND ANY TAGS BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1894.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Is superior to all other preparations claiming to be blood purifiers. First of all, because the principal ingredient used in it is the extract of genuine HONDURAS sarsaparilla root, the variety richest in medicinal properties. Also, because the yellow dock, being raised expressly for the Company, is always fresh and of the very best kind. With equal discrimination and care each of the other ingredients are selected and compounded. It is

THE Superior Medicine

Because it is always the same in appearance, flavor, and effect, and, being highly concentrated, only small doses are needed. It is, therefore, the most economical blood purifier in existence. It makes food nourishing, work pleasant, sleep refreshing, and life enjoyable. It searches out all impurities in the system and expels them harmlessly by the natural channels. AYER'S Sarsaparilla gives elasticity to the step, and imparts to the aged and infirm renewed health, strength and vitality.

Cures CATARRH

Cures SCROFULA

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Nature Kindly Covers All.

Greenly grows the grass and grain
O'er the graves of heroes slain;
Sings the bird at dawn of day
Above the tombs of Blue and Gray,
And flowers are smiling o'er the sod
Where once the foot in carnage trod;
The leaf is lovelier than the pall,
And nature kindly covers all.

Sun and moon and stars look down
On many a busy, thriving town
Once shelled and battered by the guns
Of conquering, valiant, vanished ones.
Runs the stream in silver flood
That once was red with human blood;
Sleeps Absalom by mighty Saul,
And nature kindly covers all.

This garden where the blushing rose
Her fair face to the morning shows,
Was once, alas! the unconscious scene
Of conflict bitter, sharp and keen.
The violet in the valley blooms
All fragrant o'er forgotten tombs;
The vine spreads over fort and wall,
For nature kindly covers all.

Comfort take my thoughtful muse,—
The land once red with Waterloos
Is now a nation great and free,
All smiling green from sea to sea.
The Union flag, with stars besprent,
Waves over a wide continent,
May never state star from it fall
While nature kindly covers all.

—Moses Teggart.

A KISS.

Miss Myrtoun had not gone to the review that afternoon because of a cold she had caught at Mrs. Lewthwaite's garden party, standing on a damp path while Lord John Ainslie proposed to her. She had a mind to be vexed about it.

"Indeed, Jack, you must not be so careless another time," she said to him when he came to ask after her. "Do you know you've never yet chosen a really comfortable and wholesome spot? That evening in the Coliseum was nearly the death of me, and you gave me malaria down in Surrey. Don't do it again please, until I say 'ready.'"

Lord John looked at her, burst out laughing, and fell more in love with her than ever.

"I'm afraid I am always too far gone for deliberation, Mary," he answered, sweetly, "but I'll try to lay it out more hygienically next time. It's a great shame you have to give up the review. I wanted you to see Henry."

Lord John was the only person in the world who called her Mary, besides her grandmother, and she rather liked him for it. To all the rest she was Hyacinth.

How quiet the square was! Of course all London had gone to the parade, and at the first roll of the drums she began to wish that she had bundled her throat up and gone herself, after all, and she dropped her book and ran to the window craning her neck to look down to the park. Yes, she could see them very well—the red coats, the white helmets, the arms flashing in the sun and the arching heads of the horses as the Guards paced by. She threw open the window and stepped out upon the balcony. The square was quite deserted, but the crowd stood black along the street where the troops were passing, every man and woman cheering, the handkerchiefs and hats fluttering and waving, and, oh, the swell of the music as it reached Hyacinth's ears!

"Good-bye, good-by," she whispered, with an exultant sob. And still the solid ranks marched on, huzza upon huzza greeting them all; and now a regiment of blue-coated cavalry wheeled into sight, and Miss Myrtoun narrowed her eyes to see more clearly. "I am sure those are Harry Ainslie's men." But the faces were only a blur in the distance, and one officer just like another as they sat erect in their saddles. And this was the end. The last drum and fife, the last flag had gone by, the crowd began to dissolve, and with a final lingering glance she came back into the room.

"That horrible, horrible Soudan!" she murmured, closing the window.

She was trembling a little with excitement and fatigue of standing and threw herself down among the cushions of a lounge for a rest, and a doze if might be. She picked up her book again and almost forgetting herself in the ever-enjoyable trials of Burgo and Lady Glencora, was idling and quieting deliciously, when the rich pervasive strain of a band was borne on the air once more, and this time it was playing "The Girl I Left Behind Me." The dear, dear old tune! She could not read for quickening her ears to hear it. It came nearer and louder; gay and brave it sounded, yet with a heart-breaking note in it. It was passing the very square now and she sat up to listen. And at this moment, through all the jubilant trumpeting, she caught another sound, the ring of horses' feet coming down the street and stopping at her door. She sprang to look out, but could not see for the balcony, and paused, startled. "Who can it be? I know no one who would come now." The butler bowed at the treshold.

"What is it, Maxwell?"

"Captain Ainslie asks if you can see him for a moment, miss?"

"Captain Ainsle? Oh, yes; show him up at once, Maxwell." And she stood waiting and wondering while the jangling spurs came up the stairs and Captain Ainslie entered.

He was splendid with gold lace and plumes, glittering epaulets and orders, and bore himself superbly; but his face was lividly pale and his fingers trembled where they gripped his sword hilt. Hyacinth took in the gallant show of his appearance and would have welcomed him with some laughing flattery if his pallor and strange intentness of manner had not struck her dumb. He closed the door and came straight toward her, while she watched him with round questioning eyes, like a child's. Standing very close he seized her hands, and bent a look upon her which was sharp and strained with emotion, and yet piteously entreating.

"I am going away," he said, in a harsh, hurried voice. "Won't you give me a kiss, Hyacinth, before I go?"

Give him a kiss! Miss Myrtoun was a young woman of the world—of a very gay world indeed—and some of her friends had said of her that she would stop at nothing, but the truth was that never in her life since she could remember had she kissed any man but her grandfather and her Uncle James. There had been no brothers nor cousins to claim her caresses as a familiar right, and to lovers who implored for them she had been as cold as a stone. And now who was this bold young officer who dared beseech for such a favor? He was Jack Ainslie's brother. She had vague remembrances of play with him in old childish days; and she had seen him of late here and there at reviews; in hall rooms, a tall silent fellow, and had never spoken a hundred words to him in her life. A kiss! She wondered that she did not break from him in a rage. But she did not; she left her hands in his, and made no movement of reproach. It was because she was in a gentle mood that day; because he was going away, and because he loved her—his eye were telling her that, and the touch of his hands. Ainslie drew his breath hard while the girl gazed at him, hesitating. She saw the anguish in his drawn face; a sudden memory of the boy's lonely motherless life came to her, and the tender cadence of the melody enwrapped her very soul; he raised herself a little on her tiptoes, and held up her beautiful mouth frankly and freely to him. With a broken, passionate exclamation, the man clasped her in both his arms and set his lips to hers in a kiss so prolonged and so imperative that Hyacinth swayed under it. Then he whispered, hoarsely, "God bless you for this!" and loosening his hold of her as if it were a renunciation he must force his every nerve and fibre to, he turned and left her. But Hyacinth did not see him go, and only heard confusedly the stamping of the horses as he mounted and rode away with his orderly, for she was standing in a daze, her eyes brimming with tears, and the room was dim to her. She put up her fingers softly to her lips, a burning tide of color flooded her cheeks and forehead, and she buried her face in the cushions. Fainter and fainter the music was dying in the distance.

"You're not looking well; you're feverish," her grandmother said when she came in. "It isn't good for you to be moping here all by yourself."

And was a kiss such an uncanny thing that it should have the power to haunt one like a ghost? Hyacinth did her best to exorcise it with scorn and indifference, but it was no use; the ghost would not be laid, and came creeping back just as she thought she had rolled a stone upon it heavy enough and commonplace enough to keep it down. And the stone would be something like this:—

"It was a perfectly natural thing to do. Grandmother knows him very well, and he was lonely at going away, and he recollected me when I was a little girl, and it was very sisterly and kind of me to kiss him goodbye."

Then the ghost would steal a little nearer, the girl's drooping eyes grow luminous, and through closed lips she could see him enter, and would hear the deep vibrating voice again, and then—oh, then came the heaven and the shame of it, for she would feel his lips and his enfolding arms, a slow little smile would tingle at her mouth, and a glow suffuse her very being. Instantly she curled her lip at herself in the glass:—

"So you were only waiting for somebody with epaulets and spurs to ask you for a kiss, you common little thing! You've got the soul of a nursery maid, I'm sorry I can't cut your acquaintance." But the scorn in turn would merge into a companionable thought of him. Was he, perhaps, in the same straits? Did the thought of that kiss haunt him as it did her? Then a venomous imp of the brain would prick her with the thought, "Perhaps he thinks slightingly of you; the kiss was lightly asked and lightly valued; he may be laughing in his sleeve at you now." But this was the last resource of the tormenting imp, and caused only a moment's cringe, for the very light of truth had been in those clear eyes, the very stamp of a chivalrous and loyal personality upon Ainslie's every word, and look, and movement, and in her heart of hearts she knew that she trusted him absolutely.

Lord John had come in the very day after the sailing of the troops, and talked most affectionately about his brother. "I'm awfully cut up about his going," he said. "I've been able to do so little for the boy. He's off there in the country with Uncle Spencer, and we've been almost like strangers until just lately, when he's been stopping with me, and I've grown immensely fond of him. He is a reserved sort of chap, but he's got uncommon force of character. Uncle Spencer adores him, you know. He is such a shy fellow that I suppose he hasn't spoken half a dozen words to you this spring, Mary?"

"I've seen very little of him," Miss Myrtoun answered, calmly. Then the next moment she asked, apropos of an azalea show Lord John was talking about: "Of course it is very hard for you to have him go. Is there any chance of your hearing from him for a long time?"

"Oh yes," said Lord John, "he will send a word or two from Gibraltar, I fancy, or Alexandria, and perhaps again later on if there comes a chance, but we've never been much at writing to each other."

That was enough. So the ship would stop at Gibraltar, and that was a matter of six days, and a letter posted at once might be back in England within another three days. But would he write? The ninth day answered the question duly, for when Hyacinth came in from a late drive there was a little pile of letters lying upon her desk, and the one on top bore a clear postmark of Gibraltar. She snatched it up, and her fingers hurried as if to tear it open, but all at once she stopped, and laid it down very evenly, and turned to her dressing table, and began taking out her bonnet pins and unfastening her veil with the nicest deliberation. She dusted her bonnet tidily and put it in its box, and ruffled and tousled her bang about into a charming state of disorder, and next she took off her gown and put herself into an old and sympathetic wrapper, rolled a chair and footstool up to the fire, pulled the logs into place with painstaking judgment, and at last sat herself down, and lazily gathered her letters together. The foreign one fell into the middle of the heap now, and had to take its turn, and wait until the others had been attended to. Then it was cleanly cut apart with a nice little paper knife, and devoured in a dozen glances of those lovely, eager eyes:—

MY DEAREST LOVE: Do you forgive me? The gentle pity in your face as you looked upon me the other day comes back to comfort and reassure me, but again I have a wretched thought that I may have vexed you, and this overwhelms me. Let me tell you now. I have loved you with every pulse of my heart, and every aspiration of my soul since those days you were at Dunham a year ago. Have you forgotten? The first evening I saw you you were in the drawing-room with all the others, and you spoke to me of the old friendly tie between our people, and wondered if I remembered how we used to fight the stone lions at Shepley, and at the first note of your voice and lilting of your eyes I loved you. You were gone in a day or two, but you staid with me. Then I was living for the spring, that I might be with you again, but seeing you in the confusion or your London world, it has seemed to me as if you were in the midst of a dazzling fog that obscured all the realities of life, and that I could not penetrate it, though it veiled you from me. And so perhaps Fate did me a kind turn, after all, when she sent me off so suddenly, for now if I die it will be with a memory in my heart and on my lips that makes both life and death a mystery of joy.

"You know we got our sailing orders the day before our leaving, and I was counting upon seeing you at Jack's little farewell gathering after the review. But when you were not there the world seemed to come to a halt; and then every impulse within me impelled me to you. I was beside myself with longing and loneliness, and the boon which your compassion prompted you to grant me I shall bless you for to the end of my days. There was never a devotee more filled with reverence, with lowly abasement before some undeserved mercy from heaven.

"In writing to you now with the spell of your presence upon me, and with the thought of what may happen that would make these my last words to you, I cannot name you otherwise than what you are to me,—my love, my light.

"May God bless you, my beautiful and beloved lady, and pour upon you the pure peace and happiness which belong to your sweet life.

"Faithfully and always yours,
"HENRY SPENCER AINSLIE."

If grudging old Mother Nature had bestowed the gift of second sight upon lovers divided by distance, the balance of delight and disappointment in the world would undoubtedly remain the same; but in Ainslie's case, could be have had a vision of Hyacinth that May afternoon as she read his letter, the proportion of his content would have been almost too great for any load of after-sorrow to outweigh it. He was riding with the army across the desert of the Soudan, monotonous, baking, searing to the eye and brain; aimless, scrappy fighting had been going on all day, and it was neither a glorious nor an inspiring business. Nor was he serene in his own right. He saw no reason to hope of gaining the girl he loved, and doubted lest he had made too rash a move and lost his chances for good. Now, if only a mirage had danced before his sight in the shimmering air, and shown him the girl he loved, as she sat with arms lifted drowsily above her head, and such a winning coquetry alight in all her face!

"How tall he was! How strong he was! What steady eyes! Why did I never know him before? How is it that I know him so well now?" The fire-light flickered; the twilight gathered; the girl dreamed on; and when she rose she was humming a snatch from Marguerite's song:—

"Sein hoher Gang,
Sein' edle Gestalt,
Seines Mundes Lacheln,
Sein' Augen Gewalt,

"Und seiner Rede
Zauberfluss,
Sein Handedruck"—

And then the refrain sang out; and her voice was low, but clear, and thrilling sweet:—

"Und, ach, sein Kuss?

But poor Ainslie was plodding on, worn, hot, and racked with the bitterness of impotent suspense.

Miss Myrtoun and her grandmother had never gone through a gayer London season, and Hyacinth had never been a more brilliant figure of beauty and triumph. At balls, at dinners, at fetes of all kinds her fair face showed up with its radiant smile and quick glances. Even her grandmother took to flattering her upon her appearance. The interest she showed in Egyptian affairs delighted the old lady, too, for she herself came of a military family, and her granddaughter's lack of enthusiasm about such matters had always been a disappointment to her. But now Hyacinth read the Times to her by the hour;—how the troops were ordered here, and massing there, General Lord Wolsley sent out in command, and the mahdi gathering hosts of followers, and so on, and so on.

"I wonder why Jack Ainslie didn't go into the army, grandmamma?" she asked.

"Oh, my dear! Of course not," answered the old lady. "You know as well as I do, that oldest sons never do. It was proper for Henry to go. And John Ainslie couldn't possibly fight, either."

"You've known them both since they were boys, granny?"

"Since they were little chaps in sashes and shoulder knots. Their father was one of my oldest friends. Nice little chaps they were, too. Henry was such a dear boy. I've seen a great deal of him every year down at Shepley, when you were with your Uncle James. He has always been so good about coming to see me, and dear old General Spencer never tires of telling me about him, and of his pride in him, and plans for him. I meant to have him a great deal at the house this spring, but it hasn't seemed to come to pass, and you never seemed to take to him particularly."

Hyacinth wondered afterward that among all the fancies of those fleet days she had had no moment of concern for Ainslie's safety. She thought of him always as masterful, resolute, successful. The domination of his individuality so impressed itself upon her that to picture its force as arrested or struck down never occurred to her. Thus it was a blinding blow when one morning early in August a servant of Lord John's came, with a troubled letter from his master to say that he had just received a cable from Alexandria. Henry was badly wounded in the shoulder, and had been sent home immediately on a ship just then returning. The ship was due that very day—his friend had delayed cabling on purpose—and he was starting at once for Portsmouth to bring him up to London. "Henry led the charge," said the last line, "which won the day." Poor Hyacinth! She lived through such a tumult of emotion during the next four-and-twenty hours that her pulses were like a throbbing engine within her, beating her to exhaustion with its throes. What should she do? What did she want to do? She had not thought that the decisive time would come so soon; but now she knew with an undoubting premonition that Ainslie would come to her at once, and her brain was in a whirl. Finally, from sheer weariness of thinking and feeling, she deliberately let go the helm and tried to gain time and rest by letting herself float listlessly upon the waves of excitement and doubt that seemed surging about her. She was numb and tired, and incapable of judgment, and to be purposeless as a fatalist for a little while would be a blessed ease.

On the following day a note was brought her. It only said:—

"HYACINTH: I am in London. My wound is recovered sufficiently for me to be about. Have you anything to say to me? Yours always, H. S. AINSLIE."

To Hyacinth it was as if an aching strain were suddenly eased when she read the little note. The turmoil within her quieted and the storm rolled away. She held the slip tight in her hand. A party of people were lunching with her, and she was pledged to some engagement with them afterward.

"Pardon me for a moment while I answer this," she said, and sat down without any assurance of what she was going to say, but at once the words seemed to flow of themselves.

"DEAR CAPTAIN AINSLIE" (she wrote): "We are so glad that you are at home again and well. My grandmother is away for the day and I have an engagement for the next three hours, but I shall be at home at five o'clock.
Very sincerely yours,
MARY HYACINTH MYRTOUN."

She glanced it over while the talking and laughing went on about her, laughing herself and joining in some joking fun, and then just before she folded it she took up the pen again and added a few scrawling words:—

"Why should I not tell you now? I am yours utterly—with all the love of my heart.
HYACINTH."

Never did she forget the blissful waiting of that afternoon; the way the sunshine engoldened the air, the smooth freshness of the breeze, the perfume of the shrubs in the park, the bright looks of the people, as she drove home alone through a beautiful, happy world of her own. She would not have had the moments hurried for a gift of treasure. To her enchanted senses they seemed to pass with as tender a grace as the petals of a flower fall. Still, as one walking in a strange but dreamed-of place, with suave yet hesitating movement and smiling, half-shut eyes, she went into the drawing room to await her lover.

There was the window, the balcony, the lounge where she had rested and heard the band, the door through which he had come to her. And then Hyacinth remembered, and was glad that she wore the very dress. Would he notice it? Would those gray eyes gaze down upon her with the same yearning, absorbing gaze as on that day? Oh, she would be true to him! She would grant him every gracious gift a woman holds in her keeping for the man she loves, and he should see that though she had given her faith impulsively, it would not lack in every steadfast quality he might hope for. She knew this stranger as she had never known any one before, and she could not be shy, for love had cast out every other thought but love, and would prompt the words and looks that would please him best, and best convince him of the enduring truth of the miracle it had worked for him in her heart. Ah, surely he would not be late?

At twenty minutes before five Captain Ainslie was announced.—Mary A. Denison, in Harper's Weekly.

THEIR HONEYMOON.

It was a perfect night. The silvery moonlight flooded all the familiar landscape, bathing it in mystic depths of unfathomable brightness, and transfiguring all things into a fairy-like beauty. A beautiful night—a night of stars and fleecy cloudlets, and soft, sweet odors from a thousand pungent leaves and fragrant flowers distilled by the silent dews.

Olive and Janet had gone upstairs to their little room, and now sat upon the floor beside the low window looking out into the moonlight. On such a night sleep was out of the question for an hour, at least, and so they sat, slowly unfastening their hair and gradually preparing for bed.

A murmur of familiar voices in the little porch below sounded upon their ears, and hushed them to silence. They leaned together on the window-sill and listened. The sisters knew the voices well—the dear voices of father and mother. They had come out into the porch before going to bed, and were sitting upon the old time-worn bench there, looking at the calm, clear night. The sisters could imagine just how they were sitting, though they could not see them, the dear old mother with her wrinkled hand on her husband's knee, and his broad, homely hand covering it; they had seen them so often. "Darby and Joan," Janet called them, lovingly.

"Mother," they could hear the old man say, and there was a little tremble in his voice, "it's most fifty year since we was married—do you mind? Next week a Wednesday 'll make it fifty year. Mebby we'd oughter have a golden weddin' to kind o' celebrate—what think, mother?"

"Twould be nice, father," they could hear her answer, "but I guess we hadn't better think of it; 'twould make an awful sight of bother; an' what with Olive teachin' an' Janet to do all the work with what little I could help, 'twould make it pretty hard. Guess we hadn't better, father."

There was a little silence, and then the old man spoke again.

"Hanner, said he, "we didn't never have a weddin' journey nor a honeymoon. Almost seems 's if we oughter have one now. You know how 'twas—we was poor an' couldn't even afford to go out to Uncle Eben's for a little trip, but settled right down to housekeepin' an' hard work at once, without a bit o' play spell. In all these years we ain't been nowhere to speak of, except to the Centennial, an' we didn't either of us really enjoy that, what with the rush an' crowd an' confusion. Seem 's if 'twould be nice to go 'way somewheres now on our weddin' journey—seem 's if 'twould make us feel young again, somehow."

"'Twould be nice, father," they could hear the gentle old voice murmur, "but I guess we hadn't better think of it. Mebbe the children would think 'twas kind o' childish."

"Mebbe they would, mother," the old man answered quietly, and then there was silence. After a little while they went into the house, and the girls could hear them lock the door and wind the clock, then all was still.

Something glistened in Olive's great, dark eyes, and the moonlight touched to crystal clearness a drop upon Janet's fair cheek. The two girls crept into bed and lay talking in low voices for a long time before they went to sleep.

For the next few days there were busy preparations in the old farmhouse. Mysterious doings were going on all over the house. Mother was bustled off somewhere every day to visit some friend or neighbor in the vicinity, who gladly welcomed the dear, kind soul, and her perpetual knitting work.

Father and "the boys," stalwart men of twenty-five and thirty, were busy in field and orchard doing up the fall work. Janet worked away happily all day, and when at four o'clock Olive came home from the little, red-painted, district schoolhouse, she donned a big apron, put on her thimble, and went resolutely to work in her room upstairs. Evidently something was in the air.

Wednesday morning dawned bright and clear, with that indescribable crispness and sparkle in the air that makes October such a royal month.

Olive had asked the trustee for the day, and he had granted it willingly. Janet, looking like an apple blossom in her pink calico gown and snowy white apron, flitted about the house on light feet, seeming to be everywhere at once.

John and David were wrestling with their Sunday neckties, and polishing their boots to the very highest possible shine.

The old folks looked on wistfully but silently, wondering what all the commotion was about.

Out in the woodshed father confided to mother this piece of news: "I guess the children must be going over to Millersville to the county fair. But it does seem kind o' cur'ous they don't speak about it."

"That's so," mother had made response, "but mebbe they think we're gettin' too old to be took in their affairs," and she sighed a little tremulous sigh that told plainer than words the sadness she felt.

Almost simultaneously Olive's clear contralto and John's deep bass came ringing down the stairs. "Mother, please come up here a few minutes!" and "Here, father, I want you upstairs a little while!"

Wondering a little but never guessing, they went upstairs together, and in the hall parted. What mother saw as she entered her daughter's room was a shining, silvery mass of something lying on the neat, white bed, a soft and silky pile of material which gradually took form and shape until she saw a beautiful gown whose delicate laces in neck and sleeves, combined with the soft gray tint, made it look bride-like indeed.

"Oh, girls!" was all she could say, as Janet put her into a chair and began to take down her little coil of white hair.

"Dressing the bride" occupied perhaps an hour, and when at last the toilet was pronounced complete, the faded blue eyes behind the gold-bowed glasses saw in the large, old-fashioned mirror a sweet and dainty picture—a beautiful-faced old lady with delicate heliotrope nestling among the laces at her throat and a dainty spray at her hair.

A faint, pink flush of excitement had come to the withered cheeks, which made the old face a sweet history of what it had been in its youthful prime. Olive and Janet kissed her triumphantly.

"Mother, you don't realize how sweet and young you look! You have worn black so long!" And "Oh, mother, we're going to have a wedding in this house to-day, and you are to be the bride!"

"Fifty years ago to-day," the old bride softly murmured, looking down at the thin circlet of gold that she had worn so long, and in her heart a sudden longing sprang up, newly, kindly, a quick and strong desire for him who had been her husband all these years.

FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 9, 1893.

EDWIN BOOTH, the greatest of American tragedians, died Tuesday night.

THE Republicans have renominated McKinley for governor of Ohio, emphatically endorsing the McKinley act.

MASSACHUSETTS gets another consular appointment, Francis H. Underwood being sent to the position at Leith, Scotland.

ANOTHER large battleship, the mate of the New York, which has just been accepted, is to be launched to-morrow. It will be called the Massachusetts.

IT is to be regretted that the wide tire bill has been killed in the Senate. The enforcing of its provisions would have done much to give the state better roads.

EVIDENTLY the "Blawsted Britishers" take kindly to Uncle Sam's domain, as it is said the British war ships that attended the recent naval review in New York harbor lost 101 men by desertion.

The Senate has laid itself liable to sharp criticism in defeating, yesterday, the bill to prevent the watering of the stock or bonds of gas and electric light companies. The Senate has not made an enviable record for itself during the past few weeks.

AN unusual occurrence is that of a Miss Wilcox, who, after ten years in a nunnery renounced her vows in order to marry. Another peculiar fact is that her mother alternated between two husbands, divorcing and marrying them in turn, twice each.

AN Ohio woman sues for a divorce because during the thirty-four years of her married life her husband has never allowed her to enter a store and has only bought her one new bonnet. With a woman's meekness she has stood it all these years, but rebels at last.

IT looks as if the World's Fair would be closed on Sunday, as two judges of the court have decided that the contract with the government would be violated if the gates were opened, and granting the injunction asked for. One of the judges is of the opposite opinion.

GOVERNOR RUSSELL has evidently provided for Irving B. Sayles, his oft-rejected nominee for saving bank commissioner of Massachusetts, he having been appointed national bank examiner by the controller of the currency. It is expected that he will be eventually assigned to duty in Massachusetts.

THE trial of Lizzie Borden for the murder of her father and stepmother at Fall River is on at New Bedford, having commenced on Monday. But little has been brought out as yet that is new, and the developments are being anxiously watched by thousands of people. The prisoner is ably defended by ex-Gov. Robinson.

ALL charges of murder, etc., against H. C. Frick and others of the Carnegie Steel Company, as well as the Pinkerton detectives, were dropped in the court at Pittsburg last Saturday, and all strikers who have been arrested have been released on their own recognizance. This virtually ends the cases, and they will probably never be heard of again.

THERE has been quite a flurry in western banking circles since the downfall of Zimri Dwiggins and his four-score banks, and now a reaction has come in the real estate boom at Chicago, where the number of buildings erected are all out of proportion to the probable number of visitors, and more banks are tumbling. Several have suspended this week.

A NEW use for the bicycle has been found by the Holyoke police, two officers having been mounted on wheels and given a long stretch of territory to patrol which had not been any too well covered. The work was well done, the ground being gone over much oftener than it would be possible to do it on foot, while the absence of noise enabled the officers to approach close to persons before being discovered.

ILLINOIS comes in for unenviable notoriety in the lynching, at Decatur last Saturday, of a negro accused of assaulting two white women. Twenty-five men walked into the city of 22,000 inhabitants, broke open the jail and overpowered the guards, took the victim out and hanged him to a telegraph pole in front of the jail yard. Governor Altgeld has called upon the officers of the law to do all in their power to apprehend the guilty parties, and has offered a reward of $200 each for their coviction.

IT is probable that the murderer of Miss Bertha Manchester at Fall River last week has been caught in the person of Jose Carreiro, a Portuguese who formerly worked for her father. The officers were looking for him and he gave himself up, strongly protesting his innocence, but some peculiar coins—a trade dollar and a half dollar with a hole in it—which it was known were in the bureau drawer in the murdered girl's room, were found in a store where Carreiro had bought a pair of shoes with them, and as he has told several conflicting stories the officers think they have the right person without doubt.

PRESIDENTIAL booms for 1896 are being started now and then, and among the latest is one for ex-President Harrison by Gen. John C. New, who says that he does not know what Mr. Harrison's feelings are, but that the Indiana Republicans have looked to him as their leader since the death of Oliver P. Morton, and that they would like to see him nominated in 1896, adding that he would make a strong candidate. While Gov. Flower of New York says that "There is no reason why Mr. Cleveland should not be the nominee of the party in 1896. One presidential term has intervened between his administrations. It would take another term before he has served two consecutive terms. If in 1896 Mr. Cleveland desires the nomination of his party no man can successfully stand in his way."

The state auditor of North Dakota says that the treasury of the state is financially embarrassed, and that they will have a deficiency of from $100,000 to $150,000 before another Legislature can convene.

The Ville Marie convent at Notre Dame de Grace, two miles north of Montreal, the largest establishment of the kind on the continent, was burned yesterday morning, the loss being over a million dollars.

Walter Emerson, the well-known cornetist, died very suddenly at his home in Boston last week Thursday evening. The cause of his death was acute peretonitis.

A nine-years-old Springfield boy was instantly killed by an electric car Friday afternoon, making the second death from the same cause in a short time.

Cobb—Goldthwaite.

The marriage of Miss Helen L. Cobb, until recently one of the teachers in the public school, and Luther B. Goldthwaite of Alameda, Cal., was announced to take place in the Congregational church Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and considerably before that time the church was well filled by those who had gathered to see the ceremony. The pulpit platform and the space in front had been prettily filled with hydrangeas, ferns, foliage and potted plants by the King's Daughters, a large white rug occupying the center of the lower platform, on which the couple stood while the ceremony was performed. As the clock struck two the groom accompanied by the best man, his brother, Mr. Allen Goldthwaite, entered the right aisle and advancing took seats at the front. The wedding march rang out from the organ under the manipulation of Mrs. W. A. Weld, and the bridal party entered, the ushers, Messrs. C. G. Gardner, N. W. Chandler, E. S. Gardner and Byron Shanks of Palmer, H. C. Newell of Three Rivers and Charles Holden of Bondsville, leading. They were followed by the bridesmaids, eight in number, members of the King's Daughters—Misses Flora Studley, Phoebe Hastings, Bessie Moore, Bertha Hastings, Jennie Brainerd, Lillian Park, Lottie Bray and Grace Huntley. The bride followed, leaning on the arm of her brother, Luther W. Cobb. She wore a dress of cream cashmere and brocaded silk, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. At the head of the aisle the ushers and bridesmaids stepped to either side and the bride and her brother advanced to meet the groom and best man. Rev. Mr. Jenkins was in waiting on the platform and at once commenced the service, which was with a ring. At its conclusion the wedding march once more sounded from the organ, and Mr. and Mrs. Goldthwaite led the procession from the church. They returned to the home of the bride on Pleasant street, where they received the congratulations of friends for an hour, then took the 3.14 train for a wedding trip in the eastern part of the state. They are expected back in Palmer the first of next week, where they will remain for a few days, then start for Elmira, N. Y., Chicago, and Alameda, Cal., where they will reside, Mr. Goldthwaite being city electrician of Alameda, besides being interested in manufacturing there. The bride was the recipient of many presents, among them being elegant solid silver spoons from the King's Daughters, with whom she had been closely connected.

Yesterday was an unlucky day for show windows. Thompson & Bannister rolled a barrel of flour through one of theirs, and O. P. Allen had one of his smashed by the falling of a large lamp.

Eugene Perkins, who has been fireman of the early morning train north over the Ware River road, has left the road and gone to Providence, R. I., where he has gone into the carriage business with his father.

The regular monthly gathering of the Western Massachusetts Universalist Minister's Meeting will be held in the Universalist church here next Monday. Rev. W. W. Gleason of Warren will read a paper.

Mrs. C. C. Shaw celebrated her 80th birthday at her home on Walnut street yesterday, and during the day many of her friends and acquaintances called on her to offer congratulations. Refreshments were served.

Residents on Main street west of Thorndike were without water from the pipes of the Palmer Water Company Sunday and Monday, a break in the pipe near the residence of A. T. Wing necessitating shutting it off to make repairs.

E. W. Burns, administrator of the estate of his mother, Mrs. Catharine Burns, has brought suit against the city of Springfield for $5000 for the death of his mother, who fell on the sidewalk in that city in January. S. S. Taft is his attorney.

The retail price of beef has been raised from two to three cents a pound within two weeks, being necessitated by an advance of about $3 per hundred in the wholesale price. The advance in the retail price does not quite equal that in the wholesale.

Miss Maud Pasco of Pittsfield, niece of Mrs. J. B. Naylor of Palmer Center and Mrs. George Thayer of Thorndike, was married in Boston May 1st to Harry Whitehouse of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Whitehouse are making their home in Boston for the present.

About 30 members of Adelphi Chapter of the Eastern Star of Springfield came to Palmer Wednesday evening and conferred the degree on 47 persons who have applied for dispensation and a charter. After the work a collation was served in the opera house. The organization is for Masons, their wives, and daughters, and will meet on the first and third Wednesdays in the month. These officers were elected: W. M., Miss Helen L. Robinson; W. P., C. E. Fuller; W. V. M., Mrs. L. M. Grosvenor; secretary, Mrs. D. S. Davis; treasurer, Mrs. Mary A. Royce; conductor, Mrs. E. J. Weld; assistant conductor, Miss Jennie Brainerd. Another meeting will be held next Wednesday evening, when the rest of the officers will be appointed. The name of the chapter is Revere, No. 40.

There was a large audience at the Baptist church Monday evening to hear Rev. O. C. Sargent's illustrated lecture on Japan, which was quite enjoyable. The ladies of the society realized a neat sum from the sale of ice cream and cake before and after the lecture.

Mike Doktor, a Polander who came to this country about 11 months ago and who has been sick with consumption at Three Rivers for the past three months, being cared for by his countrymen as best they could, was sent to the state almshouse at Tewksbury yesterday by the overseers of the poor.

At the regular monthly meeting of the firemen Monday evening M. J. Dawson resigned the position of foreman and J. S. Barrett was elected to the place, W. H. Laird being made first assistant foreman. The New London Northern road will offer extremely low rates of fare to the Twelfth International Christian Endeavor Meeting at Montreal July 5-9, the round trip from Palmer being $11.35, Monson $11.55, Three Rivers $11.20. The tickets will be good going July 4th to 7th, inclusive, and good returning until July 31st, inclusive, with privilege of stopping over at any point en route during the time limit.

Work on the plant of the Palmer Electric Company at Blanchardville has progressed so far that high water has no more fears for the contractors. The dam is completed and the pond has been filled, the water going over the dam Wednesday after the hard rain of the night before. The shafting is nearly all in place, and the work of putting in the wheels is going rapidly forward. It is expected that about July 15th the plant will be ready for use.

Monday and Tuesday were almost unbearably hot, the mercury soaring well up into the nineties. Tuesday afternoon about 4.45 there was a heavy thunder shower, with vivid lightning and terrific thunder, which lasted nearly half an hour, the rain falling in torrents and doing much damage to the highways. The amount of rainfall was unusually large, 1.35 inches. The rain continued to fall all the evening, and since then the weather has been more comfortable.

Among the Churches.

BAPTIST.

Children's Day will be observed next Sabbath at this church. The pastor will preach a special Sermon to the Children in the morning, subject, "The Blessing of Early Piety." In the evening at 7 there will be a concert exercise on "Giving and Serving," by the scholars of the Sabbath school.

ST. PAUL'S UNIVERSALIST.

Rev. Mr. Moulton's sermon to the Grand Army has been printed in pamphlet form.—Rev. V. E. Southworth of the Unitarian church at Ware occupied the pulpit last Sunday in exchange with the pastor.—Next Sunday will be observed as Children's Sunday, and in the morning the pastor will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion, taking for his subject "The Dew of Youth." In the evening there will be a concert by the children of the Sunday school.

There will no doubt be a large attendance from this place at the musicale to be given in the opera house at Palmer on the 16th by Mrs. Helen Warren Auger of Bondsville, assisted by others.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fuller, who live near Forest Lake, have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of their daughter, who died on Monday evening of scarlet fever. The funeral took place Tuesday.

Now that July 4th is close at hand there is talk of a procession of Horribles, together with other attractions. There has been no announcement of any picnics to be held in the village, but in all probability the Catholic church society or the Foresters will hold one.

There is a possibility of having a good base ball club here this season after all, and if all works to the satisfaction of those interested the first game will be played at North Brookfield one week from to-morrow. Games are being arranged between the Westfield, Willimantic, Southbridge and other strong clubs.

Since the appearance of the band in public on Thursday evening of last week they have been receiving many compliments as regards their playing. The band, though quite young, gives promise of being second to none for a place of this size, and with the assistance of the public it cannot but be successful. The instruments are the property of the village; they do not belong to the members; therefore the prospects of having a band in the village for years to come is good. Agent Hobbs of the Thorndike Co. has given the boys every encouragement possible, having recently presented them with a check for $25, and will erect a band stand as soon as time will permit. There are now 18 members, and two more will probably be added.

Ronan—Sullivan.

A very pretty wedding took place in St. Mary's church Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, when Miss Minnie Ronan, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Ronan, and one of Thorndike's prettiest and most popular young ladies, was united in marriage to B. J. Sullivan. The bride was handsomely attired in cream silk and duchess lace; her veil was caught with lilies of the valley, and she carried an ivory prayer book. The maid of honor, Miss Katie Sullivan of Amherst, wore cream with ribbon trimmings and carried the bride's bouquet, consisting of twenty roses. The best man was Thomas Ronan, brother of the bride. The bridesmaids, Misses Margaret Feehan and Sadie Keefe, were becomingly attired in pink silk with pearl trimmings, and carried lilies of the valley. The ushers were James Driscoll and John Sullivan of Springfield, J. W. Murphy of Norwich, Ct., and James Feehan of Ware. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan will spend their honeymoon in Boston. They were the recipients of many presents, among them being:

A chamber set and gold watch and chain from the parents of the bride; antique oak sideboard from the mother of the groom; blue plush rocker, Mr. and Mrs. M. Reilly; old rose plush rocker, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Murphy; basket willow rocker, Mrs. J. Feehan; blue plush rocker, E. W. Keefe, Athol; set of silver knives and forks, Mr. and Mrs. D. O'Brien, Monson; Silver sugar spoon, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Cantwell.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, June 31, 1893.

It was a great victory for the right in the House on Thursday when they voted almost unanimously for the bill of Mr. Lyford of Springfield to deal with the Boston gas ring. The members were for it almost unanimously, and other bills of Messrs. Joy of Winchester and Gallupe of Beverly for a consolidation of the gas companies of Boston, leaving it wholly optional whether to retire the $4,500,000 note, were almost unanimously rejected. It remains to be seen what the Senate will do, for the upper branch had no share in the investigation. There is no doubt that the gas people used every effort to pull a plum out of the very teeth of apparent defeat, and if the bills which were rejected had been passed, then the result of the investigation would have been nothing.

The Senate has referred to the next Legislature the bill to relieve from double taxation certain classes of personal property. This was probably because it is expected that a commission will sit in the recess to revise the taxation laws.

When the 56-hour bill, which passed the House by a good majority, reached the Senate, the opposition was renewed with great force and with such skill as to prove that the manufacturers had not been idle. One of the moves against the bill was a remonstrance from 1300 of the 1600 women operatives in the Waltham watch factory, adding that they preferred 60 hours a week to 58. After a long debate the bill was referred to the next Legislature by a vote of 17 to 13. It is very probable that this matter will be a feature of political agitation, and that elections to the next Legislature will depend upon it. Once more, it will be noticed, the corporations have made their contest in the Senate, which is the smaller body and more easily worked than the House.

The plumbers' license bill has been amended so as not to apply to Boston, which shows either that Boston people are not particular about good plumbing, or that their plumbers are already remarkably good, or that the Boston plumbers had a "pull" on the Senate. The amendment will probably not be enacted.

Many men will keenly regret the defeat of the wide tire bill by the Senate. If Boston had been exempted, it could probably have been saved.

Owing to the explanations in the newspapers of the course of Commissioner Hovey at Chicago in refusing to allow picnic parties to eat their lunch in the Massachusetts Building at the Fair, and the justification of his course, which was not evident in the first hurried report, the Senate has refused to admit the resolutions from the House censuring Mr. Hovey for his course.

The last days of the session reveal what has been really the most important part of it, and that is the strong movement against corporations. This movement is not a labor, nor an agrarian movement, nor does it come from the mass of the people against the corporations, though it has their apparent support and is for their benefit, but it is from the business people, the men of the same class as the managers of the corporations, against whom all the agitation is directed. They are determined that their rivals after wealth shall possess no undue advantage over them. Hence this movement to prevent the consolidation of corporations without the consent of some supervising state board, and to checkmate the efforts to allow foreign corporations to issue securities upon the stock of domestic corporations. Of course these movements will tend to prevent the undue consolidation of wealth, but at the same time they increase the interference of the government with business, and they magnify the work of the state commissions and enhance their importance in the eyes of the people. This is in the face of the constant protest which has been made for years against government commissions. We keep saying we will not have as much of them, and then we continue to create them and to put more and more work into them. Our theory and our practice are all out of joint, and either the theorists (with whom the people have seemed to agree) or the practical men in the Legislature should revise their arguments.

Both branches have agreed to the bill which prohibits any distinction to be made on account of color in barbers' shops and other public places where service is rendered for hire.

Politics has killed the bill for an open space east of the state house. The Republican senators feared it would play too much into the hands of Mayor Matthews.

The session of the Senate Wednesday was remarkable for the strength shown by the bills to prevent watering of the stock of gas and electric light companies, railroads and street railways, and water companies. A report was made by the committee to whom they were referred that they should be sent to the next general court. But, after a long debate, this report was defeated and the bills were ordered to a third reading. In the case of the gas bill, the vote on referring it to the next Legislature was 16 to 16, so closely was the Senate divided. The railroad bill was arranged so as to apply to any securities which have been issued under existing laws.

The House, in the meantime, was showing equal deference to the popular will on the bill to prevent consolidations or leases of railroads or street railways without the consent of the railroad commissioners. The effort to exempt the lease of the Concord and Montreal road to the Boston and Maine, which was permitted this session, failed and, as a sweeping measure, the bill was ordered to a third reading. LANDON.

MONSON.

Brannick—Grogan.

The first of several Monson weddings which are booked for June was solemnized Wednesday at 6 p. m. in St. Patrick's church, the contracting parties being Miss Hannah Brannick of Monson and Mr. James Grogan of Holyoke. Rev. John F. Lee officiated. The bride's gown was of cream-colored cashmere. The skirt had a flounce of silk lace headed with ribbon velvet, and the empire bodice was also lace trimmed. She wore a large white hat and carried roses. A sister of the bride, Miss Kate, was bridesmaid and wore an empire dress of cream-colored serge trimmed with point de Ireland, and also wore a white hat. Mr. Michael Gaegan of Holyoke was best man. A large reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony. The presents, which were many and valuable, included easy chairs, a book-case, tea sets, pictures, silver, etc. The couple will reside in Holyoke.

At the Congregational church next Sunday Rev. F. S. Hatch will preach an appropriate sermon to the children in the morning, and in the evening there will be a Sunday school concert at 6 o'clock.

S. H. Rogers, of the firm of Rogers & Co., was the first to deposit in the Monson National Bank in its new quarters, and Frank Bills was the first one to do business with the savings bank.

John Murphy, Jr., has his safety back from the factory, where he has had pneumatic tires attached. John says he expects flattering offers to ride in a relay race from Hampden to Bondsville July 4th.

The Green street grammar school has prepared a musical and literary programme for next Friday afternoon, beginning at 1.30. A cordial invitation is extended to all parents and friends interested in the school.

W. Colton, manager of the Belden stock farm at Rockville, Ct., spent Thursday with his father, Elmer Colton. Mr. Colton drove a very hard race at Southington, Ct., Wednesday, with one of Mr. Belden's horses, securing a part of the purse, and says he thinks he will drive many to the front before the season closes.

There was a narrow escape from a serious accident last Saturday evening while two men were racing horses on one of the streets of the village. A little child was playing in the street and was seen by neither driver, but fortunately the wife of one of them espied it just in time to speak to her husband and have him pull up his horse, which he did so suddenly that a part of the harness gave away. As it was the carriage just grazed the child's head, but did not hurt it much.

The marriage of Miss Lilla Dutton Whitney, a teacher in the public schools, to Stephen Brown Knowlton is announced to take place the 26th at the residence of the bride. Mr. Knowlton is a graduate of Amherst College and principal of the department of English literature and elocution in Harvard College grammar school, Haverford, Pa. The honeymoon will be spent at the home of the groom's father in Sunset, Me., after which Mr. and Mrs. Knowlton will live in Haverford, where he retains his present position.

Monson readers of the JOURNAL were deprived of a large and interesting amount of news last week by one of those occurrences over which the news editor can have no control but which take place occasionally, though the JOURNAL has been especially fortunate in the past in their non-occurrence. The matter was mailed at the post office in Monson about 3 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, and has not been seen since. Where it is cannot be determined at present, but that it has gone to some other place than its intended destination is apparent. The JOURNAL regrets that a portion of the matter will be stale when it finally turns up, as it is pretty sure to in time, but will endeavor to make the loss good in the coming weeks and to guard more carefully against such occurrences in the future.

The following is a list of the days on which the flags are to be raised over the school houses:—

Jan. 1. Emancipation Proclamation. 1863.
Feb. 12. Lincoln's birthday. 1809.
Feb. 22. Washington's birthday. 1732.

The following are the appointments of school teachers for the term which commences Sept. 5 and ends Nov. 24: Green street school, Miss M. M. Collis, Miss S. H. Walker; No. 1, Miss F. V. Converse, Miss J. V. Cantwell, Miss S. V. Loggie; 8, Miss Bessie Sutcliffe, Miss Mary Gallivan, Miss Minnie Noble; 2, Miss S. B. Walker; 3, Miss Marion Anderson; 5, Miss Joanna Leary; 6, Eva Sutcliffe; 7, not yet filled; 9, Miss Lizzie Maguire; 10, Miss L. R. Lyon; 11, Miss S. E. Goldthwaite; 12, Miss E. J. Bradway; 13, Miss L. M. Howlett; teacher of music, Mrs. H. N. Bacon.

Academy Notes.

Miss Anna Converse and Miss Alice Walker went to South Hadley this week to take entrance examinations.

Miss B. B. B. Smith has resigned her position as preceptress of the Academy, and the position has been offered Miss Ada G. Wing, who is now connected with the institution.

Prof. A. N. Burke is considering an offer from Tabor College, Iowa, to go as instructor in science at an increased salary. His many friends in town will greatly miss him should he decide to accept.

The programme for commencement week is as follows: The annual baccalaureate sermon will be preached to the graduating class Sunday evening, June 18, at 7 o'clock, in the Congregational church by Rev. Dr. Walker of Hartford. Monday, June 19th, examinations 9-12 a. m., 2-4 p. m.; class day exercises at 7 p. m. Tuesday, 20th, graduation exercises in Memorial Hall at 10 a. m., followed by the alumni dinner in the Methodist vestry; Landlord McCarthy of the Monson House will cater; the toastmaster will be John A. Bennett of Boston; in the evening the senior class will hold a reception at 8.30 in the Academy chapel. The Springfield Philharmonic Orchestra of 10 pieces will furnish music for these exercises.

To-morrow the team representing Monson Academy will compete at Amherst for the banner offered by the Amherst College Athletic Association to the winner in the annual meeting of the Western Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association. This association comprises the following schools: Springfield, Holyoke, Westfield, Amherst high, and Monson Academy. Monson now holds the banner, and will make a great try for first place this year. Part of the team will leave the evening before, but most will go Saturday morning. Round-trip tickets can be obtained for 85 cents, which are good from Monson or Palmer on any of the trains, and in return will leave Amherst at 6.15, thereby giving plenty of time to see the games, which will commence promptly at two o'clock. The school colors are blue and white. Two hundred people at least will probably attend the sports from Monson. The entire team, with Trainer Smith of Springfield, were photographed by Gaouette yesterday. For a full and correct account of games read the JOURNAL next week.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

C. E. Stacy has purchased the business interest of E. B. Gates, and will continue it at the same stand.

John W. Baldwin, the new postmaster here, begins his duties Monday next, with Miss Nellie Morgan as assistant.

Mrs. Fessenden of Boston, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, delivered an interesting address in the chapel of the Methodist church Monday evening, after which a society was organized with Mrs. M. S. Howard president, Mrs. Austin treasurer, Mrs. Sandford secretary.

The soldier's monument to be erected by Mrs. Lucia Foskit in memory of her husband, Dr. Stebbins Foskit, who died in 1889, will in all probability be erected on the lot south of the post office, which was offered by Zenas Crane of Dalton for a town hall, but which has never been occupied. The granite block on which the monument is to stand will be purchased by the soldiers of Wilbraham, and the probable expense of the monument will be about $3000. It is expected it will be finished by July, 1894. Dr. Foskit was born in the town of Hampden about 1824, and lived at Wilbraham nearly all his life, studying medicine in New York city. He always wanted to see a monument in honor of the soldiers of Wilbraham, and at his death it was his wish that some time some of his money should be used for a soldiers' monument. He was unable to go to war on account of his extensive practice in medicine, being the only physician for several miles around.

Wesleyan Academy.

The Art Autographic Reception, one of the finest receptions given here for years, was held in the studio of Fisk Hall Saturday evening. It was given by the three art graduates of '93, Miss Nelly Serena Russell of Meriden, Ct., Miss Lillian Pauline Thompson of Brocton, Mass., Miss Cora E. May of Lynn, Mass. The invited guests were received by the three young women, assisted by Miss E. L. Wyman, the teacher of fine arts. The dresses of the graduates were as follows: Miss Russell, dotted Swiss; Miss Thompson, white mull trimmed with white lace; Miss May, organdier trimmed with yellow silk. At the close of the evening refreshments were served. The ushers were Misses Thomas, Trusdell, Griswold, Burt and Stevens, Messrs Hull, Mervin, Oliver, Wigmore and Barton.

WARE.

Sherman—Turner.

One of the prettiest home weddings took place on Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Charles Sherman on Bank street, when her daughter, Carrie, and Arthur Turner, were married. Rev. A. M. Osgood of the Methodist church officiated in his usually pleasant manner. Mr. Edward Lovett acted as groomsman, and Miss Hattie Lore as bridesmaid. About 35 friends were present. The rooms were very tastily decorated with potted plants and cut flowers. The young couple left on the afternoon train for a short trip, and were nearly covered with rice and old shoes thrown after them by their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Turner are to be at home after the 12th, when their many young friends will be glad to meet and congratulate them.

William F. Kennedy, aged 27, died in Springfield May 31st. The funeral was held at the Congregational chapel in Ware on Friday afternoon. He died of consumption, having been a sufferer for nearly four years.

Miss Ida Corbit was given a surprise party by her classmates of the Ware High school on Monday evening at her home on Eddy street. Neat remembrances of the joyful occasion were left, and a jolly good time reported by those who were there.

The store of Louis Laselle of Lowell, who opened in the Hampshire House block last week Friday under the name of the "Diamond S. Co.," was closed a day or two this week, to mark down the stock, and he was to be before the district court to-day to answer to the charge of being a traveling vender, but showed that he intended to remain in town and the matter was dropped.

The sudden death of Mrs. Maud C., wife of Emery A. Barnes, on Tuesday afternoon cast a shade of sadness over the whole community. A young woman of pleasing address, well known, and believed by all who knew her. She had not been well for some time, though she attended the funeral of her mother on Sunday, but was not able to return. Her sister, Grace Canterbury, was prostrated by the double affliction, but is now improving.

Charles H. Allen, who has been overseer of the carding department of the Otis Co. for more than 30 years, died on Wednesday morning of cancer of the stomach. Mr. Allen was born in Brookfield in 1828. He leaves a widow and one son. The funeral will be held from his late home to-morrow at two o'clock. At a meeting of the clerks and overseers of the Otis Company held yesterday, resolutions were passed as follows:

In the death of Charles H. Allen, who has been in the employ of this company for more than the years of a generation, we mourn the loss of a true friend and an associate who was ever courteous and helpful; whose walk in life has ever been such as to command the respect of all who knew him.

We extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, and will as a body attend upon the funeral services.

A peculiar case is that of Edward Burt, who is being treated in the Springfield hospital for dislocation of the vertebrae of the neck. Burt was injured some time ago in a road race by being thrown from his bicycle, landing violently on the side of his head. An operation to crowd the vertebrae back by stretching the neck was partially successful Monday, and another will be attempted soon.

Some young men in Bordentown, N. J., have set an example in the matter of going to the World's Fair without paying big railroad rates. They have hired a freight car and have furnished it with some bunks and a cooking-stove. As they are in no hurry about getting there, the railroad trip will cost about $10 apiece.

During the thunder storm Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Chauncey Stratton of West Suffield was struck by lightning and the heel of one foot was badly injured, while the other foot had a punctured wound upon the heel and upon the ball of the foot.

The body of Daniel Fitzgerald, night watchman in a mill at Fiskdale, was found in the river at that place Sunday morning. Circumstances lead to the suspicion that he was probable murdered, as the head was badly bruised.

Heart Disease Curable.

The truth of this statement may be doubted by many, but when Dr. Franklin Miles, the eminent Indiana specialist, claims that heart disease is curable and proves it by thousands of testimonials of wonderful cures by his New Heart Cure, it attracts the attention of the millions suffering with short breath, palpitation, irregular pulse, wind in stomach, pain in side or shoulder, smothering spells, fainting, dropsy, etc. A. F. Davis, Silver Creek, Neb., by using four bottles of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, was completely cured after twelve years' suffering from heart disease. This wonderful remedy is sold by LeGro & Lynde. Books free.

Nervous Prostration.

A large manufacturer, whose affairs were very much embarrassed, and who was overworked and broken down with nervous exhaustion, went to a celebrated specialist. He was told that the only thing needed was to be relieved of care and worry, and have a change of thought. This doctor was more considerate of his patient's health than of his financial circumstances. He ought to have advised him to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the best remedy for nervous prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, headache, ill effects of spirits, tobacco, coffee, opium, etc. Thousands testify to cures. Book and trial bottle free at LeGro & Lynde's. (5)

Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills

Act on a new principle—regulating the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new discovery. Dr. Miles' Pills speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles, constipation. Unequaled for men, women, children. Smallest, mildest, surest! 50 doses 25 cents. Samples free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 52-17

To make the hair grow a natural color, prevent baldness, and keep the scalp healthy, Hall's Hair Renewer was invented, and has proved itself successful.

Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was for years a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief until she began to take Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

"Is this hot enough for you?" is a silly question; but if you meet a man who complains of suffering from the heat, ten to one you will find, on inquiry, that he does not use Ayer's Sarsaparilla to tone up his system and free his blood from irritating humors.

Personal.

A young lady of seventeen summers, highly educated, refined, and of prepossessing appearance, desires to form the acquaintance of some nice young man, whom she would advise, if troubled with dyspepsia, to use that great blood purifier, Sulphur Bitters.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Poor, but Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who, while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who has been a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

Ripans Tabules—gentle cathartic.

In using Ayer's Hygienic Coffee, don't make it too strong. Robinson & Taylor sell it.

A manufacturer writes the D. H. Brigham Co. "We have sent you 1100 suits to be sold at what you can get for them. Make prices so low as to secure a ready sale and under no circumstances send any back." They are all high class suits and no sale ever made in this section will equal it in value to the purchaser. You won't half believe the story unless you see the goods and prices.

Have you tried Ayer's Hygienic Coffee that is being introduced in your locality? If not, hadn't you better? Follow directions and not make it too strong. See adv. 8-53

MAY SAVE YOUR LIFE.

INTERESTING FACTS IN THE LIVES OF PEOPLE WE ALL KNOW.

Haskell Dodge, Edwin Thorn, J. E. Palmateer and Mrs. Edwin Myers.—A Thrilling Recital.

As a matter of course, every one who takes medicine watches closely for beneficial effects therefrom. But some people who have been sick for months seem to expect a permanent cure in a few days. This is unreasonable. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cannot accomplish unreasonable or impossible things. But for all diseases for which Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is advertised, it will positively cure; if in the power of medicine to cure, all we ask is to take Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy according to directions, giving it a fair trial, and it will eradicate from the system old and deep-seated maladies which may have become chronic, and produce a permanent and positive cure.

Mr. Haskell Dodge, of Boston, formerly of Pittsfield, one of the largest contractors in the United States, who built most of the public buildings in Dalton, Mass., nearly all of Williams College at Williamston, Mass., and who recently finished the large addition to Vassar College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in talking to a reporter said: "Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an excellent medicine, it regulates my bowels delightfully and to my knowledge has made some wonderful cures; for instance here's a letter from one of the best known men in Greene Co., Mr. Edwin R. Thorn, of New Baltimore Station, in which he says: 'Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has been a great blessing to me, I was troubled with indigestion, constipation and bladder difficulty. I was in almost constant pain. The very first bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy helped me, and to-day I am a perfectly healthy man and never know a sleepless night. In fact, I don't think this simple statement does the medicine justice, for I feel that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy saved my life, for I was weak, nervous and tired of living, and it made a well man of me again.' "

Mr. A. J. Palmateer, of Athens, N. Y., a prominent member of the I. O. O. F. of that place, was equally as enthusiastic in speaking of this great medicine. "I was a great sufferer for years with pains in the small of my back; my legs felt as if they were asleep, sharp, tickling, numb pain constantly present. My physician prescribed, as he said, for gravel, but his medicine did not help me, for I kept growing worse. It was at this critical time I began the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and the effect was marvellous. The pain ceased, I felt better every way, I could rest all through the night, a thing I had not been able to do for years. One day I voided a substance the size of a cherry pit, and from that on I improved rapidly. But let me tell you Favorite Remedy did not stop there with our family, my little grand-daughter had eczema the worst way; she was a mass of sores, my wife gave her Favorite Remedy and the sores disappeared entirely and her skin today is smooth and clear and she is as fat and rugged a child as you can find."

While on this subject let us say there is no greater living monument to the merit of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy than Mrs. Edward Myers of Athens. We all know that she was so poisoned with erysipelas that her life was despaired of and that by taking Favorite Remedy all poison was driven out of her blood and she is alive and well to-day.

"What I like about Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," said one of our physicians to-day, "is that it goes to the root of the trouble, it dissolves the excess of uric acid in the blood, which is the cause of so many diseases, for instance: rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney and liver complaints, scrofula, urinary troubles, and the ills peculiar to women, all arise from this cause, and I prescribe Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for these and other similar troubles when I find them, and have never known it to fail. That's the reason the stores are selling so much of it."—Hudson, N. Y., Register. 2

THE NEXT MORNING I FEEL BRIGHT AND NEW AND MY COMPLEXION IS BETTER.

My doctor says it acts gently on the stomach, liver and kidneys, and is a pleasant laxative. This drink is made from herbs, and is prepared for use as easily as tea. It is called

When Lilacs in the Door-yard Bloom.

When lilacs in the door-yard bloom,
And lift and shake their plumy sheaves;
When sunbeams smite the forest's gloom,
And winds go whispering through the leaves;
When wrens and robins build again
In peace anear the cottage eaves—

Then, though my strength is something spent,
And though my eyes are growing dim,
I thrill with gladness and content,
My soul sends up a joyful hymn;
And in the beauty of the world
I feel my spirit overbrim.

Long years have gone since mother took
The lonesome way that angels mark;
The memory of her latest look
Is like a candle in the dark;
But when the lilacs bloom I see
Her sweet face in a starry arc.

She loved so well these homely flowers;
She broke them for my childish hand;
They speak to me of happy hours
By mother love and patience spanned;
Their perfume has a waft of sweet
Blown hither from th' immortal strand.

I like the dear old-fashioned things;
I always find them just the same;
And so the fancy wakes and clings
That, blooming by whatever name,
I'll one day pluck the lilac sheaves
Where flowers in deathless gardens flame.

A STEERAGE EVANGELINE.

His praenomen was Botetort, and he had Virginia blood in him. Our set—which was journalistic and Bohemian—knew him as "Tort Travers." One fellow, a freshling on his promotion, once spoke of him as "tort a travers," a weak witticism he never repeated. Tort had his ideas as to the distinction between freedom and license, and his own way of conveying his meaning. He had dash and daring always. When he thought it worth while, he was audacious. His fashionable friends went into hysterics, and even Bohemia was aghast at his freak of making his tenth ocean voyage as a steerage passenger.

When we subs of The Cosmogenic gave our returned favorite a welcoming supper at "The Quarry," there was an asinine impression upon one or two of the feebler minds that we were white-washing him, and that a little carbolic acid had been stirred in with the lime. Everybody who could beg or borrow the services of an office "understudy" for that night was there. Travers wore the only dress-coat on parade; but he atoned for the lapse into philistinism by sitting upon the table, his feet in a chair, while he told steerage yarns.

"Heroic newspaper enterprise, did you ask? De'il a bit of it! I was regularly cleaned out by my five weeks on the continent, and hadn't even the ready for a second-cabin ticket. I landed in New York with four cents in my pocket. Having gone in for the steerage, I made thorough work of it. I spared my eyes not one uncomely sight; my ears took in the polyglot babble—squalling babies, swearing men, scolding women—and my nose! It's too soon after supper to talk of that. You've heard of an atmosphere that would resist a carving-knife? A cleaver couldn't have hewed through what we breathed and rebreathed over and over for those nine days.

"And right in the midst of it all I discovered, the second day out, a pink-and-white clover-blossom, as clean and sweet and fearless as ever nodded ever a meadow-path. She (Bob Taylor, if you're spoiling for a fight you can grin again!)—she was a Swede, and her name was Christina Borna. I had seen her busy and helpful among the other women and children all day, ever cheery and miraculously neat; but that evening I came upon her standing alone, or as near solitary as one could be in that hell. She was leaning over the guards and looking due west. I thought first that she was praying. The moon was in her second quarter, and showed every line of her rapt face, clear and tender with something I divined at another glance was not religious exhaltation. We steeragers did not need formal introductions. I spoke first, respectfully. She replied, modestly and frankly. I drew out a little of her story that night. The rest I got in the next two days. While we chatted, children whose mothers were too sick to attend to them raced and howled and rolled about us, and the reek of evil cookery fought with the odors of a neglected hospital a little space away, and I thought of a clover-bloom rooted in the gutter.

"(Reach me another cigar, will you, Williams? This stump has the steerage taint to my taste.)

"Hers was the simplest nature I ever knew; yet she had a clear head, and she was not illiterate for one in her station. From childhood she had been betrothed to Charles Vassar, the son of a neighbor. He had emigrated to America five years ago. She was then nineteen. Had they not been too poor to marry just yet, she must have stayed behind to take care of her widowed and paralytic mother. Charles had written to her every month, and his money almost supported them.

"She told me in badly broken English she 'had much pain to study, for so Charles did write me do;' that 'there was not in America, all of it, so poor any one as my modder with myself was. She made good work it was once, but now she move not one foot or one hand so much. She there lied and look at me. I cannot to you say how she was sorry in the eyes of her. So—two, three, four year—and one day she the eyes shut, and not one word. I call—so loud! No word! No look! No sorry now!'

"I stood between the daughter and rude gazers until she got her voice back. It did her good to talk about it, and I let her go on with the story presently.

"The mother was buried by peasant neighbors little richer than she had been. Christina paid them back with the next money sent by Charles, and hired herself out to a farmer's wife. For a year she did all the roughest work of the rough housekeeping—cooking, washing, milking, churning, planting, hoeing, and digging pototoes; sitting up at night to write to Charles and to sew upon such scanty stock of household linen as she could buy with her mean wages. Charles, upon one side of the salt waste of waters, she, on the other, labored and saved for something dearer than life—the hope of meeting and living together.

"Just twelve months from the day her mother died, she received a letter enclosing money to take her to Hamburg and to buy a steerage ticket to America. She said to 'Dakota,' pronouncing it so oddly that for a while I thought she meant Decatur. Charles was on a ranch in that state. He would meet her in New York. She was ill on the passage. The ship's doctor said that she had worked too hard too long and had 'got one hard pull' on the chest through much lifting of her helpless mother.

"So, it was a slim figure and a wan face that awaited Charles upon the thronged wharf in the great, strange city. She sat as near the landing as they would let her stay—on her little old trunk, hugging the bundle without which the immigrant would not be immigrant; watching, at first expectantly, then anxiously, then in uneasiness that grew hourly into terror, all the long day, until the throng thinned into the group of Castle Garden officials, who began to question her more closely. They were not harsh. No man looking into the face—pure and frightened as a child's—could have given her a sharp word. They gave her food and shelter for four days and telegraphed vainly to the address she furnished from her lover's last latter. Then, as he neither came nor telegraphed, they put her on an outgoing steamer and sent her back to Sweden. She was a pauper, and her sex barring the possibility of converting her into an independent American voter, there was no object in keeping her.

"'Cursed shame!' you say? In this instance, yes.

"She shrank like a mimosa flower from speaking of the misery of the return voyage. Once she said that she 'had prayed to God to forget that she had been so bad to think he did against her be!'

"Her face was never fairer than while it dwelt upon the surprise that awaited her in the Hamburg seaport. Charles had cabled to a friend there to take care of her until his letter should arrive, after which she should come directly back. The letter told how he had been detained four days out of reach of telegraph or mail by what Christina described as a 'most big snow storm.' It contained, moreover, money to bring her safely and surely to him by way of Liverpool. His orders were explicit there. He would not leave New York or the vicinity of Castle Garden until he saw her.

"She finished the recital on our fourth night out. The moon was large and bright by now. She sat upon a stool in her chosen corner, always looking westward while she talked and after she had ceased to speak. I told her that we were nearly half way across. She folded her hands devoutly and pressed them to her bosom.

"'I have waited long—long—long!' she said, a happy break in her breath; 'and the heart has one great ache for being full!'

"I was called away for perhaps ten minutes by somebody. When I came back she had slid from the stool to the dirty deck and lay there, her face upturned to the moon, her hands still clasped over her heart.

"The captain would have mumbled the services over her next day had I not told him that I was an American clergymen and would take it upon myself. I think the recording angel scratched out the lie before handing in his books. I said the solemn words as devoutly as any ordained priest, and more feelingly. Even the children were still and the mothers forgot to complain when the tarpaulin enclosing my clover-blossom settled slowly out of soundings in the sea.

"I had been sure that I would single Charles Vassar out of the rest of the waiting friends on the pier, and I did. Absorbed as I was in dread of the task I had taken upon myself of telling him the truth, I had, I confess, a thrill of professional gratification when I noted that he was a manly fellow, with a shrewd, kindly face, and eager eyes as blue as those of the steerage Evangeline. It rounded off the story harmoniously."

His cigar was dead and the ash cold. He pitched it into the grate and twisted about to reach a glass from the table behind him. At his nod the waiter filled it, and then all the rest. Travers took his feet from the chair and arose, the wine-glass in his lifted hand, his head bowed.

"I give you the memory of Christina Borna!"

We drank the toast standing and in silence.

THE DYING SCOTCHMAN.—A dying Scotchman was asked, "Have you a glimpse of glory now that you are dying?" He roused himself from his lethargy at the question, and earnestly said, "I'll have none of your glimpses now that I am dying, since I've been having a full look at him for forty years!" Let us so live as to have a full look at Christ while in health, and we shall never be without His presence in sickness or death.

The Funeral of Phillips Brooks.

January 26, 1893.

White lies the winter on the weary land.
Winter of many a loss and many a grief;
Yet must this burial day be counted chief
Of sorrows and most sore to understand;
For God hath laid the lighting of His hand
On his own signal tower, for all too brief
A date outsoaring mists of unbelief
To drink the living blue, a beacon grand.
But whilst the desolate throng without the portal
Of solemn Trinity in silence waits,
As listening for the beat of passing wing,
To view that clay which harbored an immortal,
Down the bleak air a tender breath of spring
Steals like a waft from Heaven's glad-opening gates.

Within the beauteous walls again too strait
For the wistful flock who mourn their shepherd gone,— Since here all creeds one shining garment don,
One seamless robe—our heavy spirits wait
On the old Hebraic anthem passionate
And fall of hallowed words that bear upon
Their cadences strange consolation won
From centuries of faith reverberate.
But oh, the empty pulpit eloquent
Of death, the sable pulpit over all!
Yet even here is soul with flesh at strife,
For wise and tender was the hand that lent
A glowing wreath to that funereal pall,—
Against the gloom the exultant flush of life.

"For all the saints who from their labors rest"—
"White gleam the lilies on the lifted bier;
As reverently the youthful bearers rear
Their sad, beloved burden, pacing west,
Whilst all that host as from a single breast,
One voice of praise outringing sweet and clear,
Peals the triumphal chant he loved to hear:
"Thy name, O Jesu, be forever blest."
Ah, turn and watch the pageantry of woe
Out through the darkened door. The glory-hymn
Wavers a space, but swells again, for lo!
The dismal pomp of death, the mourners slow
And shrouded casket on the vision dim,
That gleam of Easter lilies dazzles so.

The train wends outward, where new thousands wait
Beneath an ampler temple-arch of sky,
To speed with murmurous prayer and paen high
The royal progress of that sombre state;
On through the ways where gazers gratulate,
And where thy sons; hushed Harvard gather nigh
To glean a blessing from the passing by;
And so to Auburn's unrestoring gate.
Is this thy victory, Death? Not thine, not thine,
Howe'er to grief we grant her natural throes.
One prophecied of life; we asked a sign,
To little mortals know for what they pray,
And by his open grave amid the snows
A chastened nation keeps her Easter day.
—Katherine Lee Bates, in New England Magazine.

Written for the PALMER JOURNAL:

MEMORIAL DAY INFLUENCES.

A STORY FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The Memorial Day exercises were expected to be unusually imposing. There was to be a famous band from Springfield, and a long procession in which would appear the numerous organizations of the town,—firemen, trades unions, labor unions, the veterans, the Masons—all in uniforms and regalias, with floating banners; girls in white dresses laden with bouquets and wreaths, and boys waving Union flags, marching two by two.

Ralph and Harry had been asked to join the procession.

"Because we're just the right size," said Harry, explaining the honor to his mamma and auntie. He had an air of great importance, and marched as he talked back and forth the length of the dining-room and sitting-room, with shoulders back and head erect in true military style.

"It'll be a grand day, and a grand dinner!" he said enthusiastically.

"Have they invited your engine company to join the procession?" asked Aunt Nell mischievously? Then she laughed merrily as there appeared to her a vision of the "Infantry Engine Company"—a motley band of boys of all sizes and of a few girls, carrying bean poles, broomsticks, whatever would represent muskets. "That is the Infantry," Harry had informed her when the auntie had questioned. A boy from the neighboring grocery was mounted on wheels and trimmed profusely with evergreens, "and that is the engine," he said. "It is the Infantry Engine Company!"

This "company," since the day of the firemen's parade, had marched and countermarched in evolutions that would have baffled a general-in-chief to follow, and as Aunt Nell pictured the "Infantry Company" in the Memorial Day procession she laughed so long that Harry answered her question if it were to appear with a crestfallen "No," and Ralph suggested, rather defiantly, "I guess they didn't know about it, or they'd have asked us."

"I'll tell 'em. I know Mr. Gale. I'll tell him our Infantry Engine Company 'll join the procession too," exclaimed Harry, and he made a dash for his hat, as if to at go once upon his errand.

"No, my dears," interposed mamma, who had been reading the local paper. "Here is the programme for Memorial Day; it is all arranged; you are too late," and Ralph gave a little sigh of relief.

"You better not go now, Harry," he said.

Notwithstanding, the I. E. C. marched and hallooed and so absorbed Harry that his martial spirit could hardly be contained in his little jacket or endured by his family friends.

Mamma made the boys sailor suits of dark navy blue trimmed with gilt buttons, and Aunt Nell embroidered gold anchors in the corners of the broad collars. Papa brought home from Boston two soldier caps "just a match" for the suits, and there were not two more delighted boys in the whole procession than our Ralph and Harry.

There was an oration in the hall, speeches at the monument, a march to the village cemetery, and decoration ceremonies of various kinds. Then the organizations came back to the hall for a good dinner, and in the afternoon the veterans visited burying-grounds in the outlying districts; then there was another meal at the hall and a bivouac in the early evening.

Harry spoke his little "piece" over and over, and not a man among them was more zealous or enduring. The veterans and their followers rode in 'busses to the scattered burial places, and on the way re-lived the scenes of camp and field. Harry, sitting in the lap of a G. A. R. friend, followed the fortunes of the reminiscences till they became a dream—like experiences of his own. He tasted the hard tack and coffee and lay down upon a blanket before the campfire till half past eight. He had promised his mother he would come home "at half past eight, sharp." But the camp was only just established and he was quite tempted to forget his word or ignore the hour till he heard a veteran in the course of a yarn say, "Obedience is the soldier's first law, you know." Then he sprang to his feet, called to Jimmy and Tom, two of his playfellows who adored him, and marched an imaginary company up Pond street to the parsonage door.

"Company, halt!" he commanded. "Disperse!" And when the two boys who represented a whole company scampered away he marched into the library whistling "Yankee Doodle" and lifting his knees like a "high stepper."

Harry's father, who had been one of the speakers of the day, exhausted by his efforts, was reclining in an easy chair trying to rest. He smiled when Harry marched up to him and called "Halt."

"Have you had a pleasant day?" he asked in a hoarse whisper.

"Splendid," said Harry. "Splendid!" I'm a soldier, papa! Ah, these are terrible times, with the enemy all round us! Hark! don't you hear the musketry? Ah, there is a company of cavalry bearing down upon us! Papa! papa! your life is in danger! But I'll save you." Harry put his hand to his side and went through the motion of drawing a sword from his belt.

"See," he exclaimed, pointing as if toward some distant object, "one man has seen us! He's riding this way! Here he comes, on a white war charger! I'll drive my bayonet into him."

He had forgotten his sword and seizing a cane held it forward in the position "charge bayonet."

"Here he comes," and the boy waved the cane above his head and thrust it again and again into the breast of the white charger and into the form of the foe his fancy had summoned to battle.

"See, papa! He's dead! I've killed him! I've saved your life! But at the cost of my own!" and the young hero fell upon the floor in mimic death agony.

"Remember me — when — I — am — gone, papa," he gasped, then stiffened his body and lay straight and still upon the carpet.

The father watched the mimic scene with interest, and in a few moments saw the eyelids of the dead hero quiver and lift, saw a queer little smile flit around his lips, then vigorous life suddenly returned to the motionless frame and the boy jumped upon the arm of the easy chair, his eyes twinkling, his face aglow.

"Now, papa, read to me," he said. "Read war stories," and he brought a book from a shelf. "Here's just the thing; now, papa!"

"But, my dear boy," remonstrated the father, wearily.

"Oh, now, papa," putting his arms about his father's neck persuasively, "just a little," and hoarse and tired as he was the father read till he and his boy fell asleep in each other's arms.

The boy who in his imagination had defended his father on a field of battle had taxed to the utmost that father's strength to gratify a moment's pleasure while the father was giving his life for his boy.

"Yet not in vain," murmured the mother, laying a gentle hand on the head of each sleeper and dropping a kiss upon each brow. He is learning lessons of reverence and of patriotism. Such days as these do not mean slaughter to him, but valor, and his valor and patriotism will inform his judgment, and his love for his father will grow wiser under such ennobling influences. His wars will be those of the spirit over evil, and the time will come when he will be ready, truly, to give his life for that which is good and great."

SUMMER FABRICS.

"Thirty years ago, when I was a girl," says mamma, musingly, "I had a gown like this in tint, in fabric, in sheer softness; the prettiest, daintiest thing. I wore it the summer I met your father."

Into the soft sweet elderly eyes there steals the far-away look which the children interpret as half of memory, half of yearning. For their father is away in the "sweet fields beyond the swelling flood" of which the hymn tells so tenderly, and "mother" has never worn anything but sober black, relieved now and then by a bit of opaque white, since she took up her journey alone.

Yes, alone, though the children are still with her, and most fond and considerate. But they belong to a later generation. She was "first" and "only" with her husband, and half of herself was reft out of the world when he left it.

"Think of mamma in a giddy gown like mine," ripples dainty Sue, with her blond head rising from the foamy circumference of her tiny clustering ruffles, pure as Aphrodite's from the sea. "Mamma in rose-colored lawns, and filmy muslins, and diaphanous gauzes, with roses and daisies and knots of ribbon all over her flounces and furbelows!"

"Why not, pray?" interposes Irene, the stately, a girl whose statuesque pose and grand outlines need neither ruffles nor tucks, and who has enough artistic feeling to choose for herself styles which accentuate her beauty rather than belittle its charm: "Why not, pray? One would fancy that you thought mamma had never been a girl."

"Mamma seems just—mamma," Susie answered. "But I can imagine how she looked that radiant summer when her checks were pink and her hair was brown, and she wore these light pretty stuffs which have come back again in time for me. I'm so glad they have. I'm so glad the streets in town and the piazzas at the shore and the mountain inns will bloom with real rose-bud gardens of girls this year, and that grave and sombre hues have made their exodus for the present. Mamma, when you wore organdies and mulls, were you as silly as your daughter?"

"Silly? I hardly like that adjective in connection with you, dear heart. I was noted far and near for my love of fun and for my ready laughter. I'm afraid I giggled a good deal. The first question a friend asked on meeting me, after twenty years, was, "Do you laugh as much as you used to?"

Sue's apple-blossom face looks thoughtful for an instant. Not for long, however. The summer is before her, and the dainty summer toilettes awaited planning and fashioning, and the interest she took in this was the wide-awake, healthy interest of a girl whose heart had not yet been touched by an absorbing outside element.

She and Irene had made the tour of the shops, admiring the novelties, scanning their possibilities, comparing the fragile and airy stuffs of the season with the deeper tones and thicker textures of the last season. The mother was glad that her girls were still so entirely her own, knowing as she did that for them, as for her, the Eden gate would one day swing wide, the Eden rose break into bloom.

In some far-off future day one of them she beheld, as in a vision, musingly fingering some delicate product of the loom, and speaking to girls of her own, as she had herself done, of the "summer I met your father."—From Harper's Bazar.

THE GAME OF LIFE.

Man's life is a game of cards. First it is "cribbage." Next he tries to "go it alone" in a sort of "cut, shuffle and deal" pace. Then he raises the "deuce" while his mother "takes a hand in," and, contrary to Hoyle, "beats the little joker with her five." Then with his "diamonds" he wins the "queen of hearts." Tired of playing a "lone hand," he expresses a desire to "assist" his "fair partner," "throws out his cards" and his clergyman takes a $10 bill out of him for a "pair." "She orders him up" to build the fires. Like a "knave" he joins the "clubs," where he often gets "high," which is "low," too. If he keeps "straight" he is sometimes "flush." He grows old and "bluff," sees a "deal" of trouble, when he at last "shuffles" off his mortal coil and "passes in his checks," and he is "raked in by a spade." Life's game is ended and he waits the summons of Gabriel's "trump" which shall "order him up."—Clarion, Pa., Democrat.

MISS LIZZIE BORDEN.

The crime for which this young woman is being tried is a peculiar one. On the fourth of August last Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Borden, about 65 years of age, were murdered in broad daylight in their home in Fall River, their heads being horribly hacked with many blows of a hatchet or similar sharp instrument, just what has never been satisfactorily determined. The trial began Monday at Fall River, and will be watched with intense interest in all parts of the country, especially New England. The prisoner has many sympathizers who cannot believe she is guilty. She is about 32 years of age, and was a baby when her own mother died, the murdered woman being a step-mother with whom Lizzie was not on the best of terms. She was a member of the Christian Endeavor society, the W. C. T. U. and the Woman's Board of the Fall River Hospital, intelligent and refined.

The claim of the prosecution is that on the evening before the murder Lizzie Borden went to a drug store and asked for ten cent's worth of prussic acid for cleaning a cloak, but was refused. She then called on Alice Russell, a friend of hers, and in the course of her visit said: "I can't help feeling depressed, that something is going to happen; last night we were all sick but the girl; it may have been the baker's bread." "No," said Miss Russell, "others would have been sick if that were so." "Then it might have been the milk." "What time do you get your milk?" "About 4 o'clock. I am afraid." Lizzie continued, "that the house will be burned down some night. Father has had so much trouble with his men. The other night the barn was broken into." "But that was only boys," said Miss Russell. Lizzie continued, saying that she had seen a man about the place who ran away when they caught sight of each other, and that her father had but recently had a quarrel with a man who came to see him. She was fearful of trouble.

The next morning after breakfast John V. Morse, an uncle who had come to visit the Bordens the day before, left the house about 7.45, Mr. Borden letting him out and locking the door after him. Soon after Mr. Borden went down town, and Bridget Sullivan, a domestic, was sent to the upper story to wash windows. About 9.30 Mrs. Borden told Lizzie that she was going upstairs to do some work, and was never seen alive again except by the assassin. Bridget Sullivan saw no one while at her work, and about 10.45 Mr. Borden returned, trying to let himself into the house at the front door, but it was locked and bolted, contrary to the custom. Lizzie was in the hall above and made some laughing remark about the circumstance to Bridget. She then went to him and asked him for the mail, telling him that Mrs. Borden had gone out in answer to a note. At 11.15 the alarm was given to the police. The prisoner was the last person left with her father alive, and she said she was in the back yard when she heard a groan and went in and found her father dead. She sent Bridget for Dr. Bowen, and failing to get him, sent for Miss Russell, to whom Lizzie predicted disaster only the night before. Bridget asked, "Shall I not go down for Mrs. Borden?" "No," said the prisoner, "I am not sure, but I think I heard her come in; I wish you would try to find her," and Bridget and Mrs. Churchill went upstairs and when near the landing the dead body was seen on the floor in the guest chamber. It is claimed that Mrs. Borden died some time before her husband, and that Lizzie was the only person who was near either of the victims in the house.

A TYPICAL EXPERIMENT IN BRAIN SURGERY.

A boy aged fifteen had received a blow on the right side of his head from a pair of tongs eight days before his admission to the hospital. Three days after the accident a convulsion suddenly set in, involving the right side of the body, beginning in the arm and spreading to the leg and face, and followed rapidly in four days by eight other convulsions and paralysis of the entire right side of the body. Most of my readers would unhesitatingly attribute the convulsions and the paralysis to this blow from the tongs. But it must be remembered that the right side of the brain supplies the left side of the body, and vice versa. Hence Mr. James Harrison suspected that the paralysis of the body indicated trouble in the left half of the brain. Examining his head, he found on the left side a small scar at the junction of the arm and leg centres. Inquiry elicited the fact that, ten years before, he had received a severe blow there, which, however, had not been followed by any serious symptons. Could this old injury, after so long a time as ten years, possibly be the cause of his present serious trouble? Further inquiry brought out the fact that for about a year before his admission the boy had had repeated twitching of his right arm. So convinced was Mr. Harrison that modern cerebral localization was right that he opened the boy's skull, not where most people would suppose would be natural, namely, on the right side of the head, where he had received the blow from the pair of tongs eight days before, but on the left side, at the site of the blow ten years before, and at a definite point, namely, over the fissure of Rolando, at the place corresponding to the motor center for the arm as established by experiments on animals. Although the first injury was received so long before, yet the paralysis showed that it was the left side of the brain that was involved, and the twitching of the arm showed that this was the particular part of the left side of the brain where the injury probably existed. Mr. Harrison punctured what seemed on the surface to be a normal brain, and opened an abcess, and this boy, otherwise doomed to death, made an uninterrupted recovery. This is only one instance out of probably more than one hundred and fifty cases of abcess in the brain which have been reported within the last seven or eight years which have been diagnosticated with the same accuracy and by the same means.—From "Vivisection and Surgery," by W. W. Keen, M. D., L. L. D., in Harper's Magazine for June.

IT WAS HER ANNIVERSARY.

Some drummers were diverting themselves in a smoking car by repeating episodes of so-called "cheek." All but one had related an instance; when he was called upon, he drearily said:

"I don't remember anything worth telling; in fact, my wife has completely dazed my memory of matters of that kind by a fine sample of her own stock. You see, when I got back from my latest trip I went home at something after 9 o'clock in the evening. Well, there was my house lighted up from top story to basement; carriages were leaving the door, and affairs seemed to be going on inside on a grand scale. I let myself into the basement with a latch key and walked into the dining-room. Strains of music came from the back part of the hall, and the mingled laughter and conversation indicated a host of guests.

"Presently my wife came into the dining-room, dressed like a princess; she ran up to me, saying:

"'Oh, Jack! I'm so glad you've come home early.'

"'So'm I,' said I; 'what's the racket—surprise party?'

"'Surprise party?' said she, with a pout; 'no, indeed, it's the anniversary of my wedding.'

"'Tilda,' said I, 'you're off; you're way off! This is the month of March—it was in the summer we were married!'

"She serenely replied: 'I know that very well; this is the anniversary of my first marriage. Go put on your dress suit, dear.'"—New York Tribune.

THE GUNS OF THE "VESUVIUS."

The most recent applications of the blowpipe principle, however, are the three air-guns of the United States "torpedo cruiser" (or, as she is also called, the "pneumatic cruiser") "Vesuvius." This vessel of war is 251 feet 9 inches long, 26 feet 5 inches wide, draws 9 feet of water, and has a displacement of 725 tons; she is of 3794 horse-power, and she darts over the waves at a speed of 25 miles per hour. She is too beautiful and fast a craft to be called a "blowpipe gunboat"; but that is exactly what she is, because of the blow-guns which stick up through the deck at the bow. Most of these guns lie at an angle slanting back and downward to where the air-compressors lie close to the keel.

Into the som-what bottle-shaped steel flasks air has been forced until it is compressed under a strain of 2000 pounds to the square inch, by engines especially constructed for that purpose. The shells, or bombs, or darts fired from the guns are partly of iron, of brass, and of copper. They aee 10 feet long, 15 inches wide, and while some are of uniform width, others give up half their length to a thin spindle or tail having metal fans at the end, and looking somewhat like a huge, clumsy arrow. These darts are kept in three barrel-like "revolvers," and as there are five darts in each, the Vesuvius can throw fifteen projectiles in rapid succession.

When a gun is to be loaded, about twenty feet of its lower end drops down by means of a hinge, and from the revolver directly in front of it one of the bombs is pushed back into the lowered end, which is then pulled up again in line with the rest of the tube. When all is ready, a lever in the conning tower is moved, enough air is being admitted from one of the reservoirs, and away goes the dart flying through the air to a distance of one and a half miles.

The operation, which seems so simple, does not look very formidable as a method of warfare; but that dart whirled away by the blow-pipe is in reality the most deadly weapon known to war, afloat or ashore, for in the head of the missile is stored 500 pounds of guncotton, than which no more terrible explosive is known that can be so used. The name guncotton sounds innocent enough, and the material is nothing more than the cotton waste, with which you have often seen engineers cleaning their engines, soaked in nitric and sulphuric acids, and washed clean again. A pound of this will burn quietly, but when it is struck or "detonated" it explodes with a force sufficient to blow up a good-sized house. If upon an anvil is laid a piece of paper with one or more letters cut out, and a pound of guncotton is exploded on it, the letters or figures cut in the paper will be stamped into the metal one-quarter of an inch deep. Just think of such force, and then imagine 500 pounds of guncotton exploding on a ship or fort!—J. O. Davidson, in June St. Nicholas.

A SPECIMEN OF BABOO ENGLISH.

The listener has seen many odd specimens of Baboo English, but the following, which has been sent him by a friend in India, and which is a true copy of a letter written by a Bengalee Baboo applying for a clerkship, quite caps the climax. It suggests that the unfortunate Baboo who wrote the letter had been studying the English language and English ways in anything but an elegant school—possibly in the company of Messrs. Otheris, Learoyd and Mulvaney:

Honored Sir: Last evening, while peringating through city, I am hearing from friend who was likewise enjoying evening zephyrs, that vacancy took place to-day in your highnesses office by death of Baboo ——. Poor man, I am greatly sorrowful for his demise, he has left gigantic family who will feed their mouths the Devil knows. Your honor will see from my ludicrous and weak-hearted tone of voice that I am well-meaning, hard-working, extra energetic, devil-me-care sort, requiring abundant fields for display of copious brain power hitherto limited by blaggard schoolmaster. For my qualifications please note. I am dammably well up in precise writing, draughting, docking, and office routine work, and in private life I am much addicted to swearing English oaths, drinking and other ramifications too numerous to mention.

I am no orthodox believing all rotten superstitions of ancient forefathers. But I am iconoclast, destroying idols and such like to great detriment of hippocrites and scoundrels.

It is with fervance that I solicit your majesty's hand and heart in moving this my petition to your own favorable condition, and my wife's heartfelt gratitude, who will all fall upon my bended knees and pray long and continuously for your mighty honor's gracious lady, and all posthumous children to follow up.—Boston Transcript.

Five Years Old.

Have you seen my baby fair,
Anywhere?
Golden curls, and sweet blue eyes,
Cupid laughing in disguise—
But yester eve I crooned to him my first Low lullaby.

Have you seen my baby boy?
There's his toy—
As he dropped it in his play,
Dancing off another way,
As bird, or flower, or butterfly
Led him to stray.

Say you he will yet return?
Not again—
The bud must to the flower unfold,
Amid time's changes manifold.
To-day my boy, a babe but yesterday,
Is five years old.

Yet I know that God's dear will
To fulfill,
Baby must become a man,
Learn the world's joy, and its pain,
Learn its losses and its gain,
And choose between.

Brave enough to right the wrong,
True and strong,
Day by day my boy must grow,
Since best love knoweth it is better so,
I cannot wish him longer to remain
A baby boy.
—Good Housekeeping.

WOMAN'S CORNER.

THE FIRST NORMAL SCHOOL.

The Alumnæ Association of the Framingham Normal School held a biennial meeting at May Hall in Framingham last Saturday. Instead of an address by some distinguished person, as has been the custom at the meetings of this association, the exercises consisted of a symposium of letters and short speeches.

The Framingham Normal School is the mother of normal schools in America. It was opened at Lexington in 1839, through the influence of Horace Mann and a few other Massachusetts educators. Its first principal was Father Pierce (as he was called—pronounced Purse). The first class was graduated in 1840; of this class five were present at Framingham last Saturday. Mrs. Lamson, one of the five, presided at the meeting with as much dignity as any judge, with as close adherence to parliamentary rules as any "Speaker," with as much grace as any woman.

In this first class graduated Miss Ireson, who for fifty years has taught in the public schools of Cambridge—for forty years in the Washington School, Cambridge. She resigned last year, and at that time was presented with a life annuity. Miss Ireson spoke of her long experience as a teacher and of the pleasure a teacher feels in seeing her students grow to be useful men, naming several men of note as having been under her instruction, among them Gov. Russell.

This first class presented the school with a portrait of Mrs. Pierce, who, although not holding an official position was of great help to her husband in his work, and who although not receiving any salary was a teacher in botany for several years.

Mrs. Walton, as fresh and enthusiastic, as charming, as she has been ever since the oldest of our public school teachers began to go to teachers' institutes and conventions, was at the meeting and read selections from Father Pierce's journal of the first few years of the school. These extracts were interesting in showing how Father Pierce introduced what were then new but are now the accepted methods of teaching. For instance, he recorded on a certain day that he had succeeded in having that day a recitation in physiology in which the girls gave the substance of the lesson instead of reciting in the (then) usual way by questions and answers. This he considered a great gain.

There were letters read from graduates who have married and who are now living in Japan, in England, on a Colorado ranch—and from missionaries in Turkey and among the negro people of the South, and from Mrs. Leavitt of the W. C. T. U., who is now in the Sandwich Islands, and from Miss Hyde, the present principal of the school, who is in Oakland, Cal., taking a rest on account of ill health.

As the first, and long the only normal school, the history of the Framingham school is interesting, especially as it was started at a time when woman's work was believed to be housework and that alone; at about the time when a dignified school board in a town not far from Boston had hired a young woman to teach its summer school with much misgiving lest she should prove unequal to the task, and they would be establishing a precedent which would lead young women to become forward; and whose members, later in the year, when this same young woman applied for the winter school, were horrified at the idea that any WOMAN should suppose she could teach GRAMMAR! Mrs. Lamson said, "Those were the days when it was thought 'woman's sphere was the home.' If she attempted to do anything outside of the home she was followed by an interrogation mark!"

TAKE CARE OF THE CHILDREN.

It is a great mistake to prevent children from learning how to sail, swim, ride, drive, etc., "for fear of accidents." It often happens that the child that is most carefully guarded on every side, that is not permitted to do this or that on account of possible danger, that is not allowed to ride in street cars or omnibuses in view of chance contagion, that is protected, as it were, even against the possibilities of mortal misfortune, is the very one that will come to grief. "There is no use trying to restrain an active, manly boy," said a mother the other day. "I have found it does more harm than good even as regards safety. I was leaving home not long ago for a few days' shopping in town, and just before going to the train I called my boy and said to him: 'Now, Bertie, don't try your new horse while I am away, and promise me not to go out in your sail boat so that my mind may be at rest. Stay at home only for to-day like a good boy just to oblige me.' So he promised, and I went away content, for I knew I could trust him. Well, if you'll believe it, when I went to my mother's house at one o'clock for luncheon I found a telegram awaiting me saying that Bertie had fallen from the cherry tree and broken his leg!"

There is no use, as this mother has wisely concluded, to try to protect one's loved ones from danger; it is ever present—above us, about us, beneath us. As St. Paul says, 'we live in jeopardy every hour;' but by helping to make children hardy, self-reliant, calm in emergency and fearless, we give them the truest protection in our power.

BUSY BEES.—Bees, according to a statistician, must, in order to collect a pound of clover honey, deprive 62,000 clover blossoms of their nectar. To do this the 62,000 flowers must be visited by an aggregate of 3,750,000 bees; or in other words, to collect his pound of honey one bee must make 3,750,000 trips from and to the hive. As bees are known to fly for miles in quest of suitable fields of operation, it is clear that a single ounce of honey represents millions of miles of travel.

Marriage a la Mode.—She—"Then you insist on going to the Gladerbs, John?" He—"Yes, dear." She—"Well, I shan't go; but won't you please drop in at the club and tell a few men I'm at home?" He—"Certainly, darling.—Harper's Bazar."

THE STRANGLER VINE.

"You want to know how those marks came there, do you? Well, you would guess a mighty long time before you would come near it, so I'll spare you the trouble and tell you the story."

He held up his brown right hand as he spoke. Across the back of it were two livid lines. One of these lines passed inside his hand and wound around his little finger. This finger was twisted and broken and bent backward. Right up to the finger nail extended the fiery, threadlike line.

The second line was a deeper red, wider than the other, and from it other filamentlike lines branched, covering the wrist with a network of scarlet tendrils. The main line could be seen to wind once around the wrist and then was lost up the speaker's sleeve.

"Well," he resumed, you remember the excitement that followed the discoveries of silver in Yucatan in 1877. The Indians had been bringing down small quantities of horn silver for some time and selling it at Merida. Finally, one of the half-breed merchants of that town got an Indian drunk and induced him to tell where they obtained the silver. They say it was one of the mines from which the Aztecs, or whatever race it was that built the cities, the ruins of which cover so many miles in that country, used to get the silver for their temples. At all events, the merchant came back with two burros laden with almost pure silver. He said that there was silver enough in sight at the mine to load a fleet of steamers. He told in a general way where the treasure mountain was, and started out with a pack train for more. One of the mules strayed back nearly a month later, but that was all that was ever heard of him.

"I was one of the swarm of prospectors that started out to find the old mine. It had taken the merchant two weeks to make his first trip, so we could calculate about what distance he had traveled. I had for a companion a Balize Indian hunter, who knew something of the interior country. We traveled ten days through the wildest country that any one ever heard of. Mountains, whose snowy tops were thousands of feet above the clouds, and whose sides were covered with jungles so thick that for days together we simply had to hew our way through it. At last we reached a valley, the other side of which was bounded by a separate chain of mountains. These, from where we stood, seemed perfectly unassailable, but my companion said he had been on top of them.

"'From the summit,' he said, 'you can see the Chichuandassi.'

"I had heard of the Chihuandassi. The name means, 'Table of Dead Men,' and the Indians say it is covered with plants that have the power of motion.

"Have you ever been on the Chihuandassi?" I asked.

"'No man has ever gone there and returned to tell it,' he answered.

"We crossed the valley, passing through the ruins of a great city built of almost transparent quartz, and finally struck the trail he spoke of, and two days later stood on the top. On the other side was a narrow gulch, and beyond it a sheer wall many hundreds of feet high. Still the top of this was lower than we were, and we could look down upon the Table of Dead Men. The mesa on the other side of the gulch seemed perfectly level, and as far as we could judge was surrounded on all sides by just such a precipice as we saw. The country is all sandstone, and the swift little rivers have nearly all worn deep channels for themselves. In many localities you can walk a hundred miles, be able to throw a stone into the river and yet you may die of thirst, so high and erect are those fearful walls. The Chihuandassi was covered with some low vegetation and there were a few trees in the distance.

"'That is the flower that travels,' said my companion.

"He noticed my look of amused incredulity, and resumed rather angrily.

"'You don't believe it? I have seen it move. Look there!'

"I looked, the table was agitated, and looked like the waves of the sea. The whole green surface seemed to approach the edge nearest us. My hair rose for a moment, then I burst out laughing. 'It is only the wind tossing the snakeweed,' I said.

"'But there is no wind here.'

"He spoke truly. The air where we stood was perfectly still. Yet, I explained, it might be a breeze engendered by the nature of the country, that did not extend to our side.

"'No, no,' he insisted. 'The Indians who have lived here for years know better. These flowers are devils. No one who goes over comes back from there.'

"Two Indians who loved one woman went up on the Chihuandassi to battle. Human eyes never again saw them alive. We are told that they fell victims to the flower that creeps.

"I had a first-class pair of glasses with me and I directed them to the plateau. Half covered with the vines and creepers, I could see something white. There were two spots that might be skulls, and I thought I could trace the outlines of two human forms. They might have been rocks, and were doubtless what originated the Indian legend.

"An idea suddenly occurred to me that this story of certain death to whoever went up to that mountain top was a story of the Indians to prevent any one going there.

"'I'll bet a horse,' said I, 'that the mine is there, and I'm going to see.'

"Well, to cut it short, I left him there, and with one mule started for the Chihuandassi. I calculated that I could get around in three days, and told him to camp there and wait for me. It was nasty work getting down into the river bed, but I did it before night, and had the satisfaction of camping on an old trail that night. Early the next morning I entered a fissure at the base of the lone mountain. It was a dry water course, not more than a dozen feet wide, and wound around between high sandstone walls. It was, however, comparatively free from brush, and I got along famously for a time. There were many rattlesnakes and centipedes along the old water course, but nothing more.

"I had been going up the old channel for probably four hours, getting higher every step. The walls of the water course were getting lower, and at this point I was not more than forty feet below the surface. As I turned a sharp bend, however, I came right up against a bowlder that completely filled the creek bed. The trail ended right there. It appeared as if the rock had recently rolled down to where it lay.

"I thought that if I could climb over it I could continue on up the water course. So I started to climb. The bowlder was rough enough for me to gain holds for my hands and feet, and though it was slow, hard work and I often slipped back, at last I managed to surmount it and stood on top. To my intense surprise I found myself within a dozen feet of the floor of the mesa, and just above me one arm of the giant cactus I had seen from the other mountain. Then I determined, instead of continuing in the dry creek bed, to scale this wall and so reach the mesa, where I expected to find the silver mine.

"The sandstone was soft and I had a strong knife. Besides, at the edge I saw some vines hanging over that looked strong enough to bear my weight if I succeeded in reaching them. So I began to climb the wall.

"At last I grasped the hanging vines.

"The stems were covered with fine points, like a prickly pear, but I could not let go without falling. I reached my other hand higher and grasped another vine.

"In an instant its tendrils were around my wrist, other stems fell over the edge of the cliff. They curled around my arms and waist like snakes. Then they began to draw me up, and almost before I realized it I was dragged over the edge of the chasm almost to the foot of the cactus.

"The vines dragged me on, other stems curled about my legs and drew me tighter and tighter.

"Then I realized that the Indian story was no fable. The idea of being in the power of this constricting thing that covered acres of land paralyzed me for an instant. The hand that had just touched the vines was being crushed in the devilish tendons. My little finger was broken backward by the power of the vine. The pain brought me to my senses, and I began to fight for my life. One hand was free and in it was my knife. I began to hack at the snake-like coils of the devilish vegetable. As fast as I could cut away one running stem another would coil around me. Fight as I would, the vines was stronger, and on and on it dragged me.

"My foot struck something, and I felt it crush and crumble beneath my heel. I looked down. It was a human head, one of those white spots I had seen through my glass. The body, fearfully shrunken and emaciated, lay there among the coiling, twisting vines. Near it was another.

"I realized it all while I hacked and struggled. These two had been caught in the toils of the awful monster like myself and strangled.

"I was getting weak. The pressure about my limbs was unbearable. I had cut myself badly in cutting the strangling bonds. I looked over the mesa with a wild hope of seeing some one or something to help me.

"The mesa was all in motion. The vines were twisting, curling, falling, rising, trembling. It was a moving mass, like the ocean, and the waves were reaching and falling toward me.

"It was not the wind blowing the snakeweed. The fiendish plant had life and motion and every fiber of it was straining to reach me. I knew that if those advancing waves of black ever reached me I was lost. I would be like those shriveled bodies by the giant cactus.

"I made a final effort to escape. I could hear the muscles crack and strain as I pulled. I cut the thickest stem that enveloped me, and for the first time since the trouble began was able to make a step backward. But the fight was not over yet. A dozen smaller tendrils, like so many whipcords, were tangled about me, cutting into my flesh with a terrible power. I had kept my throat free, though the vegetable serpents seemed to strive to coil about it. So I cut and struggled backward. A final slash, a jump, and I was over the edge and on the bowlder in the dry creek. But the demon's arms followed me. I knew that they would seize me again before I could get down, so I dashed to the other side of the water course and clambered up there.

"How I thanked God when I found nothing there but greasewood and cactus. I saw the vines swing and sway over where I had escaped, and then I fainted.

"When I came to the mesa was quiet again. The vines had receded, and if it had not been for my aching, swollen limbs I would have sworn it was all a nightmare. But there laid two dried up bodies. While I laid there I recognized one of them. It was the half breed merchant from Merida. The other was doubtless the Indian who betrayed the silver mine." — San Francisco Examiner.

RATS.

It is doubtful if many of the JOURNAL'S readers are aware of the novel methods employed by the poor of our large cities to provide food and shelter for themselves and those dependent upon them. Some who are skillful with their needle go from family to family and do the week's mending, and when a sufficient number can be secured this brings in quite a respectable sum. Others will enter the house just after the meals have been finished and the food cleared away, taking the china from the table, washing the same, returning to the closet or to a freshly-laid table as the custom of the house mother may be, thus saving her one of the most unpleasant parts of housekeeping, and largely obviating the neccesity of "help," which often is that but in name; and when families in the same neighborhood take their meals at such hours as to render it practicable—and many dine at one, others at two, three, and still a larger number at six to seven p. m.,—a good day's work may be accomplished, bringing an income larger then is attainable by the average servant girl,who is on duty from six or seven a. m. to the same hours, and later, at night.

But of all the singular methods of livelihood is that of "catching rats." And a very profitable occupation it is too, if one likes it. Down near the river fronts stand large slaughter-houses, which are infested by these pests, and very troublesome would they prove were it not for these rat-catchers, who are given the key by the owners or managers, and letting themselves in with their dark lanterns and bag prepared expressly for the purpose, listen quietly until the location of the "game" is discovered, then turning their "bull's eye" suddenly open them they are so dazzled by the brilliancy as to be completely stupefied, and are easily captured. If neccessary, darkness can be made to prevail for a time, and when they again become numerous about the feet of the captor the same dazzling process is resorted to and thus the bag is soon filled. As ten cents is realized for each rat, and often forty are taken in a single night a good day's—or rather night's—work is realized.

An amusing incident came to the writer's ear not long since in this connection, which, being true, is too good to be lost. One of those rat-catchers was leaving a large slaughter-house near the East river and 43d street late one night when a newly-made policeman espied him, well-filled bag over his shoulder, telling of a rich haul.

"Ha, I've caught you, old fellow, what have you got there?"

"Rats," replied the honest man, and attempted to pass, but was detained by the official.

"Tell me what you have there or I'll run you in."

"Rats," ejaculated the catcher, and "rats" he continued to insist he had, and nothing but "rats," and would offer no explanation of the same, conscious of his right in the matter. At last, exhausted and vexed by what he of the brass buttons considered want of respect to his new-fledged dignity, he marched him into the nearest police station.

"Hallo, who have you here?" was asked by the officer in charge for the night.

"A fellow who has been stealing from one of these large slaughter-houses, and his impudence is unendurable."

Drawing himself up to full height the officer demanded:

"What have you in that bag, sir?"

"Rats," was the answer.

"Just what he told me, the fool, and evidently expects us to believe it," exclaimed number one.

"Tell me that again, will you—just open that bag and we'll know what you call rats. Pour the contents out, and be quick about it."

The man did as directed. Untying the bag and taking it up suddenly by the bottom, forty rats scampered about the floor, with the howls of distressed officials, and he would not consent to relieve their fears until they had agreed to pay him ten cents for each rat, which they gladly did, making him the neat little sum of $8 for his one night's labor.

To appreciate fully the joke of this, one must see and realize the immense impudence of these newly uniformed men, and the delight which fills their breats when they are able to catch some one in the offense of evil-doing, while the really vile and guilty are allowed to go unnoticed—provided they are rewarded for being blind. ### PRETTY MOTHERS.

"Mrs. M——seems devoted to her children," said one friend to another.

"Yes," replied the other, "but the children don't seem devoted to her. Her own shrink from her, and mine run and hide whenever she comes into the house."

"Why?" asked the first, in great astonishment.

"Well, I don't know," answered the other. "I believe it's her clothes and her manner. She is in deep mourning. She is a tall woman, and always wears long sweeping black gowns, with not a vestige of white about them. She speaks in a mournful tone, and sighs every few minutes. Children naturally shrink from any such gloom as that. They are very impressionable. They feel manner and appearance very deeply. While they are little, all their impressions come through their senses, for they have not yet become conscious of themselves. Now, if Mrs. M—— believed what she professed, she would consider it a duty to shake off her despondency, instead of encouraging its expression. She would know that she had more to be thankful for than to be sorrowful about. And she would know particularly that the duty we owe to the living is more imperative and essential than the duty we owe to the dead.

"She should know that she has no right to shadow the lives of her little children with such an unhealthy atmosphere. It is her business to fill their lives with sunshine and gladness, with lively actions and cheery words and bright smiles. No matter how devoted a mother is, if her speech and face and general appearance are forever associated in a child's mind with depressing and uncomfortable feelings, how is he going to learn that God meant man to be happy in being good, and not miserable?"

"Yes, that is true," returned the other. "I believe mothers should keep themselves young for the sake of their children. If other women owe it to their contemporaries to make themselves agreeable to the eye, and consequently more youthful, mothers are doubly such debtors. They owe it to the next generation as well."

"Practically it is not hard for a woman to be prettily and brightly dressed at home," said the woman, who seemed to have considered the subject. "If she thinks it right to wear crepe and weeds as a sign and expression of her grief everywhere else, she ought to beautify her person, and look bright and pleasing in the house, and especially in the nursery. Pretty house dresses and tea gowns are so inexpensive and so easy to concoct that nobody can hardly be excused on that score.

"It has always been one of my cardinal doctrines that if a child has a right to any one thing more than another, he has a right to pleasant memories of his childhood. He has a right to have a pretty, gracious mother to remember, and a mournful black-draped one does not fit that demand at all.

"The mother makes the children's weather. All the love and care she can give won't reconcile them to perpetual thunder-clouds and darkness, dashes of rain from her eyes, and cold chills from her voice-tones. Children admire and are proud of pretty mothers more than any one would believe. They like to see and touch bright, pleasant colors. They like to bear them. It is part of their education, and an easy and pleasant part, if we would only think so. No matter what violence Mrs. M—— does to her feelings in the process, I think it is her duty to wear a blue gown and a smile for her baby to see, instead of a black one and a sigh."

Her companion laughed. "Mrs. M—— would call you heretical, my dear."

"Perhaps she would. But no matter—I am telling the truth."—Eva Lovett, in Harper's Weekly.

DE SOTO'S BODY.

"I believe that I helped to bury Don Fernando De Soto," said Oliver Rigeby, a native Louisianian, now at the Southern.

"In 1853 I was living in Baton Rouge, and, in company with a couple of other young men named Davis and Hurin, went up the river on a hunting expedition. We went up above the present site of Port Hudson, where the river makes a sharp bend to the west. There had been a big rise in the river a month before—one of the greatest ever known. We landed on a lot of rubbish that had been swept down by the river, and used some of it to cook our supper. Hurin sat on an old log that appeared to have been washed up from the bottom of the stream, and tapped on it with a hatchet. It gave out a hollow sound, and he began to chip into it. The wood was soft and spongy, and he soon cut through the outer crust, and, putting his hand inside, drew forth a rusty sword.

"We quickly demolished the log, and found it to contain a helmet, badly corroded, and a human skeleton—that of a man apparently 6 feet tall. On one of the bony fingers was a large seal ring, and about the neck was a small chain, to which was suspended a bronze crucifix. We carried the skeleton inland a quarter of a mile and buried it on a little knoll between two large live oak trees. Hurin kept the sword, and Davis appropriated the crucifix. It is said that De Soto's body was incased in a hollow tree and sunk in the Mississippi river in 1542. Whether the skeleton we found was his or not I do not know, but it had every appearance of having lain in the river for centuries."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

WHAT A "RATION" IS.—A ration is the established daily allowance of food for one person. For the United States army it is now composed of the following: Twelve ounces of pork or bacon or canned beef (fresh or corned), or one pound and four ounces of fresh beef, or twenty-two ounces of salt beef, eighteen ounces of soft bread or flour, or sixteen ounces of hard bread, or one pound and four ounces of cornmeal.

To every 100 rations, fifteen pounds of beans or peas, or ten pounds of rice or hominy; ten pounds of green coffee or eight pounds of roasted coffee or two pounds of tea; fifteen pounds of sugar, four quarts of vinegar, one pound eight ounces of star candles, four pounds of soap, four pounds of salt, four ounces of pepper and four ounces of yeast powder to each 100 rations of flour. —St. Louis Republic.

HOW DEBT HURTS FARMERS.— A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer relates a very significant experience when he says that but for the fact that he was heavily in debt he would last fall have bought ten tons of bran at $15 per ton. The bran was necessary for him later on and he had to pay $20 per ton for it, or $50 for the use of $150 for a few months. This story suggests its own moral. No man can afford to be without a few hundred dollars of ready money. No matter how much he owes, he must have cash on hand to do business with. Of course it needs good business judgment to use this ready money only for something that will turn itself quickly, else it will vanish like dew on a summer morning, and the man having spent, perhaps for trifles, what was necessary to his business will be in as bad a fix as ever.

A minister was standing in a public office when another approached and took him by the hand, which he seemed to be shaking very warmly. Suddenly the first raised his left hand and struck the other a terrific blow upon the right hand. Instantly his grasp was loosened, and looking up, the friend who had thus been struck inquired: "Why this?" "When a man," replied the other, "squeezes my hand hard enough for me to feel the bones grate in my fingers, I protect myself without regard to ceremony as soon I can."

"Move on!" said the railway ticket agent. "It's all square."

"Oi know it," was the reply. "That's phwy Oi'm sthandin aroun'. The boss towld me to get a round thrip ticket."—Washington Star.

To Preserve

The richness, color, and beauty of the hair, the greatest care is necessary, much harm being done by the use of worthless dressings. To be sure of having a first-class article, ask your druggist or perfumer for AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It is absolutely superior to any other preparation of the kind. It restores the original color and fullness to hair which has become thin, faded, or gray. It keeps the scalp cool, moist, and free from dandruff. It heals itching humors, prevents baldness, and imparts to a silken texture and lasting fragrance. No toilet can be considered complete without this most popular and elegant of all hair-dressings.

"My hair began turning gray and falling out when I was about 25 years of age. I have lately been using Ayer's Hair Vigor, and it is causing a new growth of hair of the natural color."—R. J. Lowry, Jones Prairie, Texas.

"Over a year ago I had a severe fever, and when I recovered, my hair began to fall out, and what little remained turned gray. I tried various remedies, but without success, till at last I began to ### Leave it to God.

Is the way dark, my child, leading to light?
Is your heart's music a song in the night?
Grieve not, some weary one listens and smiles.
Some one who sorrows its sweet air beguiles;
Why should we hope to walk hedged by a song?
Jesus has trod the path, He found it long,
We can but follow where Jesus has trod,
Leave it to God, my child, leave it to God.

Daily some hope is slain, daily some cross,
Lighter our wings shall grow after each loss;
Less left to hold us so close to the earth,
Feel we the mighty throes of a new birth;
Furl we our untried wings, upward we rise,
See in the distance the soul's Paradise.
Lie we no longer so close to the sod,
Leave it to God, my child, leave it to God.

All hearts have Calvarys, all lives a tomb,
All have their Easters dispelling the gloom.
After the long defeat, after the cross,
After the weariness, after the loss
Loose we our sandals, to rest lay us down.
After Gethsemane cometh the crown.
Worthy to follow where Jesus has trod,
Leave it to God, my child, leave it to God.

Tell Him the bitterness, tell Him the woe,
Tell Him temptations lie thick as you go;
No one to help you, child? Jesus has been Tempted as you are, but yet without sin.
Reaches His hand to you, give Him your own,
There is no sorrow that He hath not known.
We are but walking where Jesus has trod,
Leave it to God, my child, leave it to God.

—Nelly Hart Woodworth, in Boston Journal.

THE BARRED GATE.

The house faced the river; it was built in the style of half a century ago, with the overhanging roof, and with porches extended entirely around both floors.

The rough yellowish stucco of the outer walls was stained and cracked in places, and if there was ever paint on the dull, dark shutters, or on the post and railings of the galleries, time had touched it with an effacing finger.

I saw this much looking straight up, for the house stood on a steep hill rising abruptly from the Kentucky side of the Ohio river.

The grass on the ascent was green for March, but here and there were rifts in the verdure showing an uneven, sallow sod beneath.

Separating the old place from the river road was a low stone wall, whose wide iron gate, with a massive stone column at either side, was directly opposite the front door of the dwelling; this gate was made to spring open from the middle, but as I paused here with the intention of entering I saw, wound many times around the latch, a chain of iron, heavy and rusted.

"No thoroughfare, evidently," I thought, and looking beyond the barred gate, my opinion was verified: there was no remote sign of any path leading upward to the house—nothing but an undulating steep of grass, diversified by a few forlorn brown shrubs.

My position was embarrassing; I was a young physician newly located in the little town a mile away, and had been summoned to attend some one in this grim structure frowning down upon me.

To assail the inviolable sanctity of the gate might affront those who had so inhospitable secured it, so I determined to look for another approach.

Walking on, I reached a break in the wall, and saw a thread of a path winding upward, less toward the house than to a small white-washed cabin in a dimple of the hillside.

As I went up this path and neared the cabin door, an aged negress appeared on the threshold.

Her white eyebrows gave a witch-like look to her withered black face, and a solitary tooth visable when she spoke enhanced this effect; her eyes twinkled with almost youthful fire, and a scarlet turban, coquettishly knotted about her head, gave token that still in these ashes lived an unquenchable spark of vanity.

"Wartch yo' wan'?" she asked, somewhat suspiciously. I explained my business.

"This is the house, is it not?—the old Cabell place?" I asked in conclusion.

"Yaas—dis heah's de place, sho' nuff. Lord Gord, chil! wha' yo' come f'om to ax seek-laike question 's dat arr? I t'ought de hull state o' Kaintucky knowed wha' our fambly libbed—de Cabell fambly."

I said my ignorance arose from the fact that I had only lived in Kentucky for two weeks, and asked to be directed to the house.

"Yo' come erlong in heah an' tek a cheer," replied the old woman, grimly; "cuz yo' ain' gwin' up to de hoose—no buddy ain' been up tha' fo' yeahs 'cep' me; ole Miss' hes reumatics, 'n' yo' kin set ri' down heah 'n' write off a 'scriptions to kunjur it out'n heh laig. Yo' don' hev to see rheumatics to know how to kunjur 'em."

In vain I explained the necessity of seeing the sufferer before I could give medical advice; my hostess was adamant.

When she declared she was only obeying orders, I surrendered, and wrote directions for a liniment which I knew could do no harm, and might do much good.

The old woman took the slip of paper with great wariness, and placed it on the table under a corncob pipe; then she sat down in a great wooden chair, and folding her arms in a position of much comfort, began to question me concerning myself with that playful curiosity for which her sex is noted, without reference to age, color, or previous condition of servitude.

"So you's f'om de fur norf, is yo'?" she commented, rocking herself to and fro.

"Dat's how come yo' ain' hearn tell o' de Cabells.

"Dee's a gret family once, man! Hum-m! I 'member w'en dat arr hoose up yan wuz de fines' place on de ribber road, and back in de qua'ter wuz mo' niggers 'n' yo' cud shake a stick at.

"Dat's long erbout de time w'en Marse Cabell done mah'ied Miss C'leste Dupray down souf in Weesyanner; dat's heh whar's ole Miss' now, up yander wi' de misery in heh laig.

"But dem days she wuz a mighty well-favored gal, I tole yo'!

"Hed de blackes' ha'r I evah lain my eyes on, cl'ar down to heh knees, an' de w'ites' skin Lord evah wrap' roun' any po' flaish'n blood on top de yuth. De hull county wen' wild ovah heh, and Marse Cabell, he fahly wo'shups heh; he wuz mighty nigh fohty yeahs ole w'en he done got mah'ied, an' I've hearn 'im tell how he nevah sot eyes on any woman he wanted fo' a wife twell he met Miss C'leste at a big doin's in Noo Erleans.

"Yaas, she wuz a heap younger'n him, but dee libbed mighty happy togerr, sutiny; an' w'en Marse Gar wuz bo'n, 'peared like dee didn' need nuffin' mo'.

"Ed-gar wuz he sholy name; but we all took to call'n' 'im Marse Gar, an' de neckname stuck to 'im arterwa'ds.

"I nussed him ri' heah at de breas' wi' my own lill' 'Liphalet, an' if I hubbed one dem chillun mo'n de urr, I cyarn' tole yo' which 'twuz.

"Marse Gar, he wuz fine lookin' laike he maw; dee Cabells wuz big'n tall, an' showed dar good blood, but dee hed ha'r dat would a been red if't growed on any urr haids.

"Marse Gar tuk arter he maw,—big, spa'klin' eyes 'n cl'ar skinned, 'n high-tempered, jes' laike heh;—an' yo' heah me! she had de temper!

"She'd pitch any t'ing at yo' she' lay heh han's on w'en she's right mad; and dem black eyes'd flash laike dar wuz fiah in 'em; an' dar'd be a lill' roun' red spot bu'nin' in her cheek, an' dem times she talk a gibberish yo' couldn' understan',—Frainch, I blebe 'twuz; I min' two wo'ds us' to soun' sumpin laike saker dew.

"She jes' boun' up in dat boy; we'n he growed big 'nough to go to college, de way she tuk on would a tu'ned ha'r gray. She knowed he hed to go, 'cuz he's risin' seventeen, an' Doctah Spaldin' couldn' teach 'im no mo', 'cuz Marse Gar knowed mo'n he did hisse'f.

"Old marse, he felt it bad's miss' done, but 'twarn' he way to rar' an' pitch; Marse Gar wuz de ev'y breaf ob 'im; but dough he wuz gettin' right ole, he nevah tu'ned a ha'r de day Marse Gar let'.

"W'en de kerrige roll' off wi' dat boy lookin' back an' wavin' he han'chee to he maw an' paw, dee bofe stan' up right straight on de po'ch, an' smile an' nod dee haids to 'im; but w'en the kerrige tu'n de cu've in de road, marse he jes' walk in the house quick, an' go in de libra'y an' shet de do' ha'd; an' miss', she fell in a heap on de po'ch wi' heh high heels clickin' on de flo', an' heh ha'r streamin' down, an' a laughin' and a screamin', an' a gurglin' twell me an' Daphne, whar wuz heh maid, cut her stay laces, an' fotch heh up to baid, an' wuk wi' heh twell she git quieted down.

"I don' rightly min' how long 'twuz 'fo' Marse Gar got shet o' college; ev'y time he kem home he'd growed a heap; an' w'en he kem home fo' good he hed de cutes' lill' mistache yo' evah looked at,—dark, and cu'lin' up at the en's, an' ev'y gal in de hull county wuz runnin' arter 'im, an' 'im mighty perlite 'n' fair-spoken to 'em, 'n' all dat; but he say, 'Ump-m!'—he ain' gwin' pick out a wife twell he fin's a lady putty as he maw! Gord a mighty! how dat tickled Miss! An' she did look sprightly 'nough to be Marse Gar's sister showly, an' der wuzn' a gal in de hull state could tech heh.

"Ole marse wuz gettin' mighty gray den, an' he us't to set out on de po'ch right smart an' talk to eve'y one 'bout whar all gret things Marse Gar wuz gwine to do w'en he sta' out'n de worl'.

"Hi-yoo-oo! King o' Grace!—de don' know de youth was gwin' trem'le wi' de cannon an he rip' open wi' shot; dee didn't know't den, but dee know't soon enough.

"Yaas, Lord, w'en dat wah kem, it toah de kentry to pieces an' it toah fambies apart, too.

"One way de wah didn't git ve'y neah us—nurr way it got mighty clost. Yo' kin go out dar on Lexin'ton Pike any time an' see wha' de wah lef' some stone wuks behin' it; dat's all de closer it got dat a way, but—

"Yo' heah me—marse 'n' miss wuz soufeners from the wud go!— an' deed, sir, up and talk deese'fs hoa'se 'bout de durn Yankees; Marse Gar de don' say much, but he look mighty cuyus, an' one day he tells 'em he gwine fight.

"'Fo' my kentry,' he says right plain; 'yo' onderstan' me an' I hopes yo'll fo' gi'me; I loves Kaintucky and I loves de souf—but I loves my kentry mo'!'

"Hm-m-m! dem wuz days. Ole marse 'n' miss' de begged an' cried an' raved 'round, an' high wo'ds passed, but dee couldn't move 'im hide er ha'r.

"'Yo' no son o' mine 'f yo' dar raise han' gins' de onsulted souf!' roahs ole marse.

"'My bitteres' curse follow yo', ungrateful boy whom I have loved mo'n I have my Gord!' says miss, w'ite ez de daid 'cep' for dem blazing eyes.

"An' Marse Gar he tuk it all wi' he lips set close 'n' he haid up; he nevch gin 'em a wo'd back, an' he walk down 'n' out de big gate yon, and miss' she stan' in do'way wi' one han' raised an' her lips movin', dough yo' cyarn heah no soun'.

"I run out in de road arter 'im, a bawlin' laike a calf, 'cuz I lubbed 'im an' mebby I won' get to see 'im no mo,' an' he put he haid down on my shoulder wha' it us't' lay w'en he's lill' baby, an' de tears stream f'om he eyes an' he say, 'He'm bless yo', Mammy,' an' he gone.

"Miss' she ain' hev no 'steries dis time—she hes brain feveh, an' w'en she gets out'n dat arr bed, heh har's done turn w'ite ez heh skin.

"Ole Marse he fail ev'y day, an' all dat winteh de bofe sot oveh de fiah in de settin' room and never see a libbin' soul whar kem to de house.

"To'des spring ole Marse git so feeble hit pass froo my mind she's fixin' to die fo' sho'; he hedn't speak o' Marse Gar all winteh, but he got so now he don't talk 'boot nuffin e'se.

"'Peahed laike he wuz gittin' kin' o' teched, az he talk laike he t'ink Miss' hed run Marse Gar off de place.

"'Wha's my boy!' he keep axin'; 'C'leste, wha's my boy wi' you own putty eyes. I want 'im, C'leste. I ain' got long to live an' I want my boy—de son o' my old age.'

"Firs' off, she wouldn' heah to 'im; she jes' say 'Meeser-ruble man! yo' have no son.' Den one day ole Marse broke laike.

"'Woman!' he say, jes' dat deep down voice, 'heartless mother! yo' have sacrifice yo' chil' to you infunnel prejudice—are yo' satisfied? Are you satisfied?'

"'No, no!' I hearn her say; 'Oh, Gar! Gar! what is Norf or Souf compared to my losin' for one look at yo' face!'

"Never min' now, ev'ything gwine come right, thinks I, an' sho' nough, dee wuz lette's writ, an' 'fo long a big one kivered wi' maa'ks kim from Marse Gar, an' Miss' she pur' nigh eat it up 'fo' she read it.

"It tole how he hea't wuz glad to know dee done forgib 'im, an' how he's cap'n now an' gwine be gin'rul yit, an' he's got fu'lough to come home to see we all and he be tha' laike it wuz dis Fursday week, an' he sen's he bes' lub to mammy—yo' heah dat?—to me?

"Soon's ole Marse hearn Marse Gar's comin', he picked right up an' o'dered big doin's to welcome 'im on de night he git dar.

"Miss' she lowed she rufer hev 'im all to dar se'fs, an' Kaintucky ain' no place to welcome a Union sojer, an' anyhow, dee ain' no gentmen to vite, uz so many done gone to de wah.

"Ole Marse he say he means eve'y one to know he forgibs he son, an's fur's Kaintucky's 'sairned, she's settin' on de top fence rail wi' her skirts hilt up, an's long as she ain't git down one side er de urr an' fight, she ain' got no right to holler 'go it!' to eiver pa'ty.

"So dee wuz brilin's, and bakin's, an' reg'lar hello-boys all over de place! Su' de highes' tone families 'roun' got an invite, an' de black folks wen' flutterin' 'roun laike hens on hot griddles.

"Hi-yo! I ain' forgit dat night t' ell I twang my ha'p in glory! Marse Gar wuz comin' on de se'in erclock train, whar stop at de cross roads a mile behin' our hoose, an' he warn't goin' know nuffin' 'boot de inf'a twell he got cl'ar to de gate.

"Yea'ly's six de folks 'gin to 'rive an' de fine ladies—yo' don' see none laike 'em since de wah; dem wuz ladies den, whar couldn' tu'n dee han' to do a hek—well, dee kem steppin' out dee kerriges, ah' Daphne 'sco'ted 'em up styars to lay off de wrups.

"Sholy de place look laike de Hem'ly Kingdom dat time, wi' de to'ches, 'n lante'ns an' flowe's, an' lights shinin' in ev'ry window, an' de rastle o' silk gounds.

"Miss' she tuk de staa'ch out'n ev'y las'', one ob 'em fer a fac'! She stan' up gran' an' tall, wi' her w'ite ha's piled on top heh head, an' heh skin laike de cotton w'en it buss open, an' heh black eyes flashin' m'on de di'mon's in heh yeah's!

"She woah a w'ite satin gound wi' big bunches o' roses weaved in all oveh de groun', an' made wi' a gret pleat at de back ob de naick an' fallin' way down loose in a long train. An' Daphne say Miss C'leste done ax her twenty times dat day ef w'ite har mek heh look ole, an' ef Marse Gar t'ink she ain' so putty laike she us' t' be. An' I pusson'y knowed dat Pop-eyed Joe, what wuz my husban' an' a trifl'n' yellow scamp, wuz sont way to town to git a lill' pot o' red paint, so I spicionated how come Miss's cheeks dat lubby pink, 'dough Daphne sayed dat's de furses' time paint eveh tech Miss C'leste's face, an' she longed to heh w'en she's Mamselle Dupray down in Weesyanner.

"Dee wuz all a waitin', cuz twuz oveh train time, an' Pop-eyed Joe'd been gone wi' de kerridge a right smaat spell. I wuz standin down at the big gate whar hed a light on each pos' an evehgreen weafs oveh it, an' I hed on a new silk han'cher an gole rings in my yeahs, an' I look down de road an' putty soon I see sumpin' tu'n de cu've.

"'Heah dee come!' I hollered, an' Fiddler Ike struck up a ma'ch, an' ev'y one kin troopin' out de house.

"Yaas—Marse Gar neveh broke he wo'd; he kim home dat night sho' nough.

"De wuz six sojers on one side an' th'ee on t'urr, steppin' long slow wi' dar heads down, an' Marse Gar layin' quiet 'twix 'em, laike he us't lay in mammy's lap w'en he wuz a lill chile.

"On'y he would neveh wake up no mo'.

"Dee cyat' 'em in froo de big gate an' up de steep parf, an' de tole how he got shot in a skeermish jez ez' he's 'bout ready to start home.

"Miss she neveh shaid a teah f'om dat time twell dis; she jes say rale quiet, 'Tie up de gate; let no foot c'er pass throo that unholy space; I cursed my boy as he went out thar, an' A'mighty God has punish n.e.'

"Dat's fur why de gate's chained. No one ever kem in thar sence. W'en de riveh rises, de yeller watch comes creepin' onder it, but nuffin' e'se comes, 'less a w'ite ghos' stan's thar sometimes.

"Ole Miss', she porful ole now, she libs alone up yan, an' she sets all day an' many a night by dat middle winder an' star's at de gate laike she sees sumpin' thar we all cyarn' see." —Era Wilder McGlasson, in Romance.

A NIGHT WITH THE POACHERS.

All being ready, the old man steps aboard with the spear, and takes his place in the bow. The torch in front is lighted, and with a crackle like the frying of grease the flame leaps upward, and with its yellow glare lights up the bushes, the nearer tree-trunks, and the surface of the water. Quickly stepping in also, the stern-man, with a long pole in lieu of paddle, gives a push or two, and the canoe glides out on the surface of the pool. But it is too quickly done, for the pool, shallow there, is lighted to the very bottom as with the light of day, and several huge black objects move away into the deep and somber places. With a splash the spear is quickly thrust down into the water after a departing shadow, but it is too late. Then the canoe is cautiously driven toward the deeper place at the head of the pool, and as it nears the other end, one, two, six, ten, twenty great shadowy forms dart, one after the other, toward the foot of the pool, past them.

Down goes the spear, not with a splash, but with a steady thrust. It strikes the bottom, but the fish is already several feet away, and it is drawn back empty. Several times this happens. Has the old man lost his former skill? Soon he suspects that the new pole, like a bright streak moving toward them, frightens them.

A new supply of bark is needed, so they return to the camp. The spear is held over the fire until it is blackened from end to end and is no longer conspicuous. So confident is the old hunter of getting a fish, that he makes ready to eat him at once. He pokes up the fire, throws on some fresh wood, and sets a kettle of water to boil. He peels some potatoes, which he has brought along (perhaps for the very purpose), and puts them into the water.

Meanwhile the salmon have recovered, doubtless, from their first scare. So, with a fresh supply of torches, they start again,—this time with more deliberation, for the long black pirogue has not entered the length of itself upon the pool, before down goes the spear. Hand over hand it is pushed, and, it seems, will never stop. It reaches the sandy bottom and sticks there. It sways as if something is tugging at the end of it. Then, as he would lift a load of hay on a pitchfork, the old man gradually raises the end of the spear. Out comes a black nose, and there is a flapping and splashing of fins and powerful tail, and the first salmon is caught. Quickly the old man draws the fish to the side of the canoe, lifts it on board, caught and held firmly by the stout jaws. It is released, and lies upon the bottom of the canoe—only a four-pounder. Only a four-pounder, the smallest one of the whole crowd, when plenty of them looked as big as stove-pipes! And there was one, much bigger than any of the rest, which looked fully four feet long. Sometimes, when those big fellows do get caught, the spearman lets go entirely, and when the fish is exhausted with the violence of its efforts, it may be easily drawn in. It would be hard to say which is more excited over the capture—the stranger who never saw such a thing done before, or the old man, to whom all the enthusiasm of his younger days seems to have returned.—May St. Nicholas.

THE WORTH OF A MAIDEN.

"Miss Keedick—Dora," began young Mr. Hipple, "Dora, dearest, I love you."

"So does Mr. Spatt," replied Dora.

"I know it; but he can't love you as I do. It isn't in him."

The choir of St. Thomas's Catholic church will give a strawberry festival in the opera house next Friday evening. Among the features of the entertainment will be Tommy Donnelly of Springfield, well known as one of the best comedians on the road, who will be sure to amuse. Dancing will follow until 1 o'clock.

Joseph Bonville of Thorndike, employed as a water boy on the works of the Palmer and Monson Electric Company at Blanchardville, caught his left arm on a nail Tuesday, and tore a three-cornered gash about two inches long in the flesh just below the elbow, necessitating several stitches to close the wound.

The county commissioners have been appointed a commission to assess the damages claimed by J. H. Keith, John O'Neil, Jerry Rourke, Mrs. Joseph King and O. W. Studley for the flowing of their land by the five feet added to the height of the dam of the Palmer and Monson Electric Company, and viewed the premises Tuesday.

The attention of the town fathers is called to the height of some of the awnings over the entrances to the business places. It would not be a bad idea to have them all at least six feet from the sidewalk. The obstructing of the sidewalk with merchandise of various kinds is another nuisance which would bear looking after.

The men's meetings at the Congregational church are proving very interesting. They are held Tuesday evenings, and will be continued only for a limited time. The subject for discussion next Tuesday evening will be, "What can busy men do for busy men to bring them to Christ?" The men of the town are cordially invited to be present.

D. F. Holden shot a small owl one day last week which had been annoying the other birds in the vicinity of his residence on West Main street, and a day or two later discovered a nest containing four young ones in one of the oak trees, the birds being half grown but not quite ready to fly. It was the female which he shot, but the male bird is caring well for the family at present.

The school committee held a meeting yesterday afternoon, but the business transacted was mostly routine. As far as known there will be only two vacancies to fill in the corps of teachers, Mr. Cross at Three Rivers and Miss Smith at Thorndike having resigned. Rev. W. H. Hart, A. B. C. Deming and W. A. Breckenridge were appointed a sub-committe to visit the school buildings and report as to needed repairs; also on supplies.

The Eastern Hampden Y. P. S. C. E. Union will hold a convention in the Congregational church at Stafford Springs next Friday, with sessions afternoon and evening. In the afternoon Rev. F. E. Jenkins of Palmer will give an address on "Developing the Latent Power," and in the evening Rev. G. S. Butler of Three Rivers, will give an address on "The Holy Spirit." Other speakers are expected to be present and take part.

Timothy Connell was before the district court Monday for drunkenness, and was probated until the 30th. Yesterday Merrill Tracy was charged with drunkenness, but indignantly denied the allegation, and the matter will be argued next Friday. Charles Connor of Warren was probated for one month because of two intimate acquaintance with intoxicants. This morning Jacob Burleigh of Ludlow was fined $10 for indecent exposure, which he paid.

"A Happy Youth Within the Range of Right," will be the subject of the Sunday morning sermon at the Congregational church. All will be made welcome, but a special invitation is given to young people to be present. In the evening at 7 o'clock the Y. P. S. C. E. will hold a missionary meeting in the main audience room of the church. The society has secured Rev. H. P. Beach, recently from China, as the speaker of the evening. The church should be filled.

The Universalist ministers of Western Massachusetts had an enjoyable gathering in the church of the denomination at this place Monday forenoon. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Harry Blackford of Monson, after which Rev. W. W. Gleason of Warren read a paper on "How to Reach the Unchurched," which was discussed by Revs. Blackford of Monson, Holden of Amherst, Crosley of Springfield, Farnham of Charlton and Moulton of Palmer. Dinner was served at the Converse House.

Children's Sunday was observed last Sunday at both the Baptist and Universalist churches. At the former the pastor preached an interesting sermon to the children in the morning, and there was a concert by the children of the Sunday school in the evening. The church was handsomely decorated with flowers and potted plants, while numerous birds in cages sang sweetly during the services. At the Universalist church the pastor preached from the text, "Thou hast the dew of thy youth," and an interesting feature was the baptism of ten children. The floral decorations were profuse and elegant. The concert by the children of the Sunday school, in the evening, was well rendered.

The graduating exercises of the class of '93 of the high school will be held in the opera house next Wednesday evening, commencing at 8 o'clock, with the following programme:

Edward Sharratt and Miss Emma Golden were united in marriage Wednesday by Rev. Mr. Causey of Lynn. Mr. Flemming of Enfield acted as best man, and Miss Annie Golden, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Sharratt left for a short wedding tour, after which they will reside in Bondsville.

Children's Sunday was observed here last Sunday. The M. E. church was prettily decorated with potted plants and ferns, and a number of canary birds in cages sang their praises with the children. The infant class did great credit to the teacher, Mrs. O. A. Parent. Presiding Elder Thorndike preached in the evening.

A terrible accident occurred last Friday, when Bessie, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. May, was fatally burned. She, with another child, being left alone, started a fire in the shed. The flames caught the clothing of the little one and she was frightfully burned before assistance could be had. Dr. Anger was called, and administered all relief possible, and Dr. Holbrook came later. She died four hours from the time of the accident. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon. The parents have the sympathy of the community.

There was a gathering of the Russell family at Richard Russell's Friday night. The oldest person present was Mrs. Richard Russell, Sr., who is grandmother to 66 children, and great-grandmother to eight, the youngest being four years old. The evening was spent pleasantly with songs and recitations from Burns, after which ice cream and cake were served, and before the "wee sma' hours" they parted, hoping it would not be 20 years before they would meet again, as it had been that long since they had all been together.

The last game in the series between the Palmer and Thorndike grammar school ball clubs was played here on Friday last, and resulted in a victory for the home team by a score of 8 to 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Potter and sons Arthur and Ernest were the guests of Mrs. George Murdock and Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Murdock on Saturday, returning to their home in Springfield Sunday evening.

On Friday morning the pupils of the grammar school presented their teacher, Harold M. Dean, with a gentleman's dressing case as a mark of their appreciation of him as a teacher. Mr. Dean leaves to-day for his home in Vermont.

The many friends and acquaintances of Maurice Coffee, who at one time was a resident of this place, will be pained to learn of his death, which occurred recently. Mr. Coffee moved from this place about 17 years ago with his parents.

Harold M. Dean of the grammar school has finished teaching here and will go to his home in Vermont. Mr. Dean will be greatly missed by the members of the Columbian Band, of which he was a member and a strong addition. During his stay in town he has made many friends, who would be pleased to see him return when school opens again in September.

Another ball club has been organized here, this time the clothroom boys of No. 2 mill. They are anxious to meet their brethren of Three Rivers and Bondsville in friendly games of ball some time in the near future.

Many from this place will attend the graduating exercises of the high school and also the reception, which will be held in Holden's Opera House on Wednesday evening next. Maud Louise Parker and Michael Robert Lyons are the only ones from this place in the class of '93.

A Skeleton Found.

While men were busy at work digging near the Gerald and Henry place on Thursday they dug up what appeared to be the skeleton of a man. The length would indicate that the man was tall. When disturbed the skin fell away to dust, but the ribs and bones were preserved in a fair condition. It is thought that the remains were buried there some 60 or 70 years ago, and were perhaps those of an Indian.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Walker was the guest of Mrs. Joseph Geer over Sunday.

Mrs. Damon of New London is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Twogood.

Thomas Hartnett is having a new barn built. Capen Brothers are doing the work.

J. B. Brown spent most of this week in Amherst, among friends and acquaintances.

Mrs. Eugene Sikes, who has been ill with rheumatic fever for some time, is now recovering.

Mrs. Squires of Belchertown was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Alice Hillman, Wednesday.

Rev. Joseph Marchand is spending a vacation in Montreal and other places of interest in Canada.

Charles Wood sustained the loss of a cow this week, the animal having died of disease of the horns.

Mr. and Mrs. Hillman intend to spend next Sunday in Northampton, at Mr. Hillman's home.

Rev. and Mrs. Webb of West Newton were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Provost most of this week.

Mr. Butler has returned to his home in Vermont, after an extended visit with his son, Rev. G. H. Butler.

Charles Russell has purchased a pair of handsome black ponies, which promise to make excellent drivers.

Mrs. P. A. Forte and family intend soon to spend a few weeks' vacation in Canada, among relatives and friends.

Mrs. Peck is visiting friends and relatives in Rutland, Vt., and is expected to return to town about the middle of next week.

Mrs. Desmarais, who has been confined to her home by illness for the past few weeks, is now very seriously ill with typhoid fever.

Miss Lena Crossberry or Brattleboro, Vt., is the guest of Mrs. F. W. Lavene, and intends to remain in town about three weeks.

The grounds around the new Union church parsonage are being graded and terraced, which will add much to its already picturesque appearance.

A large delegation of the people of the Baptist church attended the Westfield Baptist Association's Sunday school convention at Springfield this week.

N. K. Rogers is making a great improvement in the external appearance of his residence on Main street by building an annex and piazza, and putting in a bow window.

Fred Hillman gave a reception to his Sunday school class Wednesday evening. Ice cream and cake were freely partaken of by the boys, and a very enjoyable evening spent.

Mr. Webb of West Newton, who has occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church for the last two Sundays, with his wife spent a few days this week among the parishioners of the church.

Five of the members of the American Co-operative Union, one of the endowment orders which was closed up by the state, have this week received a dividend from the receiver, the amount in some instances being nearly as much as they had paid in, which is quite unusual.

The game of ball between the overseers of the Otis Company's mill at Ware and the overseers of the mill in this place will be played to-morrow afternoon. The Ware men are to be accompanied by their wives, and a lunch will be served by Caterer Barr, of Springfield in Jenks's grove, which adjoins the ball ground.

About the first of July Mr. Anderson, an evangelist, and Mr. Parkette, a singer, are expected to come here and hold revival meetings for a few weeks. It is proposed now that a tent be erected, spacious enough to hold the large audiences that these gentlemen are sure to attract; besides, at this time of year it is considered by many to be much cooler to have outdoor services.

Last Saturday evening N. M. Nichols started from here on his bicycle and rode to Court Square in Springfield, returning without leaving the saddle, and made the trip in two hours and nine minutes. When Mr. Nichols returned he was welcomed by a large number of wheelmen, accompanied by the Three Rivers band, and received congratulations on the accomplishment of the feat.

These scholars have been perfect in attendance during the term of school just closed: First primary—Vina Freak, Laura Marien, Lester Carroll; second primary—John Connor, Georgie Gokey, Mary Marsalais, Albina Masseur; third primary—Albert Grise; second intermediate—Charles E. Barber, Eva M. Dunn, Nellie E. Lupien; Delia B. O'Connor, Mabel I. Russell; grammar—Alice S. Lupien, Clayton W. Barnes, William F. Morin.

He Made a Mistake.

While Mrs. N. M. Nichols was returning to her home after being at the post office Monday evening, she was followed by a man whom she had never seen, but who evidently was hurrying to overtake her, and as she reached the corner of Maple and Main streets the fellow called to her to wait, but not recognizing the person Mrs. Nichols thought the best thing for her to do was to hasten to get indoors before the fellow could come up to her; but he commenced to run and finally caught hold of her dress before she could get inside. Mr. Nichols, during this time, was on the common with other overseers, who were making arrangements for the ball game Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Nichols hurried in this direction and met her husband, but being so frightened could say nothing, and he assisted her home. On coming to the dooryard fence the man was still standing there, and Mr. Nichols called Officer Lavene, who quickly went to the place to find out what was wrong. Seeing the man and being told by Mrs. Nichols that he had assaulted her, Mr. Lavene inquired of him what he was standing there for. It proved to be Alec Fredette, who said that he had made a mistake in the person, and was sorry the affair had happened. He said that he had arranged with another persod to meet him on the street that evening, and thought that Mrs. Nichols was that person. It is rumored that a warrant has been issued for his arrest, and that he has left town, but he was seen here yesterday. This occurrence demonstrated the necessity of having an officer paid for patrolling the streets in the evenings and dispersing the crowds who either roam aimlessly about the streets or lounge on corners and make men and women who are attending to their own business the target of vulgar expressions. Many of the citizens are in favor of having an officer especially paid for the purpose of promoting an orderly state of things in the evenings and on Sabbath days, and all hope that some provision will soon be made for the safety and comfort of wives and daughters while on the streets.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, June 10, 1893.

The Senate, Thursday, upon that sober second thought which may have been the pressure of corporate interests and the lobby, deliberately turned to the worst side of the bills to prevent stock-watering by gas, electric light, street railway and water corporations, and rejected them all. The votes were very close, and any sweeping criticism must have saving clauses, but the thing was done and it looks at this date as if it was bad politics as well as corporation legislation.

The plan to tear down the state house and to build a new one has been checked for at least one year. The finance committee reported unanimously against it, and had their report promptly accepted in the House under a suspension of the rules.

The House has voted, 68 to 93, not to investigate the state gas commission, though some hard things were said about it by both Republicans and Democrats.

The House on Thursday passed a bill giving the governor absolute power to remove members of the prison commission.

With the prorogation of the Legislature a few minutes after six o'clock Saturday morning, the record of the session passes into history. Governor Russell signed 479 acts and 113 resolves. He vetoed two bills and suffered two to become law without his signature. Two very important bills, the Lyford-Malone bill to compel the Bay State Gas Company to cancel its note of $4,500,000, and the rapid transit bill, were not settled until well into Saturday. The fight over the gas bill was as much political as commercial, and it was politics that settled the matter. Two leading Republican senators took the problem in hand after the Senate, by a tie vote of 16 to 16, had refused to pass the bill to be engrossed. Their argument was sound, too, and work was earnest, timely and successful. They said that Mayor Matthews had won all the honor he possibly could already out of the investigation, and that it would not hurt him to defeat the bill, while it would hurt the Republican party greatly in the campaign, as the Democrats would be sure to make a political crime of Republican failure to protect the interests of the people and of their yielding to a corrupt gas ring if the bill was defeated. This was all true, and some Democrats have been sorry since the vote that the bill was not defeated by Republicans. These senators were Messrs. Parkman of Suffolk and Butler of Bristol, and they showed good sense in their action. The gas ring was hard at work to defeat the bill, but could not resist the combined forces of public opinion and political expediency that were working against them.

In addition to the rapid transit bill the Legislature enacted a bill for a subway under Tremont street in Boston, if the city council approves. It is to extend from near Boylston street to Scollay square, or some point further north where ready union can be effected with the surface tracks. It is said that this underground road, a mile long, can be made for $800,000, fit for car tracks but $2,000,000 is allowed, so that it may be wide, light, dry and clean, with room for the pipes and wires which crowd the soil and the air overhead. Many think that the rapid transit bill will not amount to anything, while others expect that a road will be built under it.

This Legislature has held out well to the end in its good quality which was noticed earlier. At the beginning of the year all observers waited with apprehension. Certainly I had a sort of expectation that they would do something to disgrace themselves and the state, and that the air of the state house would again be filled with rumors of corruption as it was last year. It will be remembered by some that the Legislature of 1892 was the worst in reputation of any we have had for a long time, and that reputation was apparently deserved. Well, the first thing to be noticed about the Legislature of 1893 was that it was not doing bad things. Then, as they got into their work they did it faithfully and well. As the time came on when scandals are liable to break out, nothing appeared, so we concluded that we had here a pretty good set of men, and it was so stated publicly. That attracted their attention and stimulated them to earn an even better reputation. So the emulation has been wholesome, and really the people of the state may think of the House of 1893 as an honest, diligent and competent body. They need not blush for it, but may well be proud of it, and not feel that the Legislature is invariably bad.

The Senate has not been as good. I have no doubt that there has been corruption there, but probably not as much as is often the case. The pressure of corporations there has been tremendous, especially in the last few days. By their influence the bills were killed which were aimed to prevent the watering of corporation stocks. But there are two sides to that story. The friends of the bills resorted to an evasion to get them by the rules of the House. They were never given a proper hearing before the suitable committees, and they were badly managed. Next year they will doubtless try again.

During the recess of the Legislature two important committees will sit. One will have to report a revision of the corporation laws of the state, and another will codify the tax laws and bring in such new principles as may seem best. This will involve a long hearing on the part of the tax reformers and on the part of those who aim to tax personal property more strictly to stop so much tax-dodging. Both of these matters are of high importance, and the taxation question, particularly, is deep and perplexing, with much doubt, even by the best-informed, as to the wisest policy to pursue. LANDON.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss. June 10th, A. D. 1893.

By virtue of an execution which issued in a judgment recovered in the Superior Court holden at Springfield, within and for the County of Hampden, on the first day of May, D. A. 1893, in favor of George H. Newton of Monson, in said County, and against the goods and estate which were of Gideon S. Moore, late of said Monson, deceased, in the hands and possession of E. A. Day of Hampden, in said County of Hampden, administrator of said goods and estate, I have this day seized and taken all the right, title and interest which the said Gideon S. Moore had at the time of his decease, in and to certain tracts of unincumbered real estate with the buildings thereon, situate in Monson, in said County of Hampden, and bounded and described as follows, to wit; First tract:—Situate in the westerly part of said Monson and bounded as follows: beginning on the west side of the road at a corner of land now or formerly of Hiram Stacey; thence north 72½° west 41 rods to said Stacey's line, to stake and stones; thence north 11½° west, 67 rods to the road; thence north 4¼° east, 79 rods; thence north 15¼° east, 26 rods; thence north 19° east, 31 rods; thence north 67° east, 21 rods, to a corner of land formerly of A. K. Homer; thence south 14° west, 68 rods in said Homer's line; thence south 84° east, 23 rods in said Homer's line to first mentioned road; thence south 31° west, 6 rods on said road; thence south 24¼° west, 84½ rods on said road; thence south 13½° east, 29½ rods on said road; thence south 9° west, 16 rods on said road; thence south 13½° west, 19½ rods on said road, to first mentioned corner, containing 45 acres and 104 rods of land with the buildings thereon, being the same premises conveyed to Gideon S. Moore by William B. Converse, by deed dated June 27th, 1870, and recorded with Hampden County Registry of Deeds, Book 401, Page 265.

Second tract. Being situate in said Monson and bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the north-west corner of the premises at the south-west corner of land of M. Daniell, thence running southerly on the old Monson line about 106 rods to land of Spencer Harvey; thence north-easterly on said Harvey's land about 65 rods to land now or formerly of Gideon S. Moore; thence westerly about 25 rods; thence northerly about 55 rods on land now or formerly of said Gideon S. Moore to land now or formerly of M Daniell; thence westerly on land now or formerly of said Daniell, about 27 rods to the point of departure, containing about 17 acres, more or less, and being the same premises conveyed by John A. Calkins to Gideon S. Moore, by deed dated April 22, 1874, and recorded with Hampden Registry of Deeds, Book 405, Page 546.

Third tract. Being situate in said Monson on the easterly side of the highway opposite the house now or formerly of said Moore, and bounded and described as follows:

The choir of St. Thomas's Catholic church will give a strawberry festival in the opera house next Friday evening. Among the features of the entertainment will be Tommy Donnelly of Springfield, well known as one of the best comedians on the road, who will be sure to amuse. Dancing will follow until 1 o'clock.

Joseph Bonville of Thorndike, employed as a water boy on the works of the Palmer and Monson Electric Company at Blanchardville, caught his left arm on a nail Tuesday, and tore a three-cornered gash about two inches long in the flesh just below the elbow, necessitating several stitches to close the wound.

The county commissioners have been appointed a commission to assess the damages claimed by J. H. Keith, John O'Neil, Jerry Rourke, Mrs. Joseph King and O. W. Studley for the flowing of their land by the five feet added to the height of the dam of the Palmer and Monson Electric Company, and viewed the premises Tuesday.

The attention of the town fathers is called to the height of some of the awnings over the entrances to the business places. It would not be a bad idea to have them all at least six feet from the sidewalk. The obstructing of the sidewalk with merchandise of various kinds is another nuisance which would bear looking after.

The men's meetings at the Congregational church are proving very interesting. They are held Tuesday evenings, and will be continued only for a limited time. The subject for discussion next Tuesday evening will be, "What can busy men do for busy men to bring them to Christ?" The men of the town are cordially invited to be present.

D. F. Holden shot a small owl one day last week which had been annoying the other birds in the vicinity of his residence on West Main street, and a day or two later discovered a nest containing four young ones in one of the oak trees, the birds being half grown but not quite ready to fly. It was the female which he shot, but the male bird is caring well for the family at present.

The school committee held a meeting yesterday afternoon, but the business transacted was mostly routine. As far as known there will be only two vacancies to fill in the corps of teachers, Mr. Cross at Three Rivers and Miss Smith at Thorndike having resigned. Rev. W. H. Hart, A. B. C. Deming and W. A. Breckenridge were appointed a sub-committe to visit the school buildings and report as to needed repairs; also on supplies.

The Eastern Hampden Y. P. S. C. E. Union will hold a convention in the Congregational church at Stafford Springs next Friday, with sessions afternoon and evening. In the afternoon Rev. F. E. Jenkins of Palmer will give an address on "Developing the Latent Power," and in the evening Rev. G. S. Butler of Three Rivers, will give an address on "The Holy Spirit." Other speakers are expected to be present and take part.

Timothy Connell was before the district court Monday for drunkenness, and was probated until the 30th. Yesterday Merill Tracy was charged with drunkenness, but indignantly denied the allegation, and the matter will be argued next Friday. Charles Connor of Warren was probated for one month because of two intimate acquaintance with intoxicants. This morning Jacob Burleigh of Ludlow was fined $10 for indecent exposure, which he paid.

"A Happy Youth Within the Range of Right," will be the subject of the Sunday morning sermon at the Congregational church. All will be made welcome, but a special invitation is given to young people to be present. In the evening at 7 o'clock the Y. P. S. C. E. will hold a missionary meeting in the main audience room of the church. The society has secured Rev. H. P. Beach, recently from China, as the speaker of the evening. The church should be filled.

The Universalist ministers of Western Massachusetts had an enjoyable gathering in the church of the denomination at this place Monday forenoon. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Harry Blackford of Monson, after which Rev. W. W. Gleason of Warren read a paper on "How to Reach the Unchurched," which was discussed by Revs. Blackford of Monson, Holden of Amherst, Crosley of Springfield, Farnham of Charlton and Moulton of Palmer. Dinner was served at the Converse House.

Children's Sunday was observed last Sunday at both the Baptist and Universalist churches. At the former the pastor preached an interesting sermon to the children in the morning, and there was a concert by the children of the Sunday school in the evening. The church was handsomely decorated with flowers and potted plants, while numerous birds in cages sang sweetly during the services. At the Universalist church the pastor preached from the text, "Thou hast the dew of thy youth," and an interesting feature was the baptism of ten children. The floral decorations were profuse and elegant. The concert by the children of the Sunday school, in the evening, was well rendered.

The graduating exercises of the class of '93 of the high school will be held in the opera house next Wednesday evening, commencing at 8 o'clock, with the following programme:

After the exercises the class will give a reception, to which about 500 invitations have been sent out. Class day will be observed next Thursday at 2.30 on the high school grounds, when theclass ivy will be planted

PALMER CENTER.

School closed to-day.

Mrs. J. B. Naylor is visiting her sister, Mrs. B. Dickie, at Dalton.

John Newman is altering the inside of his house and building a shed at the rear. G. W. Lyman is doing the work.

D. J. Mahoney has recently purchased of parties in Gilbertville a photograph gallery with all the fixings, and intends to set it up in his yard. Mr. M. has turned out some very fine work for an amateur.

BONDSVILLE.

Ernest Hobson has a new Warwick bicycle.

Charles Holden is giving his house a coat of paint.

Measles are very prevalent, and some cases are of a severe type.

The family living over Mr. Parent's store has moved to Thorndike.

Willie Rose, who has been so dangerously sick, is slowly improving.

Mrs. Rivers of Ware spent Sunday with her sister, Miss Lettie Loutz.

Richie Russell of Indian Orchard was the guest of his parents over Sunday.

Miss Cora Carver of Northampton was the guest over Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Shaw.

Tenements are very scarce at present; some one would do well to build a few houses to rent.

Mrs. Luther Fairbanks and Miss Lizzie Fairbanks spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morgan.

The Bondsville base ball club will cross bats with the Palmers on the park in Palmer to-morrow at 3 p. m.

Mr. A. Racicot and wife have moved into Mr. Parent's block. Their former home was in Roxton Pond, Canada.

Miss Jessie Ryther will attend the commencement exercises of the Westfield Normal School next week.

Mrs. Celia W. Carroll and son Frank and Miss Annie O'Regan are visiting their sister, Mrs. J. B. Belcher, in Chicopee.

Earl O'Regan goes Monday morning to Tufts to see his brother, C. S. O'Regan, and will return the 21st, at the close of school.

Adolph Girouard, who has been at the Northampton asylum for the past few months, has recovered sufficiently to return home.

Thomas Carmody is moving to the Murdock place, which he bought in the spring, and Mr. Carpenter is to move into the house he vacates.

Mrs. Louis Gambray returned home Friday after spending a week in Millbury with her parents. Her sister, Miss Elmer Foushee, came back with her to spend the summer.

Mrs. John Russell and her two children returned home to Pontiac, R. I., Monday, her husband's mother, Mrs. Richard Russell, Sr., accompanying her to spend the summer for her health.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Tilliston and child of Springfield and Harold Dean of Thorndike were the guests of Charles Armstrong Saturday, also Miss Campbell and Miss Martin, formerly teachers here.

Edward Sharratt and Miss Emma Golden were united in marriage Wednesday by Rev. Mr. Causey of Lynn. Mr. Flemming of Enfield acted as best man, and Miss Annie Golden, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Sharratt left for a short wedding tour, after which they will reside in Bondsville.

Children's Sunday was observed here last Sunday. The M. E. church was prettily decorated with potted plants and ferns, and a number of canary birds in cages sang their praises with the children. The infant class did great credit to the teacher, Mrs. O. A. Parent. Presiding Elder Thorndike preached in the evening.

A terrible accident occurred last Friday, when Bessie, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. May, was fatally burned. She, with another child, being left alone, started a fire in the shed. The flames caught the clothing of the little one and she was frightfully burned before assistance could be had. Dr. Anger was called, and administered all relief possible, and Dr. Holbrook came later. She died four hours from the time of the accident. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon. The parents have the sympathy of the community.

There was a gathering of the Russell family at Richard Russell's Friday night. The oldest person present was Mrs. Richard Russell, Sr., who is grandmother to 66 children, and great-grandmother to eight, the youngest being four years old. The evening was spent pleasantly with songs and recitations from Burns, after which ice cream and cake were served, and before the "wee sma' hours" they parted, hoping it would not be 20 years before they would meet again, as it had been that long since they had all been together.

THORNDIKE.

A party of gypsies are camped near Forest Lake.

Work has commenced on the new band stand.

Mrs. A. Gross of Springfield is visiting friends here.

Mrs. Anthony of this place is to move to Holyoke soon.

Mrs. Fred Rood of Springfield is the guest of E. E. Kendall.

A social dance is advertised to take place at Forest Lake this evening.

B. F. Avery of Burlington, Vt, is visiting friends here for a few days.

E. K. Guess has returned to his home in the western part of the state.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Sullivan returned from their wedding trip on Saturday.

Michael Sullivan of Millbury is visiting T. J. Clifford of the Clinton House.

Mrs. W. P. Bishop of Millbury is spending a few days with her parents here.

William Hutchinson was in town during the week as the guest of his father.

Fred Leach and family were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Houston over Sunday.

The drum corps ball club will play at Monson to-morrow with the team of that place.

The next concert to be given by the Columbian Band will be from the new band stand.

Mrs. Sugrue from Haverhill is visiting her parents here, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Crowley.

Joseph Bonville, Jr., was injured on Tuesday at Palmer, badly tearing one of his arms.

Miss Lizzie O'Connor has received a new ladies' safety the past week from her parents.

Arthur Adams is the latest addition to the bicycle ranks, having recently purchased a machine.

Mr. and Mrs. Marble Pratt of North Adams were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Carter last week.

Mrs. Dennis Leary and daughter have returned from their visit with friends in New Hampshire.

E. W. Hale is to erect a new two-tenement house on land next to his residence on Commercial street.

Daniel Lawlor has moved his family from Palmer to this place, and will reside on Harvey avenue.

The drum corps ball team went to Gilbertville Saturday to play the local team, and was badly defeated.

P. J. Sullivan, leader of the Bondsville drum corps, has been engaged by the local drum corps for an instructor.

Jeremiah Dutton, an old citizen of the town, is quite ill at his home from the effects of a fall received last week.

A new picket fence is being built around the Thorndike Co's. property on Church street, formerly the Packard estate.

Jerry Sullivan of this place has been drawn as a juror for the present term of court, and is acting in that capacity.

Mrs. Charles Clark of Springfield is here for a short time, being called home by the illness of her mother, Mrs. Henry J. Dill.

The attention of the town fathers is called to the poor condition of the long bridge near the No. 1 mill. It is sadly in need of repairs.

Mrs. Edward Flynn, who has been quite ill at her home on Church street, remains in the same condition without any improvement.

Misses Lynch, Crowley, Hill and Clark of Easthampton paid a short visit to friends in town Wednesday, on their way to Nantasket Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. William Williams are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby boy, which came to them on Tuesday of last week.

Children's Day was observed at the Congregational church on Sunday last. A concert was given in the evening, which was largely attended.

The last game in the series between the Palmer and Thorndike grammar school ball clubs was played here on Friday last, and resulted in a victory for the home team by a score of 8 to 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Potter and sons Arthur and Ernest were the guests of Mrs. George Murdock and Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Murdock on Saturday, returning to their home in Springfield Sunday evening.

On Friday morning the pupils of the grammar school presented their teacher, Harold M. Dean, with a gentleman's dressing case as a mark of their appreciation of him as a teacher. Mr. Dean leaves to-day for his home in Vermont.

The many friends and acquaintances of Maurice Coffee, who at one time was a resident of this place, will be pained to learn of his death, which occurred recently. Mr. Coffee moved from this place about 17 years ago with his parents.

Harold M. Dean of the grammar school has finished teaching here and will go to his home in Vermont. Mr. Dean will be greatly missed by the members of the Columbian Band, of which he was a member and a strong addition. During his stay in town he has made many friends, who would be pleased to see him return when school opens again in September.

Another ball club has been organized here, this time the clothroom boys of No. 2 mill. They are anxious to meet their brethren of Three Rivers and Bondsville in friendly games of ball some time in the near future.

Many from this place will attend the graduating exercises of the high school and also the reception, which will be held in Holden's Opera House on Wednesday evening next. Maud Louise Parker and Michael Robert Lyons are the only ones from this place in the class of '93.

A Skeleton Found.

While men were busy at work digging near the Gerald and Henry place on Thursday they dug up what appeared to be the skeleton of a man. The length would indicate that the man was tall. When disturbed the skin fell away to dust, but the ribs and bones were preserved in a fair condition. It is thought that the remains were buried there some 60 or 70 years ago, and were perhaps those of an Indian.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Walker was the guest of Mrs. Joseph Geer over Sunday.

Mrs. Damon of New London is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Twogood.

Thomas Hartnett is having a new barn built. Capen Brothers are doing the work.

J. B. Brown spent most of this week in Amherst, among friends and acquaintances.

Mrs. Eugene Sikes, who has been ill with rheumatic fever for some time, is now recovering.

Mrs. Squires of Belchertown was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Alice Hillman, Wednesday.

Rev. Joseph Marchand is spending a vacation in Montreal and other places of interest in Canada.

Charles Wood sustained the loss of a cow this week, the animal having died of disease of the horns.

Mr. and Mrs. Hillman intend to spend next Sunday in Northampton, at Mr. Hillman's home.

Rev. and Mrs. Webb of West Newton were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Provost most of this week.

Mr. Butler has returned to his home in Vermont, after an extended visit with his son, Rev. G. H. Butler.

Charles Russell has purchased a pair of handsome black ponies, which promise to make excellent drivers.

Mrs. P. A. Forte and family intend soon to spend a few weeks' vacation in Canada, among relatives and friends.

Mrs. Peck is visiting friends and relatives in Rutland, Vt., and is expected to return to town about the middle of next week.

Mrs. Desmarais, who has been confined to her home by illness for the past few weeks, is now very seriously ill with typhoid fever.

Miss Lena Crossberry or Brattleboro, Vt., is the guest of Mrs. F. W. Lavene, and intends to remain in town about three weeks.

The grounds around the new Union church parsonage are being graded and terraced, which will add much to its already picturesque appearance.

A large delegation of the people of the Baptist church attended the Westfield Baptist Association's Sunday school convention at Springfield this week.

N. K. Rogers is making a great improvement in the external appearance of his residence on Main street by building an annex and piazza, and putting in a bow window.

Fred Hillman gave a reception to his Sunday school class Wednesday evening. Ice cream and cake were freely partaken of by the boys, and a very enjoyable evening spent.

Mr. Webb of West Newton, who has occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church for the last two Sundays, with his wife spent a few days this week among the parishioners of the church.

Five of the members of the American Cooperative Union, one of the endowment orders which was closed up by the state, have this week received a dividend from the receiver, the amount in some instances being nearly as much as they had paid in, which is quite unusual.

The game of ball between the overseers of the Otis Company's mill at Ware and the overseers of the mill in this place will be played to-morrow afternoon. The Ware men are to be accompanied by their wives, and a lunch will be served by Caterer Barr, of Springfield in Jenks's grove, which adjoins the ball ground.

About the first of July Mr. Anderson, an evangelist, and Mr. Parkette, a singer, are expected to come here and hold revival meetings for a few weeks. It is proposed now that a tent be erected, spacious enough to hold the large audiences that these gentlemen are sure to attract; besides, at this time of year it is considered by many to be much cooler to have outdoor services.

Last Saturday evening N. M. Nichols started from here on his bicycle and rode to Court Square in Springfield, returning without leaving the saddle, and made the trip in two hours and nine minutes. When Mr. Nichols returned he was welcomed by a large number of wheelmen, accompanied by the Three Rivers band, and received congratulations on the accomplishment of the feat.

These scholars have been perfect in attendance during the term of school just closed: First primary—Vina Freak, Laura Marien, Lester Carroll; second primary—John Connor, Georgie Gokey, Mary Marsalais, Albina Masseur; third primary—Albert Grise; second intermediate—Charles E. Barber, Eva M. Dunn, Nellie E. Lupien; Delia B. O'Connor, Mabel I. Russell; grammar—Alice S. Lupien, Clayton W. Barnes, William F. Morin.

He Made a Mistake.

While Mrs. N. M. Nichols was returning to her home after being at the post office Monday evening, she was followed by a man whom she had never seen, but who evidently was hurrying to overtake her, and as she reached the corner of Maple and Main streets the fellow called to her to wait, but not recognizing the person Mrs. Nichols thought the best thing for her to do was to hasten to get indoors before the fellow could come up to her; but he commenced to run and finally caught hold of her dress before she could get inside. Mr. Nichols, during this time, was on the common with other overseers, who were making arrangements for the ball game Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Nichols hurried in this direction and met her husband, but being so frightened could say nothing, and he assisted her home. On coming to the dooryard fence the man was still standing there, and Mr. Nichols called Officer Lavene, who quickly went to the place to find out what was wrong. Seeing the man and being told by Mrs. Nichols that he had assaulted her, Mr. Lavene inquired of him what he was standing there for. It proved to be Alec Fredette, who said that he had made a mistake in the person, and was sorry the affair had happened. He said that he had arranged with another persod to meet him on the street that evening, and thought that Mrs. Nichols was that person. It is rumored that a warrant has been issued for his arrest, and that he has left town, but he was seen here yesterday. This occurrence demonstrated the necessity of having an officer paid for patrolling the streets in the evenings and dispersing the crowds who either roam aimlessly about the streets or lounge on corners and make men and women who are attending to their own business the target of vulgar expressions. Many of the citizens are in favor of having an officer especially paid for the purpose of promoting an orderly state of things in the evenings and on Sabbath days, and all hope that some provision will soon be made for the safety and comfort of wives and daughters while on the streets.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, June 10, 1893.

The Senate, Thursday, upon that sober second thought which may have been the pressure of corporate interests and the lobby, deliberately turned to the worst side of the bills to prevent stock-watering by gas, electric light, street railway and water corporations, and rejected them all. The votes were very close, and any sweeping criticism must have saving clauses, but the thing was done and it looks at this date as if it was bad politics as well as corporation legislation.

The plan to tear down the state house and to build a new one has been checked for at least one year. The finance committee reported unanimously against it, and had their report promptly accepted in the House under a suspension of the rules.

The House has voted, 68 to 93, not to investigate the state gas commission, though some hard things were said about it by both Republicans and Democrats.

The House on Thursday passed a bill giving the governor absolute power to remove members of the prison commission.

With the prorogation of the Legislature a few minutes after six o'clock Saturday morning, the record of the session passes into history. Governor Russell signed 479 acts and 113 resolves. He vetoed two bills and suffered two to become law without his signature. Two very important bills, the Lyford-Malone bill to compel the Bay State Gas Company to cancel its note of $4,500,000, and the rapid transit bill, were not settled until well into Saturday. The fight over the gas bill was as much political as commercial, and it was people that settled the matter. Two leading Republican senators took the problem in hand after the Senate, by a tie vote of 16 to 16, had refused to pass the bill to be engrossed. Their argument was sound, too, and work was earnest, timely and successful. They said that Mayor Matthews had met all the honor he possibly could already out of the investigation, and that it would not hurt him to defeat the bill, while it would hurt the Republican party greatly in the campaign, as the Democrats would be sure to make a political crime of Republican failure to protect the interests of the people and of their yielding to a corrupt gas ring if the bill was defeated. This was all true, and some Democrats have been sorry since the vote that the bill was not defeated by Republicans. These senators were Messrs. Parkman of Suffolk and Butler of Bristol, and they showed good sense in their action. The gas ring was hard at work to defeat the bill, but could not resist the combined forces of public opinion and political expediency that were working against them.

In addition to the rapid transit bill the Legislature enacted a bill for a subway under Tremont street in Boston, if the city council approves. It is to extend from near Boylston street to Scollay square, or some point further north where ready union can be effected with the surface tracks. It is said that this underground road, a mile long, can be made for $800,000, fit for car tracks but $2,000,000 is allowed, so that it may be wide, light, dry and clean, with room for the pipes and wires which crowd the soil and the air overhead. Many think that the rapid transit bill will not amount to anything, while others expect that a road will be built under it.

This Legislature has held out well to the end in its good quality which was noticed earlier. At the beginning of the year all observers waited with apprehension. Certainly I had a sort of expectation that they would do something to disgrace themselves and the state, and that the air of the state house would again be filled with rumors of corruption as it was last year. It will be remembered by some that the Legislature of 1892 was the worst in reputation of any we have had for a long time, and that reputation was apparently deserved. Well, the first thing to be noticed about the Legislature of 1893 was that it was not doing bad things. Then, as they got into their work they did it faithfully and well. As the time came on when scandals are liable to break out, nothing appeared, so we concluded that we had here a pretty good set of men, and it was so stated publicly. That attracted their attention and stimulated them to earn an even better reputation. So the emulation has been wholesome, and really the people of the state may think of the House of 1893 as an honest, diligent and competent body. They need not blush for it, but may well be proud of it, and not feel that the Legislature is invariably bad.

The Senate has not been as good. I have no doubt that there has been corruption there, but probably not as much as is often the case. The pressure of corporations there has been tremendous, especially in the last few days. By their influence the bills were killed which were aimed to prevent the watering of corporation stocks. But there are two sides to that story. The friends of the bills resorted to an evasion to get them by the rules of the House. They were never given a proper hearing before the suitable committees, and they were badly managed. Next year they will doubtless try again.

During the recess of the Legislature two important committees will sit. One will have to report a revision of the corporation laws of the state, and another will codify the tax laws and bring in such new principles as may seem best. This will involve a long hearing on the part of the tax reformers and on the part of those who aim to tax personal property more strictly to stop so much tax-dodging. Both of these matters are of high importance, and the taxation question, particularly, is deep and perplexing, with much doubt, even by the best-informed, as to the wisest policy to pursue. LANDON.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss. June 10th, A. D. 1893.

By virtue of an execution which issued in a judgment recovered in the Superior Court holden at Springfield, within and for the County of Hampden, on the first day of May, D. A. 1893, in favor of George H. Newton of Monson, in said County, and against the goods and estate which were of Gideon S. Moore, late of said Monson, deceased, in the hands and possession of E. A. Day of Hampden, in said County of Hampden, administrator of said goods and estate, I have this day seized and taken all the right, title and interest which the said Gideon S. Moore had at the time of his decease, in and to certain tracts of unincumbered real estate with the buildings thereon, situate in Monson, in said County of Hampden, and bounded and described as follows, to wit; First tract:—Situate in the westerly part of said Monson and bounded as follows: beginning on the west side of the road at a corner of land now or formerly of Hiram Stacey; thence north 72½° west 41 rods to said Stacey's line, to stake and stones; thence north 11½° west, 67 rods to the road; thence north 4¼ east, 79 rods; thence north 15¼ east, 26 rods; thence north 19° east, 31 rods; thence north 67° east, 21 rods, to a corner of land formerly of A. K. Homer; thence south 14 west, 68 rods in said Homer's line; thence south 84° east, 23 rods in said Homer's line to first mentioned road; thence south 31° west, 6 rods on said road; thence south 21¼° west, 84½ rods on said road; thence south 13½° east, 29½ rods on said road; thence south 9° west, 16 rods on said road; thence south 13½° west, 19½ rods on said road, to first mentioned corner, containing 45 acres and 104 rods of land with the buildings thereon, being the same premises conveyed to Gideon S. Moore by William B. Converse, by deed dated June 27th, 1870, and recorded with Hampden County Registry of Deeds, Book 401, Page 205.

Second tract. Being situate in said Monson and bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the north-west corner of the premises at the south-west corner of land of M. Danield, thence running southerly on the old Monson line about 106 rods to land of Spencer Harvey; thence north-easterly on said Harvey's land about 65 rods to land now or formerly of Gideon S. Moore; thence westerly about 25 rods; thence northerly about 55 rods on land now or formerly of said Gideon S. Moore to land now or formerly of M. Danield; thence westerly on land now or formerly of said Danield, about 27 rods to the point of departure, containing about 17 acres, more or less, and being the same premises conveyed by John A. Calkins to Gideon S. Moore, by deed dated April 22, 1874, and recorded with Hampden Registry of Deeds, Book 405, Page 546.

Third tract. Being situate in said Monson on the easterly side of the highway opposite the house now or formerly of said Moore, and

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

THE ATHLETIC MEET.

Monson Wins the Banner by 17 1-2 Points —Springfield Second With 12 1-2.

Last Saturday was a glorious day for Monson, as the Academy team again wrested the athletic banner from the eager hands of Springfield, Holyoke, and the rest. The weather was admirably suited for the best work to be done by the athletes, although it was very warm for the spectators. That the games were well contested is shown by the fact that eight records were broken, while last year was remarkable as a record year. Fully 1000 attended the meet, and 200 were proudly floating the blue and white of Monson, while its tin-horn brigade made itself conspicuous whenever an opportunity presented itself. A part of the team went up the night before so as to be in good condition for the games, but were entertained until about 2 o'clock in the morning by the Amherst Aggie men of '94, who were having their class supper at the same hotel. The rest of the team arrived early Saturday morning, and all had an early dinner at the Amherst House and were then kept under the close care of Trainer Smith of Springfield, as indeed they were all the morning. The success of the team and individual work was due largely to the earnest work of Mr. Smith, who has so carefully trained them this spring. Mr. Smith leaves this summer to accept the position of director in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium at Galveston, Texas, for which $65,000 has recently been bequeathed by a gentleman of that city. The games were rendered somewhat tedious owing to the lack of arrangements by the executive committee, and many were forced to leave before the sports were finished.

The preliminary heats in the 100-yards-dash brought out some fast flyers, the fastest being Converse of Monson, who ran in 10½ seconds. Monson showed up well in this, having three men in the finals. In the final 220-yards Converse was easily leading with only a short distance to cover when a cramp seized him and he lost first place. In the hurdles also Monson fared hard—Lord being unfit to run off the tie for first place owing to an injury. Walker sustained his rank as a pole-vaulter with a height of 9 feet 4 inches, while Bennett, a novice, cleared 8 feet 3 inches, and good work will be expected of him next year. The half-mile run and ball throw were not fruitful of points for Monson, but her men showed up well in both events. Austin added not a little to the score in Monson's favor with first in both shot-put and hammer-throw, while in the latter she captured the other prize also. Converse easily took the running broad jump, but did not exert himself, as the final 220-yards dash was the next event. Monson scored two seconds in the quarter-mile and mile runs by fine running on the part of Thompson and Merchant. Both these events were new ones for Monson to count in, and the boys naturally felt elated. In the bicycle races Monson had no entries, so was forced to let Springfield add to her score without a struggle. In the standing broad jump Tucker scored two points, as well as breaking the record, which had stood for three years, with a leap of 9 feet 8 inches, but had to be contented with tying second place in the standing high, being handicapped by spraining his ankle about a week before the meet. The running high jump was the last event, and many people had left the grounds, it was so late, but Monson fastened her grip on the banner by Chism's tying for first place. In all cases of a tie the points were divided and the medals decided by a toss. It is an interesting fact that in the three cases of a tie it was between Monson and Springfield, and in every case the coin fell "heads," while Monson got the toss twice and lost once. Yells of all sorts were heard, among them being the old Academy yell "Rah! Rah! Rah!—Rah! Rah! Rah!—Monson Academy—siss—boom—ah!" given three times, intermingled with the other yells, as "Rah! Rah! Rah!—Blue and White—Monson Academy—she's all right. Hi yi! Hi yi—siss—boom—ah, —Monson—Monson—Rah! Rah!" while where a point was scored one could hear "Breckety cax—coax—coax! Breckety cax—coax—coax! That's the kind! That's the kind! Monson Academy every time!"

Monson and Springfield have now each won the banner for two years, and this banner only runs for five years. Provided neither of these two should get it next spring it goes to the school having won the greatest number of points during the five years, which would be to Springfield, as the second year she had a walk-over. Thus Monson's only chance of having the banner for permanent possession is by winning next year, while a victory to any school outside of Monson gives Springfield the trophy. Although next year some of Monson's best athletes will have left, every student will feel it a duty to work for the banner, that it may always hang in the chapel.

Among those present were: Principal Jacobus and teachers of Springfield, Judd and teachers of Holyoke, Whittaker of Amherst, Profs. Dustan and Burke and Misses Smith, Wing and Alvord, also Rev. James Tufts, Rev. F. S. Hatch, Dr. F. D. Ellis, A. D. Norcross, and many others of Monson. Superintendent of Schools Danforth of Westfield, Prof. Cole and Secretary Huntress of the Y. M. C. A. of Springfield.

The Monson boys brought their banner to the meet, so that if they were defeated they might give it to the winning team. This it the first time it has been present at the meet, and several of the schools had never seen it before, so carefully had it been guarded by the Springfield boys while in their possession.

|---|---|
| Monson, 4 firsts, (2 ties for first) 6 seconds, (1 tie for second) | 17½ |
| Springfield, 3 firsts, (2 ties for first) 3 seconds, (1 tie for second) | 12½ |
| Holyoke, 4 firsts, 1 second | 9 |
| Amherst, 2 firsts, 1 second | 5 |
| Westfield, 1 first, 2 seconds | 4 |

As some of the athletes were late in reaching home that night, no demonstrations were made that evening save the ringing of bells, cheering, etc. Nevertheless, some person or persons were so exhilarated that considerable paint of vermillion hue found its way on to the fences, poles, etc., while the figures 16-12 glared conspicuously from some of the sidewalks. The guilt was first attributed to the over-zealousness of some of the Academy students, but the charge is indignantly denied by all, and is generally accepted. The boys did celebrate however on Monday night with a procession through the streets, and stopping at various houses along the road to give the yell, etc. The procession was headed by the Monson Cornet Band, and was followed by persons bearing torches, while bells were ringing and countless tin horns blending in the hubbub. The banner was also a conspicuous object in the procession, and added much to the enthusiasm.

Where there are no fences, no matter how wide a sidewalk is given, many take advantage of the chance to walk on the grass, and at one place on Main street the turf has been worn back a foot by their so doing.

The churches were all very prettily decorated Children's Sunday, the Universalist and Congregational having flowers only, the Methodist having flags also. The concerts in the evening were all excellent.

Miss Sarah Chaffee, who has been housekeeper and nurse for the Misses Adden for the past three months, has returned to her home with Mrs. Jacob F. Rogers, and Miss Grace Wood of Springfield has taken the position.

The Monson lodge of Odd Fellows will meet at the lodge rooms Sunday afternoon at 2.30 and march from there to the cemetery and decorate all Odd Fellows' graves. All members of the order are invited to go with them.

W. N. Flynt has constructed a temporary road to his park from North High street, turning from the main road just north of the granite cutters' hall. This has been a long-needed entrance, as many dreaded the steep Coburn hill.

This is a great year for mud turtles. Flynt Park has been presented with four this week, one a very nice specimen of a box turtle, the gift of C. P. Lyons and Master Hamilton Nichols; one of great size, measuring two feet and a half in circumference.

Herbert Anderson, who has been ill with consumption for many months at the home of his father, Amos Anderson, died Thursday morning. The funeral was held to-day, and the body is to be taken to Douglas to-morrow for burial. He leaves a wife and two small children.

A little child of Mr. Sullivan, living over Rogers's store, swallowed something Wednesday afternoon which lodged in its throat and for a time the combined efforts of Drs. Hanley and Ellis failed to remove it. Although a serious case, at last accounts the chances of the child's recovery were good.

The cemetery commissioners desire to say that the item which appeared in a local paper advising them as to their duty in caring for the different cemeteries in town shows just the poor judgment some people have in reporting such items. The vote of the town is such that they have no right to care but for cemetery No. 1, and they will try to carry out the vote of the town.

We have been furnished a detailed account of the games of base ball played by the old "Skull and Bones" club. They won many hotly-contested games and were considered as good an amateur club as stood in the state. A reunion is talked of for July 4th. There are some six or eight of the old nine that can be called together easily. Many would like to see them give an exhibition game.

The tickets for the alumni dinner of the academy this year will be sold by the committee of arrangements. Each ticket and each seat will be numbered to prevent confusion in seating, and enable those who propose to attend to secure their seats in advance. The demand for tickets will probably be in excess of the number that can be supplied, and friends of the institution who expect to be present are advised to secure their places at the table as soon as possible.

Mr. Editor:—From the little articles which have been furnished the news gatherers in this village, one would think that the No. 1 school house was in a fearful condition. The town has just spent a good deal of money on this building, and heating and ventilating apparatus for the same. If the school committee would employ some person to care for the water closets once a week there could be no cause for complaint; if they are so overworked that they cannot see to it, then it can be done through the board of health on complaint being made. The town is not ready to throw away a valuable property like this, and a thousand dollar offer for the removal of a five thousand dollar building is not much of a temptation.

At the semi-annual meeting of the Methodist Y. P. S. C. E., held in the vestry Monday evening, the following officers were chosen: President, George L. Keeney; vice president, Robert E. Shaw; recording secretary, Miss Mabel Fay; treasurer, Miss Amy Eaton; corresponding secretary, Miss Nellie F. Squier; lookout committee, Miss Mary Fuller, H. A. Fenton. Mrs. A. W. Ferry, Mrs. William Nason, A. O. Griggs; prayer meeting, A. N. Burke, C. A. Bradway, John L. Dean, Miss Mary Gage, Miss Alice Woods; Sunday school, Miss Nellie F. Squier, Miss Bertha Bosquet, Miss Etta Gould, William Moulton, A. W. Ferry; temperance, R. A. Beckwith, William Nelson, Myron Wright, F. J. Flynt, E. C. Bradway; social, Mrs. E. A. Thrall, Mrs. C. A. Abbott, G. L. Keeney, Miss Lilla Graves, Miss Minnie Noble; literary, Miss Lena Eaton, Robert E. Shaw, Miss Mattie Collis, Miss Florence Converse, Miss Mabel Fay; music, Miss Lizzie Williams, E. J. Osborne, H. G. Rogers, Miss Jennie Day, Miss Cora Howard; flower, Miss Alice Darling, Miss Lydia Eaton, Miss Lizzie Osborne, H. M. Shaw, Frank Abbott.

She Committed Suicide.

Mrs. F. C. Cone, at Paris, left this letter: "My husband—Forgive me if I cause you trouble, but I suffer so. You do not know what these long, wakeful, wretched nights are to me; and I am so tired, darling—the pain will never be better. It is not easy to take my own life, but I have been sick so long. Good-bye, my husband; I love you. Your Wife." This is but one of thousands that give up instead of using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and being speedily cured of their wretchedness. Go to LeGro & Lynde and get an elegant book and trial bottle free. (6)

Grave Mistakes.

Physicians frequently make mistakes in treatment of heart disease. The rate of sudden deaths is daily increasing. Hundreds become victims of the ignorance of physicians in the treatment of this disease. One in four persons has a diseased heart. Shortness of breath, palpitation and fluttering, irregular pulse, choking sensation, asthmatic breathing, pain or tenderness in side, shoulder or arm, weak or hungry spells, are symptoms of heart disease. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is the only reliable remedy. Thousands testify to its wonderful cures. Books free. Sold by LeGro & Lynde. (6)

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Dr. Cilley, of Boston, says Ayer's Hygienic Coffee can be used freely by persons of nervous temperament and by invalids and children, it not only being agreeable to the taste, but highly nutritious as well. Robinson & Taylor sell it.

A gentlemen, under 40 years of age, whose hair was rapidly becoming thin and gray, began the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and in six months his hair was restored to its natural color, and even more than its former growth and richness.

---

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Happy days and restful nights result from using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It so regulates all the bodily functions and strengthens the nervous system that worry and fatigue are comparatively unknown and life is truly enjoyed. It is certainly a most wonderful medicine.

HOW THEY FEEL IN ALBANY.

The Best Test of Character of Man or Article Is, What Good Have They Done? What Is Their Standing Among People We All Know?

There is good reason to doubt the truthfulness or endorsement of a preparation from persons living thousands of miles from where the same is published. How different we look upon an article which has stood the strain of 20 years' test right in our midst, and increased in popularity and use every year until to-day it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession in general. Such an article we find in Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

"It is not a common thing," remarked one of our prominent doctors the other day, "for physicians to endorse and recommend medicines other than those of the materia medica, but in the case of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy I most unhesitatingly endorse it for diseases that arise from excess of uric acid in the blood, such as rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney, liver or urinary troubles and the sicknesses from which women suffer. I prescribe it with always satisfactory results. In fact, my mother has used it for years. It regulates her bowels nicely and acts as a nerve tonic with elderly people."

Mr. Robert A. Male, foreman of Van Slyke and Horton's tobacco manufactory, Broadway, said he could not speak too enthusiastically of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. "About ten years ago," said Mr. Male, "I had a great deal of trouble with stone in the bladder. My physician insisted upon crushing the same, which he did, but in a little while the old trouble re-appeared, and I feared another operation would be necessary.

"It was suggested at this time that I take Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It did me good from the first, and I have never felt any symptoms of the old troble since. For kidney or urinary troubles of any kind I have implicit faith in its curative power."

There is hardly a person in this city who does not know genial John Fraser, who for years was one of the West Shore railroad's popular conductors. Not long since Mr. Fraser came out in a public letter in which he said: "For six years no man on earth ever suffered more than I did with dyspepsia, pains all over my body so severe at times that I could hardly turn myself in bed. Favorite Remedy was recommended by some friend and made a marvelously rapid change in me for the better. Last November I met with an accident on the New York and New England Railroad and my old trouble reappeared. I used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy again, and after the second bottle I began to improve, and I am as well and hearty as I ever was, and weigh 225 pounds.

"I recommended Favorite Remedy to Mr. William Huston, engineer on the West Shore railroad, who was suffering similar to myself, and it cured him as well."

The neighbors and friends of Mrs. Jay Sweet well recollect how she was at death's door with disease of the kidneys. Her case was practically abandoned by her attending physician. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was resorted to, not because any hope was placed in it, but because nothing else remained. The effect was little short of a miracle. At the second bottle she had regained strength, and continuing the treatment, fully recovered.

Mr. Fletcher Barber of Barber & Bennett, commission merchants on Broadway, in conversation with our reporter said that he had used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy with excellent results. "It gives me a good appetite and makes me sleep well."

One of the officers of the Albany Hospital told me that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had been used to his knowledge with always satisfactory results. Personally he had used it for rheumatism and kidney troubles and has not known either of these troubles since.

Such plain, straightforward statements from our own citizens, people whom we know and meet daily, speak volumes for the merits of this famous medicine.

As another physician told me: "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy stands to-day as the recognized treatment for excess of uric acid in the blood, which is the source of kidney, liver, dyspepsia, rheumatism, urinary and many other similar troubles."—Albany Evening Journal. 3

General directions in painting are to see hat no paint is put over a moist or even damp surface. To have thin coats of paint applied instead of thick. Chilton Paint should be thinned with the best raw linseed oil. Many people think there is little or no difference in linseed oil. The Chilton Paint Co. in buying oil obtain only the best brands from people who have a reputation of buying the best and cleanest flaxseed, and allowing their oil to settle for months before placing it on the market. How much better this oil than the oil commonly met with, and yet the Chilton Co. would not be satisfied to use this oil without settling it for themselves. In 1893 the Chilton Paint Co. will use in some of their paints linseed oil which they purchased and tanked in 1891. Very little such oil, if any, can be found in the United States, and the public gets the benefit of it, but so does the Chilton Co. also, for it adds to their reputation. It is extremely improbable that a gallon of paint will leave their factory the present year made from linseed oil crushed later than 1892.

Elder Blossoms.

The attar of rose is quaint and is rare,
It pleases all noses, or ruddy, or fair;
It is the most regal of scents,
But talk as you will, I'll hold to it still,
Tho' you deem my perception is dense,
There's nothing so sweet as
The wild elder blossoms
That bloom by the old rail fence.

The odor of musk is a scent of old time,
A whiff in the dusk is a theme for a rhyme;
'T is the perfume of all most intense.
But a fig for the smell that nothing can quell!
You'd wish it a mile or two hence
If once you had scented
The wild elder blossoms
That bloom by the old rail fence.

A violet scent is a scent that is neat,
To use in one's twenties an odor most meet,
A fragrance quite free from pretence.
But leave it for maids to bind in their braids,
And give me the rarest of scents,
The breath of the blossoms,
The wild elder blossoms
That bloom by the old rail fence.

Their fragile white grace is the point de Venice;
They drape the wood places with fragrance and peace;
A virginal charm they dispense.
Like a lass of sixteen that no lover has seen,
They spell you with bright innocence.
In childhood they won me,
The wild elder blossoms
That bloom by the old rail fence.

JENNY'S HOUSEKEEPING.

"My board raised to seven dollars a week," said Jennie Field, "and my salary reduced to nine! This is never going to do—never!"

These were the thoughts that flitted through the shop-girl's mind as she tripped along the brilliant streets, on her way to her daily work; for Jenny persistently objected to the term "sales-lady."

"I don't like the word," said she, with a toss of her bright, brown hair, cut short, and waving picturesquely at the end. "Any vulgar creature who has money enough to buy diamonds and sealskins is brevetted to the rank of lady nowadays. To my mind 'woman' is by far the grander and more honorable word, and 'girl' is the diminutive. I'm a shop-girl and I don't care who knows it!"

But Jenny's brow was clouded over on this bright June morning. Everything seemed to be happening—as everything frequently does—wrong.

Make what haste she would, she was a little late, and she felt that the grim shop-walker's eyes were upon her as he drew out his book and penciled a brief memorandum upon it.

"Another fine!" quoth Jennie to herself. "Well, I can't help it!"

It was a busy day, and 1 o'clock had passed when the girls, three or four of them at a time, found leisure to eat their lunches, at the back of the packing-room.

Jennie's was a failure—a slice of fat, greasy ham, laid between two slices of slack-baked bread, and a piece of stale cake, wedged in beside it.

"That boarding-house keeper again!" said Jennie. "Oh, for some of Aunt Thyrza's crisp crullers and delicious white bread!"

And she slyly threw the contents of her basket to the lean store cat, in the brick shaft below, who was always watching for a mouse that never seemed to come.

"How is Ruth Pleasant?" asked one of the girls, called Angeline Fay.

"No better," Sallie Dickens answered. "And the doctor says she never will be any better as long as she occupies that dark, unventilated room. "But how can she do any better? Does he think that shop-girls can afford brown-stone houses on Madison Avenue? or cottages at Newport?"

"Girls," said Jenny, "wouldn't it be nice if we could take a nice little place, somewhere, and keep house together?"

"Wouldn't it be nice, satirically retorted Angeline, "if we could go to heaven?"

"I wonder," said Jenny tentatively, "what a house would cost!"

"More can we could afford," despondently answered Sallie.

"But look here," persisted Jenny, who seated herself on an empty box; "how much board do you pay, Angeline?"

"Five dollars," said Angeline.

"And you, Sallie?"

"Four. But we 'bunk' together, four of us girls, in one room.

"And I am raised to seven," said Jenny. "Not that I shall stay with Mrs. Peck at those rates. But that," calculating rapidly on her fingers, "makes eight hundred dollars a year. Eight hundred dollars would pay house rent, and leave quite a respectable little margin for expenses. And it would be a small house that wouldn't hold at least a dozen girls, instead of four. I declare to goodness, I've a mind to try it! I'll take boarders myself. And Ruth Pleasant shall have the brightest, sunniest room on the premises. I'll write to Aunt Thyrza to-night. She shall be my first lieutenant, and I'll be captain of the ship myself."

"But you're not in earnest, Jenny!" cried the other girls in chorus.

"I am not? Oh, you will see!"

Jenny Field's thoughts had flown at once to a pretty wooden house—a relic of old farm days, when cattle grazed on the Harlem flats, and clusters of old chestnut trees crowned Murray Hill—on which she had seen an obtrusive placard, "To Let."

"Inconvenient, no doubt," she said to herself. "No modern improvements. But a row of lilac trees in front, and such an elm in the door-yard, and the grass full of dandelions. And from the back windows one can look out upon the Harlem River. It won't cost anything to ask the rent, at all events."

It turned out to belong to a little old silversmith, who would only let it on condition of being allowed to "take out" a portion of the rent in board.

"Of course," said he, "I don't want the whole house, but at my age it's hard to be turned out of my own premises."

"Yes," said Jenny, mentally reviewing the situation, "it would be hard. We shall be a family of women, but if you will put up with plain fare, we'll do our best.

("With Aunt Thyrza to matronize us, and this dear old man's silver hairs to insure his respectability, I think we may risk it," she said to herself.)

"But there's my son," added the old man, rubbing diligently at a piece of repousse work, which he was brightening with lustrine and a chamois cloth.

"You son?"

"He's a conductor on the Erie road," said the old man. "He's only here every other night to supper, sleep and breakfast. He could easily have a shake-down in a corner of my room, and I'd go bail he'll make you no trouble. Jack was born in this house. I course I couldn't turn Jack out. Of course I should allow all this in the rent," he added, wistfully.

Jenny smiled.

"Then I suppose Jack will have to come," said she. "And," she added, mentally. "Wasn't it lucky that I thought of Aunt Thyrza!"

Aunt Thyrza arrived—a plump, cheerful,

elderly woman from Portland, in the state of Maine—accompanied by a chest of household linen, a goodly share of old-fashioned furniture, and a cookery book.

"I've always thought I should admire to keep house in New York," said she. "There's the free lectures, and the Central Park, and the Five Points to study human nature in. And my niece, Jenny, is a good girl, and I'm glad of a chance to help her."

So the wooden house on the river became instinct with the life that pertains to sweet, young girlhood.

Aunt Thyrza and the old silversmith held different opinions on the subjects of evolution and political economy, but that only added an agreeable spice to their daily life.

"He's a well-meaning old gentlemen, if he is a little wrong-headed," said Aunt Thyrza, as she beat up eggs for a custard.

"Strange that such a sensible person as Miss Thyrza Field should be so misinformed!" said Mr. Morrison, who was inclined to be tolerant.

But Jack reconciled all these incongruities by the mere magnetism of his breezy, jovial, large-hearted presence.

Jack and the shop-girls became friends at once. Every one of them—even poor, pale little Ruth Pleasant—felt as if she had gained a big brother.

For each and all he brought something in his pockets whenever he returned from his railroad trips. Sugar-plums for Sallie Dickens, who had a decided "sweet tooth;" oranges for Ruth, a new science pamphlet for Aunt Thyrza, a bunch of lilacs for Angeline Fay, a novel for Jenny. Not one of them was forgotten.

The little household worked smoothly. Aunt Thyrza's delicious and economical cookery banished all symptoms of dyspepsia.

Jack made a rustic arbor out in the garden, and the girls planted flower seeds, trained vines and weeded the strawberry beds; and at the end of the first quarter their was a grand adding up of accounts, and, to their delight, this syndicate of girls discovered that their pleasant home, their bountiful table and delicious fresh air had cost them something like a third less than their bills had been in fifth-rate boarding houses.

"It's because Miss Thyrza is so economical," said Sallie.

"It's because we do our purchasing at Washington Market before nine o'clock in the morning!" declared Angeline.

"It's because we share expenses," said Jenny, nodding her head. "And Mr. Morrison and Jack being here is a great help to us."

"Yes," said Ruth Pleasant, rather dolefully, "but what are we going to do when Jack goes away?"

"Jack isn't going away," said Sallie.

"He's going to be married," said Ruth.

"Married?" Sallie's plump countenance fell. "I don't believe it!"

"But he told me so himself," persisted Ruth.

"He must have been in joke," said Sallie. "Mustn't he, Jennie? Jack married, indeed?"

"It's true," said Jenny, turning celestial rosy-red. "He is going to be married."

"To whom, in the name of Cupid?" shrieked Sallie, clasping her hand dramatically.

"To—me!" said Jenny, intent on darning the tiniest of frayed spots in Aunt Thyrza's Sunday pocket-handkerchief.

Sallie whistled—a tom-boy fashion that she had—Ruth burst into tears.

"Good-bye, economy and peace!" said Sallie, with elocutionary effect.

"I never, never shall be as happy anywhere else as I am here," said Ruth.

"It was just beginning to seem like home," sobbed Angeline Fay. "And now—"

"It won't be any different now," said Jennie, flinging her arms around Ruth's neck. "I couldn't part with one of you, not for untold gold. You are to stay here just the same. I must have something to do while Jack is away; so I shall turn housekeeper for the lot of you."

"But what will Aunt Thyrza say to that?" cried Angeline.

"Oh, didn't I tell you? Aunt Thyrza is to be married to the old gentleman. She abdicates the household throne in my favor. She wants more time to attend lectures."

"Well, I declare!" exclaimed Sallie. "But how about the opposing theories of evolution?"

"Oh, Aunt Thyrza is going to convert Mr. Morrison," answered Jennie, positively.

"Or he her?" said Sallie laughing. "But Jenny, who would ever have thought of such an ending to our housekeeping experiment?"

"Who, indeed?" said Jenny, demurely.—Helen Forrest Graves.

CAUTIOUS.

She had kissed the baby for the last time until she returned and then kissed him again. She had carefully locked every door in the house and all the windows. She had turned the gas to the exact point at which it was to be left until her return. She had attended to the furnace and warned Bridget not to meddle with it for fear of fire. She had explained to that functionary the use of the burglar alarm, the fire alarm and the watchman's rattle. She had put the cat and dog in the cellar and had wrapped a newspaper around the canary's cage. She had put a gossamer over her new sealskin sacque, although it was starlight, because as she informed her husband, "She never expected to get another one—they would end in the poorhouse she knew." And then she was ready.

She locked the inside door and tried it.

Then she locked the outside door and tried it.

Then she opened the outside door and tried the inside door again.

Then she locked the outside door again, tried it, and they started.

They had proceeded two blocks, and her husband had almost forgotten his craving for a good round swear, when she suddenly stopped.

"John," she said, "I must go back and tell Bridget to be sure not to wake the baby up unless he wakes himself."—Life.

GAVE HIMSELF AWAY.

"How did I get this black eye?" repeated the drummer, as he buckled the straps to his satchel. "Well, I tried to be smart."

"How?"

"I was at Seymour, Ind., and in a hurry to get my railroad ticket. So was another chap. The ticket seller was slow, lazy and impudent. The other man pulled his gun, shoved it into the window and got his ticket ten seconds later. It was a hint for me."

"And you accepted it?"

"I did. I shoved my revolver into the window and gave the ticket man a quarter of a minute to get me a pasteboard.

"And he jumped?"

"He did—jumped out of his office and broke me in two over a ba gage truck. He's got my revolver yet."

"But how did it happen to work in one case and fail in another?"

"Oh, I couldn't keep my voice from trembling, and then I didn't have long hair and a buffalo overcoat. He got right on to me for a fake."—Detroit Free Press.

NO AUSTRALIAN BALLOT THEN.—The Kansas City Tribune speaks of the old Kansas times as days when the county judge, with a list of the voters in his hand, his "good grey head that all men knew" lifted above the voters, stood and called out:

"Hiram Jones!"

"Here, your Honor!"

"Whom do you vote for the next President of the United States?"

"James Buchanan, your Honor."

"The County Clerk will make a note of the fact that Hiram Jones votes for James Buchanan for the next President of the United States." And so on to the end.

"This is the story of the county election."

WOUNDED IN BATTLE.

That was a good story which Rev. C. J. K. Jones of Louisville told in a Boston pulpit the other day. He said:

"An alarmist always reminds me of a friend of mine, who was a commander at the battle of Round Mountain. It was a hot fight—one of the hottest of the war. At a particularly intense part of the action my friend stood beside his horse scanning the field with his glass and directing the troops. He told me it seemed as if the fire of the whole Confederacy was centered on him, the bullets flying thick around him.

"Suddenly he heard a minie ball singing in the air and he felt something strike his leg. But the occasion was urgent and he kept up his glass. There was another 'ping-g-g' and he felt another strike. And so it continued.

"The captain at last lifted up his hand and prayed, 'O, Lord, I can go home to my wife and children without either of my legs, but O Lord let me get home.'

"Finally there came the shouts of victory. The battle was won. With a long drawn sigh the captain turned. He shouted to his orderly at a little distance, 'I'm wounded, Jim. Come and help me on my horse; I must go home. It's my last battle.'

"'No, I guess not,' replied the orderly.

"'What's the matter. Come, hurry up, I'm wounded.'

"'If you want me to help you, come here,' sang out the orderly.

"'But what's the trouble? Why can't you come here? Don't you see I'm wounded and almost dying?'

"'O, no, you are not,' sang out the orderly again.

"'Come here instantly, you rascal,' shouted the commander.

"'No, I don't; that's the biggest nest of yellow jackets there I ever saw in my life,' was the final laughing reply of the orderly.

"The storming swarm of Lonets were the only minie balls that had struck him."—Boston Journal.

THE KIND THAT CURES

J. R. HERSEY,
Spencer, Mass.

"INDIGESTION AND Extreme Constipation."

"My Friends Thought I Must Die."

"I AM NOW A CURED MAN."

The following wonderful statement was sent us by C. E. Carpenter, Druggist, 146 Main St., Spencer, Mass.

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.:

GENT.—Some two years ago I commenced to take INDIGESTION and EXTREME CONSTIPATION caused me to lose flesh very fast. I employed Physicians and tried Sarsaparillas, but continued to grow worse. I had a continuous headache, my skin turned yellow, and my friends thought I must die. My strength left me and courage also. This was my condition last February when I commenced to take

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

Before the first bottle was gone, there was a great improvement. My friends would to know what caused such a change in me. I replied "DANA'S SARSAPARILLA." I am now taking my third bottle and consider myself on the road to health. Dyspepsia had failed, a CURED MAN.

Yours respectfully, J. R. HERSEY.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing.

It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Dyspepsia will Kill a Well Man

The Kind that Never Fails

Our Remedy will Kill Dyspepsia

Dyspepsia is a subtle disease which lurks along the highway of health, and steals upon its victim by slow and stealthy advances. When the first treacherous blow has been given a horde of accomplices rush forward and rob life of every enjoyment.

About Leon's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. Granville E. Richards, of Scarsmont, Me., writes as follows:

Gentlemen:—I have been a sufferer from Dyspepsia for years. No one knows what I have suffered both in body and in mind. As my strength gradually failed I became nervous, despondent at times and completely discouraged. I have tried almost every remedy offered for my trouble, but nothing ever helped me, and life was still a burden until I took Leon's Sarsaparilla, which went directly to the spot, and I began immediately to gain in flesh, strength, and spirits. I am now a well man. Nothing I eat distresses me, and once more the future seems bright. Leon's Sarsaparilla cured my Dyspepsia.

THE FACT

That AYER'S Sarsaparilla CURES OTHERS of scrofulous diseases, eruptions, boils, eczema, liver and kidney diseases, dyspepsia, rheumatism and catarrh should be convincing that the same course of treatment WILL CURE YOU. All that has been said of the wonderful cures effected by the use of

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

During the past 50 years, truthfully applies to-day. It is, in every sense, The Superior Medicine. Its curative properties, strength, effect and flavor are always the same; and for whatever blood diseases AYER'S Sarsaparilla is taken, they yield to this treatment. When you ask for

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

Don't be induced to purchase any of the worthless substitutes, which are mostly mixtures of the cheapest ingredients, contain no sarsaparilla, have no uniform standard of appearance, flavor, or effect, are blood purifiers in name only, and are offered to you because there is more profit in selling them. ## A ROMEO AND JULIET.

"Where are you going, Letitia?" demands Miss Banbridge severely, gazing at trembling Letitia over a pair of gold rimmed glasses.

"Just out for a little walk, auntie. The day is so delicious," says Letitia, with her most engaging smile. She is thinking what an awful thing it will be if auntie forbids her to go out to-day of all days, and Jack waiting for her at the top of the meadow.

"Now, once for all, Letitia, let this be understood between us," says Miss Banbridge; "there is to be no intercourse between this house and that of The Court. You may think I am too old to hear things, but there you are wrong. I have heard a good deal lately about young Hardinge, who has returned to The Court after his father's death; heard, too, with deep regret, Letitia, that you so far forgot yourself as to dance with him a fortnight ago at the Mainwarings' little"——

"Hop," suggests Letitia, who is too frightened by her aunt's allusion to the young master of The Court to remember her society manners.

"Hop! How dare you use such a word?" cries Miss Banbridge. "Good heavens! The manners of this present day! Now, Letitia, hear me. It seems you did dance with this objectionable young man at the Mainwarings' ball. Perhaps you could not help that. But knowing as you do of the feud that has lasted for 50 years between their house and ours, I trust you have too much respect for me—for your name—to recognize a Hardinge anywhere."

"But what has he—er"—nervously, "what have they all done?" asks Letitia, her eyes on the marble pavement of the hall, her heart at the top of the meadow.

Good gracious! if auntie only knew that she had been meeting Jack every day for the past fortnight—ever since that long dance, indeed when—when—well, he wouldn't dance with any one but her. And it is all such nonsense, too. A rubbishy old story about a right of way that happened 50 years ago—and Jack the dearest, dearest fellow!

"I refuse to go into it," says Miss Banbridge, with dignity. "It suffices to say that this young man's grandfather once behaved in the grossest fashion to your grandfather—my," with a sigh, "sainted father. If you are going out, I trust that if you meet the present owner of The Court you will not so much as acknowledge his presence."

"I shan't bow to him, auntie," says Letitia in a very small voice.

Detestation of herself and her duplicity is still raging in her heart when she meets Jack Harding in the old trysting place. She had certainly promised her aunt not to bow to him. Well, she doesn't; she only flings herself into his arms—glad young arms that close fondly round her!

"Oh, Jack, she's getting worse than ever. She was simply raging about you as I came out. I really thought she was going to forbid me to come at all. She says you're an objectionable young man!"

"Oh, I say," says Hardinge. "What have I done to be called names like that?"

"Nothing, nothing!" cried Letitia, flinging her arms about in despairing protest, "except that your grandfather once punched my grandfather's nose."

"Well, I'm awfully sorry," said Hardinge, and they both laugh. "Would it do any good do you think, if I were to go down now and apologize for my exceedingly rude old forbear?"

"I shouldn't advise you to try," says Letitia.

"But what are we to do?" says, Jack his arm around her.

They are sitting on the grass safely hidden behing a clump of young trees. The sun is shining madly on their heads; the birds are singing on every branch. It is May—delightful May, the lover's month— and the hottest May that has been known for years.

"I don't know," says Letitia, with deep despondence.

"It's such beastly folly," says Hardinge presently in an impatient tone. "If I were a fool or a poor man or a reprobate, but I'm not—am I, now?"

"Oh, no!" says Letitia. She creeps closer to him and encircles his waist with her arm, or, at all events, tries bravely to do so. It doesn't go half way around, but that doesn't matter. She grasps a bit of his coat and holds on to him so. "Do you know what you are Jack! The dearest old boy on earth."

"And you—do you know what you are?" says Hardinge, pressing her fingers to his lips.

"No," says she.

"Well, I can't tell you," says he, "because there is nothing on earth fit to compare you with. You are you and that's all."

"What a lovely speech! No wonder I love you," says Letitia naively; "but," collapsing into gloom, "what's the good of it all? Auntie will never let you marry me."

"We could marry without her permission," says he slowly.

"No, we couldn't," says Letitia, with decision. She looks at him earnestly. "I wouldn't marry you without her permission for anything. We would have to run away and that would break her heart. I am all she has in this world, and though she scolds me a good deal I love her. I wouldn't desert her, Jack."

"You could come back again," says he.

"Of course I know that. But then she would always feel disappointed in me and hurt and—No, no, I shall never do that. She trusts me so."

"Then I don't know what's going to be the end of it," said he.

"We must only wait," says Letitia, despondingly. "And now, Jack, you had better go. She is sure to come here presently to see how the men are getting on with that fence. You know what an excellent woman of buiness she is. If she caught you here"—

"There would be wigs on the green," said Jack, laughing. "Well, good-bye—for awhile. I suppose if I come back again this evening I shall find you here?"

"Yes—oh, yes! Jack, do take care. The men will see you!"

"Not they," says Jack, kissing her again. "And you—what are you going to do while I'm away?"

"Think of you," with a little saucy glance at him from under her long lashes. "By the bye, have you got a match about you?"

"What on earth do you want it for?" says he, giving her some wax lights out of a little silver box as he speaks. "Going to have a cigarette?"

"Nonsense! I feel as if I want to set fire to some of those dry little bunches of grass; fairy tufts we used to call them long ago. They would burn beautifully to-day, the sun is so hot."

"Well, don't set fire to yourself, whatever you do," says he thoughtlessly. "Once again they kiss and this time really part.

Letitia stands watching him till he is out of sight, standing on tiptoe as he gets over the wall to blow a last kiss to him. Then coming out from the shelter of her trysting-place she walks into the old meadow, now beaten down save where the tall, coarse tufts of grass are growing. Lighting one of her matches, she kneels down and sets fire to the tuft nearest her. It used to be an amusement of hers in her childhood, and she is not yet so far removed from those days as to have lost all childish fancies. Sitting down on the side of a tiny hillock at a distance, she watches the dancing flames—so small, so flickering, so harmless.

She leans back against the bank behind her and crosses her white arms behind her head. What a day it is—most heavenly sweet—quite a drowsy day. How lovely that light smoke is climbing slowly uphill and fading away among the young beech trees above. And the little flames, like fairies dancing. Perhaps they are fairies who dwell in those old tufts. No wonder they are dancing—with rage evidently. Their strongholds are seized, destroyed by the tyrant man! No—woman this time. Ah, ah! In this case woman has come to the front at all events. She had been reading about the emancipation of women last night and had laughed over it. After all, she didn't want to be emancipated. She only wanted Jack to love her always—nothing more. Perhaps the other queer women only meant that, too, only they hadn't found their Jacks yet! Pouf! How warm it is!

Gradually her head sinks back upon her arms, her eyelids droop over the soft, clear eyes. How delicious it is here! How cozy! Again the eyes open, but very lazily this time. See how the little insects run to and fro over her white frock, hither and thither, all in search of the great want—food. A passing thought makes her laugh indolently. She hopes they will not make food of her. And then the eyelids close resolutely; she leans back. Sleep has caught her.

So sound indeed is her slumber that she does not know that now the little black insects are rushing over her, not in search of food, but of safety—safety from the tiny hot flames that are creeping every moment closer to the thin, white frock. Now they have touched her foot and have so far penetrated the thin slipper as to make her unpleasantly warm, but not enough to waken her. She only turns a little and sighs; but now—!

Now she springs to her feet with an affrighted scream. Smoke! Smoke everywhere! And what is this creeping up to the front of her gown? A thread of fire. It blows upon her face. She recoils from it, but it follows her. Madly she lifts her hands and tries to beat it back. The men! the men at the fence! Where are they! Alas, they have all gone to dinner. Once again a frantic cry bursts from her lips.

It is answered. At this moment Hardinge reaches her, and flinging off his coat he catches her in it. Folding it round her, he holds her as if in a vise.

What brought him back (beyond the mercy of God) he never knew, except that those last words of his, "Don't set fire to yourself, at all events," had seemed to haunt him after he left her. A foolish fear about the words had touched his lover's heart and compelled him to mount a wall and look back. In a moment he had seen.

He quenched the flames in a miraculously short time. Letitia is able to stand up and answer faintly his passionate questions to her safety, when suddenly a voice strikes upon them that renders both dumb.

"Oh, sir," cries she, catching Letitia in her arms, "I saw it all. I thought I should have died. Oh, my girl, my darling child!" She spent her whole life tormenting Letitia, but Letitia for all that is the apple of her eye. "Oh, sir, how can I thank you? The gratitude of my life is yours—the preserver of my pretty child." Then the old lady burst out crying. Half an hour ago she would have died rather than tell Letitia she was pretty, but now she lays many offerings at her feet. Poor feet. They might have been burned. "If you will add one more service to the immeasurable one you have already done me," says she softly, "you will help me to get my poor child back to the house."

"But," begins Hardinge. It seems wrong to him, even at this supreme moment, to deceive the lady, to go into her house under false pretenses. If she knew his name. A little pressure from the hand of Letitia decides him. How can he have scruples when she is so ill, so frightened?

Silently he passes his arm around her, and with her aunt takes her back to the house. They lay her on a sofa. Miss Banbridge flings a rug over her burned dress.

"She must rest here a little before going up stairs," says she.

"Miss Banbridge," says the young man, now turning with determination toward her, "I—I wish to say"—

"Sir, it is what I have to say," says Miss Banbridge with emotion. "I have not half thanked you. How can I? If there is anything I can do—any way in which I can show my gratitude to you—pray name it. In the meantime pray tell me the name of the brave man who has delivered my niece from the very jaws of death?"

"Hardinge," says he shortly.

"What!" Miss Banbridge has fallen back in her chair, staring at him with wild eyes.

"Yes, Hardinge," says the young man steadily, if sorrowfully. He pauses. "After all," says he, "I can't help my name."

There is a pause; Letitia draws her breath sharply. "That is true!" says Miss Banbridge at last in a severe undertone.

"I can't help having had a grandfather, either," says Hardinge, taking another step.

"No, I suppose not," most reluctantly.

"Most fellows have grandfathers!"

"I cannot contradict you, sir."

"Miss Banbridge," says Hardinge, going closer to her and gazing at her with all his heart in his eyes, "you asked just now if there was any way in which you could show your gratitude to me—about—about this thing. I want no gratitude. I would have gladly died to save your niece a pang. But—but you have given me the opportunity to tell you that I want—her! I love her. She loves me. Give her to me."

"Letitia!" says Miss Banbridge in a strange voice.

"Oh, yes! It is true," says Letitia, bursting into tears. "I do love him. I loved him that night at the Mainwarings, and I have loved him better and better every day since. He"—her sobs increasing—"he used to come and see me in the meadows where—where I was nearly burned."

Whether this allusion to the late catastrophe that might have ended in a tragedy stills Miss Banbridge's wrath, or whether her old heart has been softened by Hardinge's plain acknowledgment of his love for her niece no one can tell. She turns to Hardinge with a pale face, but not wholly unkindly air.

"I must have time to think," says she. She hesitates and then says, "This very painful to me, Mr.—Hardinge." It seems certainly painful to her to pronounce his name—the name so long tabooed in her household. I must have time—time." She grows silent. The hearts of the lovers sink. Suddenly she looks up again.

"Perhaps you will do me the honor to dine with me to-morrow night?" says she. Her tone is icy, but the two listening to her feel their cause is won. To ask Mr. Hardinge to dine, to accept hospitality at her hands! Oh, surely the old feud is at an end!

A little sound escapes from Letitia.

"You are cool," says Miss Banbridge anxiously, who had thought the sound a shiver.

"A little," says Letitia, who indeed is shivering from her late fear of what her aunt might say.

"I shall fetch another rug," cried the old lady, running out of the room.

An opportunity once lost is never to be regained," says the ancient copybooks. Hardinge and Letitia make up their minds not to lose theirs. His arms are round her in an instant; her cheek is pressed against his.

"It is all right. She will give in. I feel as if I loved her," says Hardinge.

"Oh, Jack!" says Letitia, "wasn't it a good thing I was nearly burned to death?"

"Oh, hush, darling! Hush, Letty! I can't bear to think of this day."

"Well, I can," says she, laughing feebly. "I shall think of it always. It has given us to each other forever."—The Duchess, in Philadelphia Times.

COMMENCEMENT AT MONSON ACADEMY.

Full Account of the Exercises of the Week at This Institution.

The exercises of commencement week of Monson Academy really commenced Sunday morning, when Rev. F. S. Hatch of the Congregational church preached to the students, taking for his subject "The Study of the Natural Sciences." At a late hour Saturday it became known that Rev. Dr. Walker of Hartford, who was to preach the baccalaureate sermon Sunday evening, would be unable to attend on account of illness in his family, and Rev. Mr. Hatch preached the sermon. His subject was "Knowledge, Sympathy and Sacrifice the Supreme Qualities of Character," and his text Luke 19: 41 and Mark 10: 45—"He saw the city and wept over it. Verily the son of man came to give his life a ransom for many." These words are the history of our Lord on the earth and the description of His work for man. He saw others, He wept over others, He gave His life for others. 1—Knowledge. He saw the city and understood it. Its sorrows and perils were open to his eye. He knew by early training and by nature man and God. It is such knowledge that is demanded of the educated youth. 2—Sympathy. He wept over the city. The best sympathy is intelligent. The emotion of Jesus rested on His knowledge. The world wants not a cold intellectualism nor weak sentimentality, but intelligent sympathy. 3—Sacrifice. He gave himself. The feeling of Jesus ripened into action even as His knowledge blossomed into sympathy. The scholar who feels the great needs of his age and is willing to give himself wholly thereto will find a large place waiting for him, and will enter into a great reward.

Monday, the second day, was devoted to public examinations in the chapel. At 7 p. m. the class day exercises were held, an ivy being planted on the academy grounds, after which in the chapel came the ivy essay by Miss Alma Bissell, the class prophecy by Miss Florence Deverell, a piano duet by Misses Grace Cushman and Gertrude Gage, and the singing of the class ode, written by Arthur S. Tucker, to music composed for the occasion by Miss Alice Walker of Stafford Springs, Ct., one of the graduating class. The words are given:—

We have met in the morning of life,
In the morning of life and of June!
To say our "Farewell ere we part
To start on our journey alone."

The years we together have spent,
While preparing for life's joy and care,
Have to us given much that is bright,
Fond friendships and memories fair.

And when, in the heat of the day,
Discouraged at times we shall be,
Let memory whisper us low:—
"To the honor of old Ninety-Three.

Then bravely we'll take up our work,
Look not down, but up and press on.
If we keep but an eye on our God,
He will surely not leave us alone.

And when we shall meet by the way
Those with trials much greater to bear,
Our motto we'll then call to mind,
Lend a hand, give a smile or a prayer.

Farewell, dear classmates and friends,
We each have our journey to make,
And though all our paths may diverge,
May they meet at the Heavenly Gate.

Tuesday at 10 a. m. came the graduating exercises in Memorial Hall, which was delightfully cool, in marked contrast to the extreme heat of the outer air. The room was crowded with the relatives and friends of the young people who were to receive their diplomas, alumni of the school, the townspeople, and visitors from abroad. The front of the stage was prettily trimmed with ferns and daisies, with a large stand of laurel at either end, while overhead hung the class motto, "Non Solum Nobis,"—not for ourselves alone,—the letters being made of white daisies on a blue ground. At the back of the stage was hung the handsome banner which the school athletic team has won the last two years at Amherst, while against the wall at the left of the proscenium arch stood a ladder of evergreen, with the figures '93, '94, '95, '96 in daisies on the four rounds, the former at the top. On the platform were the members of the graduating class, the instructors of the school, the trustees and a few invited guests. After the invocation by Rev. James Tufts, the venerable and loved ex-principal of the academy, and music by the Philharmonic Club, came the salutatory by Frederick Daniels Thayer. As the class was a large one only nine members took part, three being appointed by rank, three being chosen by the faculty and three by the class. Those appointed by rank were Frederick Daniels Thayer, Archie Winthrop Merchant and Anna Billings Converse. The speakers and their subjects were:—

Oration.....“The Nation's Trust”
George Marquis Converse.
Oration.....“The Uses of the Imagination”
Archie Winthrop Merchant.
Oration.....“National Holidays”
James Edward Closson.
Oration.....“Our Heritage”
George Linnæus Thompson.
Essay.....“Gold Lies Deep in the Mountain”
Anna Billings Converse.
Oration.....“Education and Morals”
Frederick Daniels Thayer.
Essay.....“The Mission of Poetry”
Annie Regina Parker.
Oration.....“Pathfinders”
Arthur Simpson Tucker.
Oration “The True Function of Organized Labor”
Dennis Joseph McCarthy.

The members of the class are:—

Classical course—Anna Billings Converse, Somerville, Ct.; Frederick Daniels Thayer, Enfield; Arthur Simpson Tucker, Monson. Academic course—Homer Lucius Beebe, Monson; Frederick Bissell, Holland; Theodore William Buscher, Monson; James Edward Closson, Monson; George Marquis Converse, Somerville, Ct.; Maggie Theresa Corcoran, Monson; Charles Ball Howard, Monson; Dennis Joseph McCarthy, Stafford Springs, Ct.; Archie Winthrop Merchant, Monson; Annie Regina Parker, Monson; Letha Adriana Potter, Monson; Otto Arthur Prahn, West Haven, Ct.; George Linnæus Thompson, Monson; Alice Jennie Walker, Stafford Springs, Ct.; Alva Montague Walker, Monson. Post graduates—classical course—Myra Elvira Fiske, Westfield; Arthur Fiske Warren, Falmouth.

The senior class reception Tuesday evening was well attended and much enjoyed. Misses Letha A. Potter and Anna B. Converse, and Messrs. Merchant and Beebe received for the class. The young ladies of the class were very handsomely dressed. Miss Potter wore white crepon, trimmed with silk lace and ribbon; Miss Annie Parker, ivory-white henrietta cashmere, brocaded china silk bodice and sleeves, silk lace and ribbon trimmed; Miss Anna Converse, cream-white satin-striped cashmere, trimmed with satin ribbon; Miss Maggie Corcoran, cream-white cashmere trimmed with lace and satin ribbon; Miss Alice Walker, white muslin, lace trimmed. Among the guests who wore particularly pretty dresses were Miss Alice King in skirt of light blue lansdowne and waist of moiré trimmed with lace; Miss Wales, white China silk; Miss Mabel Flynt, white chiffon; Miss Gertrude Gage, old rose China silk and cream lace ruffles; Miss Addie Peck, pearl silk gauze; Miss Lizzie Osborne, white serge, gilt passamenterie; Miss Kate Brannick, cream serge; Miss Mabel Gates, light challie; Mrs. Dana M. Dustan, steel colored henrietta, velvet bretelles; Miss Hattie Flynt, a perfect symphony in silver gray; Miss Esther Holmes, white silk with black figures; Miss Nellie Parker, red silk waist, black henrietta skirt; Miss Josie Cantwell, figured muslin, lace trimmed; Miss Lena Babbitt, cream-white wool.

The valedictory addresses were by Anna Billings Converse, which were followed by the presentation of diplomas by Rev. P. W. Lyman of Fall River, president of the board of trustees. Benediction by Rev. J. P. Hawley of New Hartford, Ct., closed the exercises in the hall, which were followed by the alumni dinner in the vestry of the Methodist church, where Landlord McCarthy of the Monson House had made arrangements for the 140 which sat down to the well-filled tables. Grace was said by Rev. Mr. Belden of Castleton, Vt.

After due attention had been paid to the gastronomic part of the programme the toastmaster, John A. Bennett of Boston, called the assembly to order, and under the head of business the old committee of arrangements was elected to have charge of the reunion next year: Miss Hattie Cushman, Mrs. Rufus Cushman and Dr. F. W. Ellis. The toastmaster announced the loss of a gold watch in the hall during the exercises of the morning, and gave Congressman Sperry of Connecticut a hit by saying that it was nothing more than he expected after he knew that there was a Democratic congressman present. Mr. Bennett then said that with the exception of an occasional flying visit he had not seen the academy since his graduation, 20 years ago. He had come to Monson on the evening before and had wandered through the streets looking for the old landmarks, but many had disappeared, among them the old academy building, but in its place he found a more modern and better appointed institution, of which Monson might well be proud.

The first speaker was Rev. P. W. Lyman of Fall River, president of the board of trustees, who said that while not an alumnus of Monson Academy, he had served as one of its trustees so long that, although a foreigner, he felt that he had become naturalized by this time. He welcomed all to the feast, and hoped the sample work of the morning had pleased those who had an interest in the institution. There had been a gradual and steady increase of students during the past few years; the alumni of a school were its representatives, known and read of all men, and he hoped that those now going out would strive to well represent Monson Academy at all times and in all places.

Henry A. King of Troy, N. Y., spoke for the profession of the law, comparing the profession of 50 or 100 years ago with that of to-day. Many thought the profession had suffered a decadence since then, but at that time the government was new, and the lawyers had to argue without the decisions for precedent which the lawyer of to-day has, and by his study of the questions which arose and his arguments for the right helped to shape the future of this most glorious country. Since these precedents have become established the lawyer occupies a less important position. At that time there were no such accumulations of wealth as now, and the speaker questioned if there was not even greater honor in establishing or endowing an institution of learning than in having been one of the shapers of the laws of the country. There was no greater honor than to be a teacher; no position other than that of the president of the United States more important than that of president of our institutions of learning.

W. H. Hall of West Hartford, Ct., paid a high tribute to the influences for good of the homes of the Monson people on the boys and girls attending the academy, attributing to this source much that was good in his own life.

FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 23, 1893.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Northfield Creamery butter, native bunch beets, asparagus fresh every morning, black wax string beans, new potatoes, cucumbers, nice sweet mixed pickles at Thompson's Central Street Market.

Final announcement of Milligan's closing out sale of boots and shoes. I am determined to close out the balance of my stock at the earliest possible date, and will simply slaughter prices on what remains until the same is accomplished. Nothing will be added to the stock and many sizes are gone, but if there is anything you can use of what remains they will be offered at the following prices: Men's heavy boots $1.25, $1.75 and $2, formerly $2, $2.50 and $3. Men's brogans 75c, $1 and $1.25, formerly $1.25, $1.50 and $1.75. Men's heavy shoes in lace and congress $1 and $1.25, formerly $1.50 and $2. Men's velvet slippers 75c and $1, formerly $1.50 and $1.75. Men's calf shoes in lace and congress $1.75, $2 and $2.50, formerly $2.50, $3 and $4. Men's patent leather lace shoes $2.25, formerly $3.50. Men's and boys' tennis shoes 35c, formerly 50c. Men's patent leather oxfords $1.25, formerly $2. Men's calf boots $1.75, $2 and $2.50, formerly $2.50, $3 and $4. Ladies' oxfords 75c, $1 and $1.25, formerly $1.25, $1.50 and $2. Ladies' white kid slippers $1, formerly $1.50. Ladies' kid button boots $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2 and $2.50, formerly $1.50, $1.75, $2, $2.50, $3 and $3.50. Ladies' French kid button boots $2.75, $3 and $3.50, formerly $3.50, $4 and $5. Ladies' cloth congress shoes 50c, 75c and $1, formerly $1, $1.25 and $1.50. Ladies' opera slippers 50c, 75c and $1, formerly $1, $1.25 and $1.50. Misses' spring heel shoes 75c, $1 and $1.25, formerly $1.25, $1.50 and $2. Misses' heel shoes 75c, $1 and $1.25, formerly $1.25, $1.50 and $2. Misses' opera slippers and oxfords 75c, formerly $1.25. Children's shoes 15c, 25c, 50c, 75c and $1, formerly 25c, 50c, 75c, $1 and $1.50 Blacking brushes 15c. Large size box blacking 7c. Gilt Edge shoe dressing 15c; cheaper kinds 5c. It will be seen that many of these prices are less than the original cost of the goods, therefore they are for cash only, and all goods taken from the store will be considered sold unless otherwise agreed. There is no telling how long these goods will be offered at the prices quoted, as the stock is liable to be sold as a whole any day. I consider that I have made a success of the boot and shoe business during the thirteen years I have lived in Palmer, and nothing but the desire to accept an offer to engage in an entirely different business would tempt me to make a change. Respectfully,

W. R. MILLIGAN.

GRADUATING EXERCISES OF THE HIGH SCHOOL.

A Class of Sixteen Leaves the School—The Reception After the Exercises—The Class Day Doings.

The opera house was well filled Wednesday evening at the graduating exercises of the class of '93 of the Palmer high school, though there were not so many present as last year, probably because of the change in the method, which did not give each graduate an individual part in the programme, as formerly. The front of the stage was tastefully trimmed with flowers, and the Springfield Orchestral Club was in attendance to furnish music. Over the stage hung the motto of the class, "Fortitier, Fideliter, Feliciter," — "Boldly, Faithfully, Successfully." After a selection by the orchestra the young ladies of the school sang the opening chorus, "Come, Come Away." Superintendent of Schools Small was then introduced and spoke briefly on "The New Education," which he said was simply the fitting of the old to the new conditions of to-day. While great changes had taken place in the railroads, steamboats, telegraph, telephone, etc., the tendency had been to keep the educational matters as they were years ago, but in the last ten years a great change has taken place, but it is simply the adapting of the old education to fit the new order of things.

The address of the evening was by Rev. A. E. Winship of Boston, editor of the Journal of Education, who spoke of "The Young Man of To-morrow." He took the young man of to-morrow rather than the young man of to-day because we are more interested in the future than in the present. History is never made yesterday or to-day, it is always made to-morrow. It was not the Pilgrims or the Puritans themselves which made their names famous, but their descendants and their to-morrow. We are not celebrating this year the discovery of America by Columbus, but the to-morrow of that discovery, and America has an outlook which is enjoyed by no other nation; she is grand financially, historically, morally and in every way. In this land in educational matters as in everything else, we are ready to meet changed conditions, no matter what they are. Conditions are always changing and we are always accepting them. The young men and young women of to-day must meet the changes of the future and overcome them. America is moving forward with rapid strides, and the changed conditions must be met by the young men and women. Out of over two millions who fought on the side of the north in the war over half were under 22 years of age. The boys of to-day, the young men of to-morrow are the ones who are to grasp the problems and solve them. For the young man of spirit and push there is always a place. Young people who are going out now into the world have grave responsibilities resting upon them; there will be more problems to solve in the next ten years than have ever been solved, and these young people will be in the forefront of the struggle. The speaker held the close attention of his audience for nearly a hour, and gave them many things to think of. His address was intensely interesting and practical, and it is to be regretted that but little of its force and character can be given in type.

A piano and banjo duet by Misses Annie and Carrie Fish was next on the programme, after which came the presentation of the diplomas by W. A. Breckenridge, chairman of the school committee, which was accompanied by a few remarks containing good advice, and well wishes for the future of the recipients. A piano quartette by Misses Maud J. Murdock, Ora W. Parent, Bessie M. Royce and Alice M. Armstrong followed, and the exercises closed with the singing of the class song, written by Miss Maud L. Parker, by the class to the tune of "Robert Adair." The words are:—

Over each joyous heart,
Merry and glad,
Thoughts of our parting dart,
Mournful and sad.
Broken must be the link
Binding us each to each,
But e'en to death's dark brink
Our love will reach.

Now from our school we go
Hopefully forth,
Eager the seeds to sow
Of lives of worth.
Ever we'll cherish thee
Wherever our lot may be,
Guardian of ninety-three,
School of the free.

Classmates and teachers true,
Sweet hope repeat;
Short are the years and few
E'er we shall meet.
Then when our work is done,
And when life's race is run,
Grant we may meet in love,
Father above.

After the graduating exercises came the reception of the class of '93, to which 500 invitations had been sent out. The floor was cleared of seats and the class received its friends at the head of the hall. The orchestra furnished music during the evening, and dancing was indulged in by the young people.

The members of the class are:—

Jennie Effie Brainerd, Charlotte Lena Bray, Edith Iona Hobson, Bessie Moore, Ora Winnifred Parent, Lilian Gray Park, Maud Louise Parker, Alice Lydia Thompson, Elizabeth Adela Twiss, Jennie Cornelia Twiss, Edwin Sprague Gardner, Charles Daniel Holden, Michael Robert Lyons, Henry Clinton Newell, Byron Claude Shanks, Daniel Bartholomew Sullivan.

Owing to the rain yesterday afternoon the class day exercises were held in the high school building. After a few introductory remarks by the class president, Edwin S. Gardner, the class history, which mentioned the trials and joys of the class since its entry to the school four years ago, was read by Miss Maud L. Parker. Then came the class will, a very interesting document, containing bequests to the undergraduates, faculty and the town, read by Henry C. Newell. Miss Edith I. Hobson read the class prophecy, which represented all members as meeting at some future date, and noted the changes made by the hand of time. The exercises closed with the ivy oration by Miss Jennie C. Twiss, and the response for the class of '94 by M. F. Kelliher.

A Michigan Wedding of Interest to Palmer People.

The following account of the wedding of Miss May Converse, granddaughter of the late Deacon Hiram Converse of Palmer, a charming young lady and well known here, is taken from the Saginaw Courier-Herald of the 15th inst., under the heading "A Green and White Wedding":

One of the most delightful weddings of the year took place last evening at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Converse, 407 North Michigan avenue, the contracting parties being Miss May Converse and Frederick Carlisle Roberts. The spacious residence was handsomely trimmed with green and white flowers, palms and daisies appearing in profusion. The conservatory presented a beautiful picture, being trimmed and decorated the same as the other rooms, in green and white, and at one end was located a fountain from which lemonade flowed and which was presided over by Mrs. F. L. Sage assisted by Miss Jennie Purmont. Shortly after 7 o'clock the guests began to arrive, and promptly at 8 o'clock, the hour set for the ceremony, the Lohengrin wedding march announced the bridal party, which came from up stairs and proceeded to the north parlor, where they met the officiating clergyman. First came the two ribbon girls, Irma Crane and Helen Beach, beautifully attired in long Josephine gowns; next came the groom, accompanied by his best man, Mr. George F. Littlefield, followed by the flower girl, Miss Kittie Stone, who was dressed in a white Josephine gown and carried an armful of daisies. She was followed by the maid of honor, Miss Minnie Louise Converse, who wore a green silk mull dress and carried white daisies. Lastly came the beautiful bride, attired in a white brocaded silk dress, trimmed with white lace, and carrying in her hand a bunch of bridal roses. The party proceeded to the west end of the north parlor and took places in front of a beautiful embankment of flowers, where the words that made them one were read by Rev. Charles E. Bronson, the bride being given away by her father.

After congratulations had been offered, the party proceeded to the dining room, where an elaborate wedding supper was served.

Both of the young people are well-known and highly respected, the bride having spent nearly her whole life in this city, and the groom for the past six years has been connected with the firm of F. W. Carlisle & Co. They were the recipients of many beautiful, costly and useful presents. They will go to housekeeping at once at 518 North Washington avenue.

By virtue of an execution which issued in a judgment recovered in the Superior Court holden at Springfield, within and for the County of Hampden, on the first day of May, D. A 1893, in favor of George H. Newton of Monson, in said County, and against the goods and estate which were of Gideon S. Moore, late of said Monson, deceased, in the hands and possession of E. A. Day of Hampden, in said County of Hampden, administrator of said goods and estate, I have this day seized and taken all the right, title and interest which the said Gideon S. Moore had at the time of his decease, in and to certain tracts of unincumbered real estate with the buildings thereon, situate in Monson, in said County of Hampden, and bounded and described as follows, to wit; First tract:—situate in the westerly part of said Monson and bounded as follows: beginning on the

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

A Monson Man Killed by the Cars at West Brookfield.

Apollos Wellington, for thirteen years a resident of Monson, was killed by the cars at West Brookfield, where he had gone to visit his daughter. He attempted to go under a freight train to which he saw no engine attached, as it stood on a curve. As the train started he was caught by a bolt, dragged several feet, and run over by five cars. Both legs were severed and his face bruised somewhat. The accident was seen by a train hand who with others removed him to the freight house, where he died in about an hour. The funeral was held Wednesday at the Methodist church in that town, Rev. W. H. Marble of Monson and A. L. Squier officiating. Mr. Wellington was born at West Brookfield, June 11, 1812. He married, May 14, 1835, Charlotte Bigelow, and they had five children, two of whom are living, Mrs. Nancy Woodbridge of West Brookfield and Mrs. W. Charles McMaster of this town, with whom he had lived nearly all the time since the death of his wife. He was a boot maker by trade. He was a member of the Methodist church for many years, and his familiar face and voice will be missed in the meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Thompson left this morning for a week's visit at Gouverneur, N. Y. W. M. Shaw will have charge of affairs at the depot during Mr. Thompson's absence.

At the quarterly conference held in the Methodist church Tuesday evening the trustees were authorized to purchase the property on Green street now used as the parsonage, for $2800.

The Woman's Relief Corps meets this evening. Meetings will be held only once a month, on the second Wednesday, through July and August. The corps is planning for a social in the near future.

A [illegible]siding is being built at the station for the W. N. Flynt Granite Company, and it will hereafter do its own switching, instead of having the switcher come from Palmer, delivering the cars to the railroad at the station here.

The primary scholars at No 15 vied with each other in collecting the most varieties of flowers during last term. Mary Lewis and Mattie Webber each brought in 228, and each was presented with a handsome bouquet by Frieda Rand on Friday, the last day of school.

On Sunday afternoon the Odd Fellows marched to the cemetery and decorated the graves of brothers buried there. There are but seven—Joel B. Williams, Harvey Parks, Sylvanus Hatch, Cæsar Entwhistle, Freeman Bradway, Edward Bills and Franklin Ellis.

Willard Nelson, Josiah B. Davis, Silas Harris, William King, Charles Clough and John C. Aldrich attended the reunion of their company—E., 35th regiment, Mass.—at Millbury Wednesday. Their orderly sergeant, B. B. Tiffany of Indiana, formerly of Monson, was in town Tuesday, calling upon old army friends.

Three weddings are announced to take place in the next few days, that of J. G. Carew and Miss Minnie, daughter of Mark Noble, at the residence of the bride's parents to-morrow; Stephen Brown Knowlton and Miss Lilla Dutton Whitney next Monday at the residence of the bride; Henry J. McNulty and Miss Carrie I. Merrick next Wednesday at 2.30 in the Universalist church.

The selectmen are raking the town to find someone to collect the taxes. It will be remembered that all nominations for the office of tax collector were declined last spring but that enough ballots were marked with the name of G. H. Newton, the old collector, to elect him. He declines to serve, however, and no one seems to be willing to take the job at the price which the town has voted to pay.

The assessors have nearly completed their work and give the tax as $15 on $1000, 40 cents less than last year. The valuation of personal property is $577,714, and of real estate $2,187,570. The number of polls 1035. The county and state tax amount to $4,855, which is $1,079 more than last year. The number of horses taxed is 541; cows, 983; sheep 134; other neat cattle, 515; swine, 116; dwelling houses 632; acres of land, 25,526½. Fourty-four bicycles were taxed for the first time this year.

Miss Lizzie Corcoran of Monson and James Speight of Hampden were married at 4 p. m. in St. Patrick's church Wednesday by Rev. Fr. Lee. The bride was prettily attired in a gown of heliotrope cashmere, trimmed with satin ribbon of the same shade. She wore a large white hat trimmed with lace and flowers, and was attended by her sister Mary, who wore a navy blue satin dress with hat to match. A large reception at the bride's home followed the marriage. The gifts were numerous and valuable.

Under the auspices of the South Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons a temperance picnic will be held on Flynt's Park, Tuesday, July 4. It will be a basket picnic, but ice cream, fruit and lemonade will be on sale. Games and sports will be in progress through the day. In the afternoon a little time will be given to speeches, recitations, and music of a national and temperance character, after which athletic contests will be engaged in. Suitable badges will be awarded. The public is cordially invited to unite in the celebration of this, our national day.

Thirty-five scholars took the examinations for admission to the academy, and the following 21 passed unconditionally: Harry Bugbee, Helen Pease, Nora McGuire, Bertha Bosquet, Delphene Osborn, Lizzie Curley Maud Aldrich, Edith Sutcliffe, John Lambert, Lillian Halvosa, Arthur Howe, Phebe Nichols, Louis Larson, Sarah Pease, Ethel Shaw, Winifred Bacon, Arthur Bramble, Luther Peck, Alice Letter, George Bugbee, Dennis Murphy. Those who failed will be given an opportunity later to be examined in the studies in which they were deficient.

The selectmen are arranging to spend the $600 which the town has appropriated for tar walks, and contemplate putting in walks from the residence of Charles Merrick to the foot of the Academy hill, from the Main street bridge over the railroad 320 feet north past the Holmes property, from Flynt's store past the store of G. E. Grout, from the residence of John Flynt to the iron bridge, in front of the north straw shop boarding house, from Central Block to Washington street, on Washington street from State street to the residence of Clark Pease, along the front of the Catholic church property, on High street, on Cushman street from the Methodist church property to the Cushman mill office.

A very interesting programme was carried out at No. 15 grammar school last Friday afternoon: Music; welcome, Lizzie Curley; reading, Helen Howe; music; quotations, first class; essay, "Our Spring Friends," Maude Aldrich; music; declamation, Edith Bosquet; music; question, "Resolved, That Franklin Benefited Our Country More than Washington," Phoebe Nichols and Lilian Halvosa, affirmative—George Bugbee and Nora McGuire, negative; music; essay, "Water," Delphine Osborne; prophecies, Winnie Bacon and Helen Pease; quotations, second class; essay, "Happy Family," Harry Bugbee; music; declamation, May Phillips; music. Fr. Lee, Miss Wood and Miss Emily J. Chapin acted as judges on the question, and decided that the honors were equal.

Among the people who were in town to attend the commencement exercises of the Academy were noticed Mr. and Mrs. William Gardner of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Gardner was formerly Miss Della Nichols, Mrs. D. G. Hitchcock of Warren, Henry A. King, Mrs. William Lincoln, Mrs. H. M. Lyon and Miss Edith Wood of Springfield, Mrs. A. T. Wing and Miss Addie Rogers of Palmer, Miss Blanche Cleveland, Mrs. Jennie Fairman Leach, Miss Nellie Warren, Miss Maggie Sullivan and Miss Alberta Eaton of Stafford Springs, Miss Brockway of Eastampton, Miss Annie Forehand of Worcester, Dr. Coyle of Providence, Rev. and Mrs. Hawley of New Hartford, Ct., Mr. Wilkins of Washington, D. C., Rev. Mr. Bigelow of Colrassett, Mrs. George Keeney, Mrs Lafayette Keeney, Mrs. Mayro Keeney of Somersville, Ct., Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Penniman of Worcester.

There was a circus in more ways than one Tuesday. Harper Bros. were here with their show, but in the evening the strong man decided that he would collect what of his salary was in arrears before he would do his act, and so got out a writ for the receipts of the ticket wagon. The officers, however, went to the wagon before the sale had commenced and took the tickets, commencing to sell on their own account. The tickets they got were blue, and the management at once announced that they would not take blue tickets at the door, and began selling others. The officers stopped them and then it was said that all who wanted to get inside the tent must pay their money at the door. There was considerable excitement for a time, but finally matters were adjusted and the performance went on, though the proprietors of the show threaten to sue the officers for robbery in taking the tickets away from their agent, and for interfering with the business of the show.

LUDLOW.

The Congregational church has called Rev. E. P. Allen of Maine with a salary of $700, with parsonage, and an annual vacation of two weeks.

WEST WARREN.

Mrs. Dennis O'Neill, who has been ill for several months with paralysis of the stomach, died Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Kate Nue Clisbee of Mexico has been visiting Mrs. Clisbee, and is now with her sister, Mrs. Watts, at New London, Ct.

The St. Jean Baptiste society will picnic in Crossman's grove to-morrow, with dancing in Washington Hall in the evening.

BRIMFIELD.

Oscar F. Brown has been appointed guardian of Minnie E. Weld.

Mrs. William H. Shaw and daughter Gracie leave to-morrow for a week's stay among friends in Worcester and Milford.

The commencement exercises of the Hitchcock Free High School took place today at the Congregational church, beginning at 2.30 o'clock, a reception being held this evening. A class of sixteen students were graduated. Music was furnished by the Philharmonic Club of Springfield.

BELCHERTOWN.

A camp of the Sons of Veterans was organized Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Thayer, mother of Rev. F. F. Thayer, is to spend a few weeks in town.

Mrs. Demotte of Brooklyn is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. S. Woolworth.

Miss Addie Walker has accepted a position as teacher in the state primary school at Monson.

The graduating exercises of the Belchertown high school will take place in the Congregational church this evening, when a class of eight scholars will graduate.

WALES.

S. S. Hubbard is taking in the World's Fair.

O. P. Royce has been appointed postmaster at this place.

Miss Ellen Isgear of Millbury is spending a few days in town.

Grass and field crops have not looked so poorly for many years as now.

Michael Rourke is getting up a patent flower pot. A model may be seen in his yard.

Henry Worth has gone to England to visit relatives. He will be gone about three months. He came from there six years ago.

Mrs. Waldon of Boston, sister of Rev. H. P. Smith, is taking a two weeks' vacation, and boards with W. A. Lyon. About July 1st Mr. Lyon expects several city boarders from Waltham.

WILBRAHAM.

The ceremonies connected with commencement week at Wesleyan Academy began Saturday evening, when Principal and Mrs. W. R. Newhall gave a reception at their home to the seniors, faculty and visitors, refreshments being served by Barr of Springfield. On Sunday the Baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Payne, and the academy sermon by Rev. Dr. Cook of Lynn. Tuesday evening the trustees held their annual meeting. Principal Newhall's report of the year met with approval; he announced that two large legacies had been left to the school, and the alumni were becoming greatly interested. The treasurer's report showed a large increase of surplus over last year, and the principal's salary was increased $250. On Wednesday came the prize speaking, awards being made as follows:—Rice mathematical prize, Milo E. Knight of Belleview, Pa.; Boothby mathematical prize, for the senior in the college preparatory course, Miss Florence Piper of East Templeton; Upham prize for the best declamation by a member of the junior class, A. L. Squier of Monson; Principal's prize for the best declamation by members of the first and second years, Charles H. Phillips of Boston; Manchester Latin prize, W. C. Hull of Westfield; Davison Greek prize, W. C. Hull. The class day exercises of the seniors were held on the campus Wednesday. The closing exercises took place yesterday, when 27 students were graduated.

WARREN.

Mrs. Strickland and daughter Fannie are at Magnolia.

Augustus N. Kelley has gone to the World's Fair.

Mrs. Dawson has a brother from Worcester visiting her.

Mrs. Asahel Fairbanks is stopping at Strawberry Hill.

Miss Daniels spent last Sabbath with friends in Springfield.

Rev. D. O. Clark preached at West Brookfield last Sabbath.

Mrs. Weller of Holyoke is the guest of Mrs. Wilson Fairbanks.

A. L. Converse attended the graduating exercises at Monson Tuesday.

Thomas Morgan of Brimfield is spending a few days with friends in town.

Mrs. Mary Sheridan has a cousin from Lynn spending a few days with her.

Mrs. Margaret B. Shumway and Alfred E. Shumway left Wednesday for Minneapolis.

Rev. Mr. Hale and wife return this week, and he will occupy his pulpit next Sunday.

Fred Daniels returned from Vermont Wednesday night with his wife, and will live on Southbridge street.

Mrs. Treadwell, wife of Rev. Mr. Treadwell, a former minister, is visiting Mrs. S. R. Searle for the summer.

Mrs. George Shumway and son left for Minneapolis Wednesday. They will visit Chicago on their way home.

The committee appointed at the May town meeting for the selection of a night and Sunday police have chosen Hosea Smith for the village of Warren and John B. Sullivan for West Warren.

The inhabitants of Bacon street were much disturbed Tuesday night by two suspicious men, who were prowling around, but as they were closely watched by the policeman made no attempt to enter houses.

A special town meeting is called for next Wednesday, when a number of articles will be acted upon, the most important one being to see if the town will employ a superintendent of schools. Article fifth is to see if the town will remodel and repair the wooden schoolhouse at West Warren and build an addition to it.

The graduating exercises of the high school were largely attended, and all did much credit to themselves and teachers. Miss Freeman, who was to give the valedictory, was unable to be present, being confined to her bed. It is much to be regretted that Mr. Buck, superintendent, is not to return, as he has been very successful in his work. A better position has been given him in Webster.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Miss Isabel Cutler is home for a vacation.

The Ladies' Society of Grace church gives a strawberry festival and concert Friday evening.

Miss Poland of Brattleboro, Vt., the new superintendent of schools, spent a few days in town this week.

Patrick Fitgerald, a well-known resident of this town for a number of years, intends removing to Holyoke the early part of next week.

Rumors of weddings are quite prevalent at present here. No less than three fair young damsels have solemnly agreed to participate in such events in the near future.

The wheelmen of this place held a road race Tuesday evening, the course being from North Wilbraham station to Dimmick corner, thence to Sixteen Acres school house and return to starting point by way of Wilbraham village, making a distance of twelve miles. The handicaps were C. E. Fletcher, 8 minutes; A. T. Calkins, 7; J. Ballou, 6; A. L. Bell, 5; Loring Andrews, 4; Howard King, 3; E. Tufts, P. Lucian and W. Maguire, scratch. Andrews finished first, time 45.08; E. Tufts second, 41.54; C. E. Fletcher third, 51.02; Howard King fourth, 46.30; A. P. Calkins, 51.47; P. Lucian, 44.42; W. McGuire, 58.54; J. Ballou, 65.56. On account of A. L. Bell breaking a pedal he was unable to finish. The road being a very difficult one to make good headway, and the riders young, the time is considered very good by those competent to judge.

Post Office Inspector White spent a couple of days in town this week for the purpose of ascertaining the real cause of the difficulty which exists on account of the proposed removal of the post office from its present site to the Baldwin block. The proposed location is considered by seven-eighths of the patrons of the office to be in every way a decided inconvenience to the patrons and public at large. It is smaller than the present one, which is none too large for the amount of business done; it would necessitate the closing of the mails ten or fifteen minutes earlier than now; it would also be found very difficult by the messenger to carry to and fro from the depot the heavy pouches and sacks that arrive daily. The office in its present location is certainly situated in the most central part of the village and easy of access from all points, as well as convenient to the business interests of the town, which would not be the case should the removal take effect. Considerable excitement has been caused by the proposed change, mainly amongst the Democrats of the town, though it has been emphatically expressed by one of the factions that there were only two or three Democrats in North Wilbraham. If this statement is true surely Democracy has taken a very heavy fall since last November, when eighty-three good Democrats cast their votes.

WARE.

Measles are quite prevalent in town, some twenty cases having been reported, and it is believed there are many more to which a physician has not been called.

The ball grounds and the vicinity near the pumping station have been nicely graded, and put in such condition that it is reported there is not a better ball ground in this part of the country.

The night lunch wagon made its first appearance on the street Tuesday evening, and is located in front of Barnes & Packard's market. It is a handsome affair, and it is said the food and coffee is excellent. It is to be kept open from 6 to 2.

Resolutions Adopted by the School Committee of Monson, July 21, 1893.

WHEREAS: Since our last meeting, Mr. Willard Leach, one of the oldest and most valued of the School Committee, has been called from earth, therefore

Resolved: That in this death we recognize the loss of a personal friend and a faithful co-worker.

Resolved: That we hereby extend our sympathy to his family and all others with whom he was in any way associated.

Resolved: That these resolutions be entered upon the records of the committee, be published in the local papers, and a copy be sent to the family.

Fell Dead.

These words are very familiar to our readers, as not a day passes without the report of the sudden death of some prominent citizen. The explanation is "heart disease." Therefore beware if you have any of the following symptoms: Short breath, pain in side, smothering spells, swollen ankles, asthmatic breathing, weak and hungry spells, tenderness in shoulder or arm, fluttering of heart or irregular pulse. These symptoms mean heart disease. The most reliable remedy is Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which has saved thousands of lives. Book of testimonials free at LeGro & Lynde's, who also sell the New Heart Cure. 52-17

Fail to Do Their Duty.

Everybody has at times failed to do their duty towards themselves. Hundreds of lady readers suffer from sick headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and female troubles. Let them follow the example of Mrs. H. Herbechter, Stevens Point, Wis., who for five years suffered greatly from nervous prostration and sleeplessness, tried physicians and different medicines without success. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine caused sound sleep every night, and she is feeling like a new person. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, Laramie City, Wyoming, who tried all other remedies, declares that after three weeks' use of the Nervine for headache, nervous prostration, etc., she was entirely relieved. Sold by LeGro & Lynde. Trial bottle free. 52-17

Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills

Act on a new principle—regulating the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new discovery. Dr. Miles' Pills speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles, constipation. Unequaled for men, women, children. Smallest, mildest, surest! 50 doses 25 cents. Samples free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 52-17

Unlike tea and coffee, Ayer's Hygienic Coffee is as beneficial and equally as agreeable in summer as in winter. Robinson & Taylor sell it.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer has restored gray hair to its original color and prevented baldness in thousands of cases. It will do so to you.

As a blood purifier, the most eminent physicians prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the most powerful combination of vegetable alteratives ever offered to the public. As a spring and family medicine, it may be freely used by old and young alike.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Those in want of healthy, out door employment for the summer will do well to read the ad. in another column headed "Work offered." 4-11

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

"It has cured others and will cure you" is true only of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The motto suits the medicine and the medicine the motto. What better assurance could you have that a remedy will cure you, than the fact that it has cured such multitudes of others?

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

Great blocks of goods must be gotten out of the way of falling bricks and dust—a hundred thousand dollars worth of goods more or less. To save injury we must sell quickly. We must sell for less than we thought.

A phenominal scoop!

13,000 yards of John D. Cutter's highest grade of wash silk, of value $22,500 for $34,220.

For the first time in your life you can buy it for less than $1.25. Our New York office bought the entire stock of eighteen thousand yards to sell at the uniform price of 79 cents a yard.

Our share of the lot comprises twenty-seven different styles, and there isn't an indifferent one in the whole collection.

You could not have imagined a more unlikely event. Cutter's silks rank among the best in the world. We never heard of another quite such a bargain. Samples sent.

PROVIDENCE HEALTHIER.

DR. HOLLAND'S ADVICE FOLLOWED BY MRS. A. J. F. LINCHESTER OF THIS CITY WITH THE HAPPIEST RESULTS.

George L. Claflin & Co. and Messrs. Blanding & Blanding Interviewed.

We believe it was the eminent Dr. Holland who once said there were many proprietary preparations to be found upon the shelves of a drug store that would cure the diseases for which they were prepared better and quicker than could be found in the Materia Medica for the same complaints.

Many articles have appeared of late in the medical journals and daily papers about the success Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has met with in the cure of those diseases brought about by excess of uric acid in the blood. So many of the common sicknesses of to-day such as rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney and liver complaints, and the sicknesses women suffer from, come from this one cause, that we determined to investigate the subject and much to our surprise found we were totally ignorant as to the good Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has been doing right in our very city.

Perhaps Providence does not hold a more grateful person to-day than Mrs. A. J. F. Manchester, but it did not take us long to learn that Mrs. Manchester had every reason to feel that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had saved her life—to use Mrs. Manchester's own words, "I suffered terribly with my kidneys and I had from my childhood a bad humor that had caused great inflammation all through my body. I had used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy but a short time when the inflammation began to heal, my kidney trouble disappeared and it made a new woman of me."

Inquiring among Mrs. Manchester's friends shows she states nothing but facts regarding her case. Many other instances of the kind are widely talked of here in Providence where Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has effected cures after physicians had given up hope. In speaking with a member of the firm of Messrs. George L. Claflin & Co. and Messrs. Blandin & Blandin as to the merit of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy they confirmed what we have already said. "It has an enormous sale, increased no doubt from the fact that so many physicians were prescribing it in cases of rheumatism, dyspepsia, nervousness and other diseases instead of the old method."

A well known Providence physician said, "I obtain better results from Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy in cases of rheumatism, scrofula, dyspepsia, nervousness and general tired feeling so often experienced in the spring—than from any known remedy. Any man, woman or child suffering from the diseases I have mentioned or any other brought about by impure blood or excess of uric acid, or aectic acid in the blood can be cured if they will but use Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy according to directions."
—Providence, R. I. Telegram. 4

How does the new paint-work look in your house? Dull, lustreless, thin and "threadbare?" Well! don't blame the painter, unless you authorized him to get the Chilton Paints and he failed to do so—which he evidently did, if the work looks like that. The expense was heavy enough, was it? Ah! but you would have spent less and had more satisfaction had the Chilton Paints been used. Half the quantity you consumed would have done as much work and have done it twice as well. Let this experience teach you better next time. Reliable dealers keep Chilton Paints, and everybody who tries them once uses them always. They do their own advertising when once introduced. They are in all shades, well ground, made with pure linseed oil and turpentine driers, and last, but not least, if you buy a gallon, you get a gallon, and not a teaspoonful less.

Sold by LeGRO & LYNDE, Palmer.

Some Time.

Some time you'll think of these summer days
Dreamingly fading in purple haze,
Some time, with a thrill of passionate pain,
You'll long for this sweetness over again.
Some time, when the moonlight is silvering all
And the pansies sleep by the garden wall
In the deepening twilight's odorous dusk,
Weighted with clustering rose-bloom's musk,
You will watch for a gleaming figure fair,
White-robed and noiseless, with falling hair.
And gazing deep in the luminous eyes
That made for your life its paradise,
The light, by music and odorous calm,
Of this golden-crowned summer will linger like balm,
Till, starting, you waken to clasp but air
And list to a flitting foot-fall there.
Some time you'd give all the wide world's praise
For one of those vanishing summer days,
For only one leaf from the swaying bough—
Some time you'd clasp it—O why not now?

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

HER MODESTY.

I met her on the crossing,
And, the bold wind blowing free,
Her ruffled skirts were tossing
Nearly half-way to her knee.

How she blushed with shame and terror,
Striving wildly to repair
With both hands the wind's mad error,
And I mutely wondered where

She this modesty had hidden
When cavorting by the sea;
All the world might gaze unchidden
From her ankle to her knee.

JEFFERSON'S RETORT.

"Joe" Jefferson, the famous American actor, was once asked to spend a week with a Scotch peer. Among the guests was a brilliant and haughty lady, who was the daughter of an earl.

"I suppose," says Mr. Jefferson, "there must have been a homespun flavor in my American manner that amused her, for she made a dead-set at quizzing me. I did not detect it at first, and answered some of her absurd questions about America quite innocently.

"She kept her face so well that I might never have discovered this but for the idiotic grin upon the smooth face of one of her boyish admirers; and then I felt, for the honor of my country, that if she ever made another thrust at me I would parry it if I could. I had not long to wait; for, emboldened by her late success, she turned upon me and she said:

"'By-the-by, have you met the Queen lately?'

"'No, madam,' I replied, with perfect seriousness; I was out when her majesty called upon me.'

"She colored slightly, and then turned away, and never spoke to me again: but I was revenged."—From Quipps.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possible derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo. O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DER PENEFITS UV TRINKING.

A "liquor merchant" of Topeka was heard to discourse as follows, the other day, to a sympathizing crowd:

As I am der boss wit a bier saloon it was yus right dot I shtand oop for dot peezness. Uv a man vas got a saloon mit himself, I guess he vas know sometings about trinks, ain't it?

I am avare dot it is uv vellers dot vants to save monish vas a dryin' to run down der peezness. Der vas John B. Go-off, und Suse Anthony, und Barnum's circus, und blenty uv udder fellers; put ven I dold you somedings, guess you vould say: "Pully for Sauermilch! his het vas level."

Der ort to be a rum shop on every corner in every town, und den peezness will pe goot. Der vhisky business helps eny town. No matter how dull peezness vas, beeples vill spend der monish for trinks. Dis vas broved efry tay. All ofer Nye York you can find vorking mans dot vill spend feefty cents efry tay fur vhisky and bier. Dot broves dot der liquor peezness vas helpin' trade, ain't it?

Und dot vas not der only vay; der vas menny udders. Uv it vas not for trinkin' menny bublic puildings vould not peer puilt—dese brisons, und shails, und poorhouses, und inebriate asylums, und such dings; und oof dese houses vas not puilt, vy, uv gourse, der meganics vould haf nottings to do; ain't it?

Uv you don't got some rum shops inter yer town you vouldn't need no shail, und uv gourse, you don't vant no sheriff, and vot vould der bolticians done?

Uv der vas no rum der vould been no murder, no fites, no stabs, no lickin' your vife, no noddings for der newspapers, und vot vould der editors done?

Ah! mein frients, pefore you run down der rum yust tink uv all dose dings. How many peeples vould been out uv york mitout liquor? Vy, ve vould need no polices; no charity gommissions; no supe-houses; no communists; no noddings.

Uv you had no vhisky shops, vare vill your poys spend der efenings? Vy, dey vould haf to stay at home, und it vould kill menny of dem to be cast into der same society as der mudders and seesters. Der mudders dell dem der same shotly shtories, vot dey hear mit der saloon? Dot vos empossible. Pesides, der saloon vas uv yuse to der family. Un you haf a son und you don't vant him sitting arount der house all der efening, you can yust send him to der saloon, und he vould not vorry you some more dot night. In all dese vays a saloon helps a town very much; ain't it?

Und it helps you socially. It benefits your vamily. It helps your sons to get acquainted mit beeple dot dey vould not oddervise know, mithout der saloon.

Der vos nodding like bier for sociableness—except vhisky. Vhisky vas a leetle ahet.

Der vas a dime ven two frents vould meet und ockchange der gompliments uv der tay und den part. But der saloon has done avay mit dot cold vay uv acting. Now, ven dwo or dree friends meet und shake hands mit demselves, one uv dem will say: "Let's haf somedings." Und dey vill valk into der saloon (der is always one handy) und von veller says: "Vot vill you dake?" Und der udder veller says: "I vill dake der same." Und dey yust douch doze glasses togedder und say, "Here she goes," und she does go. Den der udder veller vill say: "Now you must dake somedings mit me." Und dey go dru der same berformance mit demselves once more. Dot vas sociability. Uv you don't get some saloons, how vas you gone to done dot, eh?

Ven you ask a man to dook somedings, you don't vant to dreat him to a coat, or a pair of shus, or a loaf uv bread, or no such voolishness, do you?

Vhisky enables a man to bury his thoughts. He vill forget all apout his hart work—sometimes for more ash a week.

It gifs a man courage in running his house. Vot vould a man do mitout he trinks? I vas so meek as Moses ven I vas sober; but ven I vas full mit bier, you yust pet your poots der schilden and der olt voman vas got to schump arount lifely. Mein vife don't talk back to me den. Uv she vould, I lick her like plazes. I let her know I vas as goot a man as vot she vas, or some udder vones also.

Vhisky teaches a man not to be proud mit himself. Ven a man vos sober he vants glean glose und a goot bed, und blenty uv udder dings. But ven he vas drunk he vas not stock oop. He don't care vot kind of glose he vares, und ven it coomes to schleeping, he vould yust as soon schleep in der gutter as some udder places, und he dinks der curb stone vas a pillar, don't it?

Liquor vas healthy, doo. I know me dot. Yust you watch enny man dot keeps a saloon und vas not too stingy to trink his trinks—yust you vatch him, und see vat a pig pelly he vas got. You don't want petter proof as dot, ain't it? Ven I started a saloon I vas verry skinny, und now der poys gall me "Old Bloat." I vas gettin' ferry fat.

Efry town likes to haf rich men, und der vas no business vich a man could got rich so soon as in der saloon peezness. Der vas ferry pig profits in all kinds of trinks. Yust look at some ferry young feller vot vas tending bar. He starts mit nottings, und in a few years he vas got shirts mit frills, und a diamond pin, und a gold vatch, mit a chain dot weighs den pounds, und monish enough to start a saloon of his own.

Look at me. I started a bier saloon after I failed to get rich in der puggy peezness; und now I got no troubles und no vork, only to tap a new kag ven de udder von vas dry, und rake in der stamps.

I am a frient of der working man, pecause dey are a frient to me und help to support me. Ven der vorking mens vas mat mit der posses dey meet in mein saloon, und trink bier, und make speeches, und say, "Tam ter panks und der rich peebles," und tings like dot. I say so, doo.

Somedimes I vas mad. I vas ven vimmens und schildren come here to peg monish to puy pread; und ven I say, "No," den dey say der husbands und vaters spend all der monish here. Vot vos dot dere peezness? All vimmins tink uv vas spending monish on dress, und der olt mans must vork, vork, vork, und haf no enshoyment.

I stick mein saloon. I haf no license, und der government vas packing me; und Murphy, nor der vimmen's crusade, nor St. John can make me stop. Dot's der kind uv feller vot I vas. Don't it?

A LUCKY ACCIDENT.

One of the greatest discoveries ever made was the result of the purest accident. It was the year 1796. The citizens of Munich had just witnessed the first triumphant performance of Mozart's opera "Don Juan," and the theater was deserted by all save one man, Alois Sennefelder, who, after making a round of inspection in the building to see that no sparks had ignited anything combustible, retired to his room to stamp the tickets of admission for the day following. When he entered his apartments he had three things in his hand—a polished whetstone which he had purchased for sharpening razors, a ticket stamp still moistened with printing ink, and a check on the treasury of the theater for his weekly salary. As he placed the latter upon the table a gust of wind swept it high up in his room and then deposited it in a basin filled with water. Sennefelder dried the wet paper as well as he could and then weighed it down with a whetstone upon which he had before carelessly placed the printing stamp. When he returned to his room the following morning he was astonished to see the letters printed with remarkable accuracy upon the dampened paper. A thought came to him. He wondered whether by some such means he could not simplify his work of continually copying the songs of the chorus. He went out and purchased a large stone, commenced making experiments, and, as we all know, finally discovered the art of printing from stone—lithography.—Science Siftings.

THE THICKNESS OF A SOAP BUBBLE.—The capacity of human comprehension is not a little tasked at the conclusion arrived at by scientists, who, it now appears, have succeeded in measuring the thickness of the envelope of soapy water enclosing the air of the bubble when it has become so thin as to produce rainbow tints. Thus, when showing the shade of violet, it was one-fourth the thickness of the length of an ordinary violet wave of light—one sixty-thousandth of an inch—a thickness, that is, equal to 1-1,240,000th of an inch. As the bubble continued to expand, a black patch formed adjacent to the pipe from which the bubble was being blown, and the thickness of this patch was found to be only one-fortieth of that of the violet section, or just about 1-1,000,000th of an inch.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

THE FIRST CABLEGRAM.—The first message over the Atlantic cable was a dispatch from Queen Victoria to President Buchanan. There were ninety-five words in the message, but, owing to something getting wrong with the wires, it was twenty-four hours from the time that the first word was received until the last word was taken off. The principal part of the message was the queen's expression of the wish that the cable would prove a bond of union and a link of friendship between the two great nations. Mr. Buchanan heartily concurred in this wish and incidentally remarked to her majesty that in his estimation this "crowning triumph of science would prove a greater boon to humanity in general than the results of all the hard fought battles ever won."—St. Louis Republic.

TIME IS MONEY.—A mill owner not long ago issued the order that girls in his employ should not wear laced shoes. The reason he gave was that each one's boot became untied at least five times a day, and took at least five seconds to retie. When these twenty-five seconds were multiplied by 300—the number of girls in his employ—the loss of time was, he said, too serious to submit to.

Another mill owner, talking over this case said that he had forbidden visitors, because each of his "hands" turned her head to look at them. Computing twenty visitors a day and two seconds for the heads turning to each of his 600 employees, made over six hours daily wasted in that gesture. Statistics are inexorable things.—New York Telegram.

THE KIND THAT CURES

JOHN C. JEFFRIES,
Worcester, Mass.

A Wonder in Worcester!

A Grateful Husband and Father Says of his Wife:

"Thank God, She is Well!"

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA is CHEAPER AT $1.00 PER BOTTLE THAN ANYOTHER AT A GIFT, BECAUSE IT IS "THE KIND THAT CURES."

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.:

GENTLEMEN—DANA'S SARSAPARILLA has been used in Goodwood Hall I must let others know. For the last 10 years my wife has had very poor health, complaining of severe bearing down pain, also pains in back and limbs. Her blood was so poor that it would appear in Linguistic blisters all over her limbs. She tried the different Sarsaparillas and was treated by Physicians in Mass., N. Y. and N. J., but found but little if any relief.

Five months ago I bought her a bottle of

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

It helped her so much I bought three more, and it was almost impossible to describe the change it has wrought. THE RHEUMATIC PAIN DISAPPEARED, also the pains in side and limbs, so more bearing down pain or tired feeling. THANK GOD, she is WELL, a woman feeling.

Hoping this may induce others to try it, I remain, Yours truly, JOHN C. JEFFRIES, 175 Pleasant St., Worcester, Mass.

This is to certify that I sold Mr. J. Gries DANA'S SARSAPARILLA, and believe him to be an honest, truthful person, and do not believe he would make a false statement in regard to its merits. Yours respectfully,

FRANK H. TENNEY, Druggist.

A Dutiful Son Rejoices!

The Kind that Never Fails

Gentlemen:—I have had Rheumatism for a long time in my arms, back, and shoulders. It seemed to travel about, sometimes in one place, and sometimes in another. It often affected my stomach, and my whole system got out of order. I became reduced in flesh, and at times could not work. My aged parents were partly dependent on me for support, and my failing health was more than ordinarily a serious matter. Less than a bottle of Leon's Sarsaparilla has cured me, and I am now well and strong. I cannot express my gratitude for what your medicine has done for me.

A Friend

Wishes to speak through the Register of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of AYER'S PILLS. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are

In Need

of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills."—Boothbay (Me.) Register.

"Between the ages of five and fifteen I was troubled with a kind of salt rheum, or eruption, chiefly confined to the legs, and especially to the bend of the knee above the calf. Here running sores formed which would scab over, but would break immediately on moving the leg. My mother tried everything she could think of, but all was without avail. Although a child, I read in the papers about the beneficial effects of Ayer's Pills, and persuaded my mother to let me try them. With no great faith in the result, she procured

Ayer's Pills

and I began to use them, and soon noticed an improvement. Encouraged by this, I kept on till I took two boxes, when the sores disappeared and have never troubled me since."—H. Chipman, Real Estate Agent, Roanoke, Va.

"I suffered for years from stomach and kidney troubles, causing very severe pains in various parts of the body. None of the remedies I tried afforded me any relief until I began taking Ayer's Pills, and was cured." —Wm. Goddard, Notary Public, Five Lakes, Mich.

But fair above the tower top
The Union Flag still flew.
Thus when husbands, sons and brothers
Went forth to dare and do,
O'er the streaming tears of women
The Flag of Freedom flew.
The lightning flashed incessant,
The thunder louder grew,
But brave above the tower top
The Flag undaunted flew.
Thus 'mid the roar of cannon,
Where man his brother slew,
Above the flash and flame of war
The glorious Flag still flew.
And when the storm passed over,
Serene below the blue,
Like Hope upon the tower top
The Flag in beauty flew.
Thus after war and battle,
When Peace came down anew,
O'er one united nation
The Stars and Stripes still flew.

MOSES TEGGART.

GRANDFATHER'S MUSKET.

"Did you really fight with it?"

"Fight with it! What is a musket for?"

"But it is so heavy."

"Men were men in those days." Grandfather George drew up his bent figure with an instant's pride.

"Tell us about it," coaxed the boys.

Grandfather was pleased to mildly live his battles over again. "My father carried that musket at Valley Forge," he said.

The group of boys had heard this story in the very same words a score of times.

They knew it was not much of a story, and that grandfather would get tired or wander in it before it was half told, but they gathered about him, waiting breathlessly for the fragment.

"I have often heard my father tell how he marched with that musket over his shoulder when he was so weak with hunger he staggered like a drunken man. The old gun was a heavy load, but he hung on to it, even when his shoes were worn from his feet and he made tracks of blood in the snow when he walked. That was the winter at Valley Forge with Washington."

Then the questions would begin:

'Did Washington go hungry, too? Was there ever a Tory killed with that musket? What a curious lock—how did it work, anyway?"

But grandfather was childish and forgetful, and never got beyond the central facts.

"You see the flint is gone now," he would explain, "but it's just as good as ever it was. I had it with me at Lundy's Lane, too," smoothing the huge barrel, and making a vain effort to adjust the stock to his shoulder. "It's a good old historic gun. It has done famous work. Now, put it back to its place."

"But tell us about Lundy's Lane, too, grandpa—you never tell that."

"No, no; you can read it in your books. Put the musket away now and run off to play."

So the interest in the old fire-arm was never really satisfied. The boys knew just enough to stir their hearts with a thrill of war, but not enough to make them reverence the ancient weapon as its owner did.

"I'd like to shoot the old thing off once," said Mars.

"You couldn't shoot it—the flint is gone," said Ralph, who was half afraid of Mars's boldness. "Besides, grandpa'd rather you'd steal his crutch and cane than have you lay a finger on it when he didn't know it."

"But he needn't know it. We can get it some time when he's asleep on the porch, and we can fire it off in the back lot."

Ralph protested. "There's nothing to load it with, and how could you touch it off?"

"I could fix it."

"Well, you'd better let it alone."

The very fact that he was advised not to do a thing, or was told it could not be done, was enough to set Mars's ingenuity to work and to make him have a strong desire to do it. The harmless old musket that had not known a flash of powder in years, became a haunting thought to him. "Wouldn't it make a whaling old noise?" he thought, and "wouldn't it be fun to hear the very sound that Washington and the British heard?"

Mars's mind was made up.

Some day when Ralph was out of sight, and grandfather was around on the east porch in the June shade, drowsing to the music of the bees in the locust trees, he would get the musket and examine it all by himself.

This opportunity came sooner than he had expected.

Ralph was allowed to go to a neighboring town with his father for a day. Mars was to stay at home, with the promise of having his turn next. It was Saturday. Left entirely to himself the day threatened to be dull, almost beyond endurance. What could he do that would be worth while? He remembered the musket. Ralph would not be there with his scruples, and his mother was too busy to notice. Out on the porch he could see a flutter of white, which he knew was grandfather's hair blown by the soft wind. It was one of grandfather's peaceful days, and Mars knew there was little likelihood that he would come pottering around to make any trouble.

"My, but it's heavy," said Mars, standing in a chair and lifting the veteran gun from its wooden brackets in the corner of the storeroom. "Those old fellows must have been giants."

Mars's house stood just at the edge of the village. At the rear was a large field. It was a lovely day for idling. The sunshine was just warm enough and the crows were cawing.

When he got near the fence that separated the open lot from the wood beyond he halted to examine his possession. He scrutinized the mechanism of the lock. He rested the heavy muzzle upon a fence rail and sighted along the barrel. He scraped at little spots of rust. He wielded it, shouldering arms and pretending to march.

But all this was mere make-believe compared with what it would be if he could shoot it off.

He spied a neighbor's boy, saunteringalong the road. "Hello, Nid!"

"Hello!"

"Come over here."

Nid vaulted lazily over the fence by the roadside, and came towards Mars. "What you got?" he called.

"Come over and see."

"A gun."

"Yes, it's grandfather's. It was fired in the Revolution."

Nid knew about it. He had heard the story plenty of times.

"Will she shoot?"

"If I had some powder."

They examined it and conferred about its possibilities. Finally Nid started on a quick run across the lot towards home. He was after the munitions of war. He returned with his father's powder-flask, and his pockets stuffed full of paper for waddling.

They loaded the musket, Mars superintending. Nid poured the powder into his hand—enough for three charges in grandfather's days—and Mars rammed it down with a big wad of paper.

"Put in some grass," shouted Nid, pulling up a handful and twisting it into a ball. "I tell you that'll make her sing."

"It'll make her kick," dissented Mars doubtingly. Then he added after a moment's reflection, "Let's poke it through the fence and set a slow match. That's the way the old fellows did—I saw it in a picture more'n two hundred years ago."

"Two hundred years ago!" jeered Nid, "you wasn't there two hundred years ago."

"I didn't say I was. But that's the way they did. But—we can't hold this gun up if she's going to kick," wishing Nid to understand that he might do it under ordinary conditions.

Nid accepted this suggestion with alacrity, for he too felt the whole business was somewhat experimental. "She" might even do something worse than kick, under the pressure of this modern load.

Mars pushed the cover of the pan open with all the strength of his small thumbs and filled it with loose powder. Then he rolled a strip of paper, and pressed one end of the rude fuse into the pan. This done, both boys carefully pushed the muzzle of the musket through the lowest space in the old rail fence, propping the stock on either side with crooked sticks to hold it firmly in position.

"Who's going to light it?" asked Nid, showing symptoms of retreat.

"I am," said Mars. He struck a match and touched it to the top of the fuse.

Both boys scampered half-way across the field. There they halted and awaited results.

A puff of smoke, a booming report that echoed through the wood beyond, startling every squirrel to flight with shrill chatterings of alarm, told that grandfather's opinions of the musket were well-founded.

The boys looked into each other's eyes with delight. They sprang forward, picked up the quiet piece and examined every part. They found it had fallen clear over, with its flintless lock dug deep into the earth, an evidence that it had "kicked" in earnest.

It had spoken beautifully. The sound had been music to their noise-loving ears. They repeated the operation until they were tired. Each time the result was equally satisfactory. Only the heat of the noon hour and hunger made them desist.

The musket was restored to its brackets and no questions followed. If any of the household had heard the firing it was set down to students practicing at a target, as they often did in the wood.

Mars said nothing to Ralph about his experiment until the next day. Ralph would have been shocked and disapproving but for Mars's glowing account of his success. This made Ralph eager to see it also. For several weeks thereafter it was no uncommon thing for grandfather's musket to sound its old-fashioned and heroic call in the back lot to the excited clamour of boy voices.

There began to be talk about Fourth of July. A few fire-crackers and torpedoes to celebrate with were all these primative children could expect. To be sure, there was a small town cannon that always aroused them with its resounding salute on this patriotic day. But Mars was not allowed to go near that, nor to mix with the crowds about it.

And this year there were rumors that the Vaughn boys from the city, who were at their country place on the hill, had a genuine toy cannon, almost as big as a real one.

Mars was consumed with envy. He longed for a cannon of his own. The musket-firing had already lost its novelty. They had learned to manage it to such a nicety there was no longer any zest of daring in it. If he only had a cannon for the Fourth of July!

Once set upon a purpose Mars was not likely to give up until the end was either gained or found to be utterly hopeless.

If that musket-barrel could be shortened in some way it would make a splendid cannon. He stole in to look at it with that inspiration in his brain. Examination of the heavy barrel confirmed him. A foot in length from the stock was just what he wanted.

"If Ralph wasn't such a goody he'd help me," Mars said.

But he went to Nid instead, carrying the musket with him.

"We could file it off," was the verdict.

"I thought so. Let's try it. There'll be no Fourth of July without a cannon."

He unscrewed the barrel from the stock and held it up admiringly. A couple of rusty files from old Nid's storehouse and the job was begun. Mars and Nid alternated in the work. When one had rasped at the sternly-tempered old relic until his arms ached, the other took his place.

A distinct scratch appeared. The furrow deepened. A scar, like the mark of a gnawing tooth, grew brighter as the work progressed.

The barrel was severed at last, and then the boys devised a wooden carriage on which to mount their piece of ordnace. This taxed their ingenuity even more than the gun itself. But after two days' work they were fairly satisfied with it, and pronounced it complete.

Not until it was done in every detail did Mars reveal his secret to Ralph. At first Ralph turned pale with horror at the sacrilege. But soon his boyish instinct overcame all sentimental scruples. He delighted to visit with Mars and Nid the hay loft where the cannon was hidden, and to speculate how far it would make itself heard.

The Fourth of July was never before so slow in coming.

Long before the sun was up on that eventful morning Mars scrambled out of bed and began to dress himself. It was not later than three o'clock. He gave Ralph a most energetic shaking: "Wake up, Ral, or the other boys will get ahead of us.

Ralph was instantly alert. He leaped to the floor and hurried on his clothes. Then they stole softly down the back stairs. Everything was in readiness, made so the night before.

"What is that?"

It was the first distant, enterprising firecracker.

"Hurry, or the Vaughn boys will beat us," cried Ralph excitedly. "Fire her off, Mars."

Bang, went such a report as shook the dew from the rose-bushes under their mother's window. They were none to soon. A faint sound like an echo came from the hill—the Vaughn cannon answering back.

They loaded and fired again. Again the echo answered.

"We beat 'em! we beat 'em!" cried Mars.

The mutilated musket did its duty equally well as a cannon. Even Grandfather, hearing the firing, woke with a thrill of ancient boyhood in his feeble old heart. "Hi," he laughed, "it's the Fourth of July!"

The whole household got up from sheer inability to sleep. Grandfather appeared on the porch with a broad smile.

"Hi, boys!" he called. "Ra. Mrs. come here!"

It was a critical moment, and they could not answer. A newly lighted fuse was sizzling towards the powder-pan. Bang! it went. Before the smoke could clear away grandfather called again: "Mars, come here, I say!"

"Yes—sir—I'm coming."

"I think I'll celebrate a little, too. Go to the lumber-room and fetch the old musket. I'll give you a real revolutionary salute to go along with your little fool of a cannon."

"Wha-t?"

"Go to the lumber-room and fetch my musket. I'll help you celebrate. I'll make twice the noise you can make. Run, now!"

"But—Grandpa, the flint is gone—you know."

Mars hardly knew what to say. This most unexpected demand gave him no time to frame excuses. His father came out just then to see what contrivance the boys had.

"A cannon?"

"Yes—sir," rather faintly from Ralph. "Mars and Nid Curran made it."

Grandfather was growing impatient. "Mars," he called.

But Mars stood at his father's side trembling and did not heed.

"What is this?" asked the father sternly of each boy, with a quick recognition of what had gone to the making of the cannon.

"Why," stammered Mars, "it's only a piece of—the old—musket—that nobody ever used."

"What are you talking about, and why don't you do as I say?" demanded grandfather querulously, coming down from the porch and halting near them.

Ralph was very pale, and Mars could hear his own heart pound, pound, like a great hammer in his ears.

"Father, these boys have done a dreadful mischief. I can't believe they meant to do wrong. But I'd give half my farm if I could undo this, or if I had known what they were about."

By degrees it dawned on grandfather that that toy in the grass was a broken part of his greatest treasure.

"My flint-lock—my old Valley Forge musket, that your great-grandfather carried with bloody feet over the snow when he camped with Washington? and that I carried at Lundy's Lane in the war of '12?"

The old man's voice quavered, high and higher, until it reached almost a shriek. Then when he could find no more words the tears ran in a flood down his wrinkled cheeks.

"I didn't mean any harm," Mars tried to say, but the words stuck in his throat.

"Where is the rest of it? asked his father.

"Up in the hay-loft where we worked."

"Go and get the pieces together and fetch them here."

Mars was glad to escape. He could never forget the little rainbows in the dew on the grass at his feet, as they sparked through his tears while he went upon that errand.

It was not a jubilant household at breakfast. Mars had never seen his grandfather's hand tremble so as it did that morning, and when he saw drop after drop trickle down the shrunken cheeks he could not swallow a mouthful.

He asked to be excused and went into another room and flung himself desperately upon the floor. He could hear the small boom of the Vaugn cannon now and then.

"I never though it was wicked or cruel," he said passionately to himself. "I only wanted a cannon, and that was all I thought of."

When he was out of hearing, his mother spoke with a stifled sob: "I can't believe Mars meant to do wrong—I am sure he did not realize. He's such an industrious and ingenious little fellow."

"It is really the most ingenious thing I ever saw," confessed the father, sadly. "He's got a piece of ordnance there that would do credit to a gun-maker."

"Yes," said his mother, "we must not be too severe with him. He is very tender-hearted, and I'm sure his day is spoiled already. It is so with everything Mars does—he devises, he works. When he has better judgment those very qualities will tell."

There was no more real pleasure for the boys that day, although their father went with them to the town-firing and to the dinner in the grove. Grandfather's tears had completely broken their hearts. As long as grandfather lived he mourned for his musket.

And to-day, a grown-up man, now a well-known inventor and student of science, has amongst the treasures he sometimes shows his children a toy cannon made from a Revolutionary flint-lock.

Whenever he shows it he tells the Fourth of July story.

And there are sometimes tears in his own eyes as he recalls those he brought to the dear aged eyes so many years ago.—Clara Doty Bates, in Wide Awake.

THE BEAUTIFUL BALTIMORE ORIOLE AND HIS REMARKABLE NESTS.

But the Baltimore oriole deserves a longer notice; he is a prince in a house of princes. The family to which he belongs is composed of birds remarkable either for plumage, note, nest, eggs, or habit. Each can claim something curious and original; but the Baltimore shines in every one of these particulars, for in plumage, song and nest alike he is an especially remarkable bird. When the Earl of Baltimore became the lord of Maryland, his followers quickly noticed the correspondence between his heraldic livery of orange and black and the orange and black of the splendid bird that so abounded in the new states, so that, very naturally, the name "Baltimore bird" was suggested, and has been borne ever since.

His nest is one of the most wonderful in existence. It is made of separate threads, strings, horsehair, of strips of bark, closely interwoven into a sort of sack, and so firmly knit together that it will bear a weight of twenty or thirty pounds. In the Southern parts of this bird's range the nest is suspended from two or three terminal twigs for protection from numerous enemies, such as snakes, opossums, and the like; it is also made six or seven inches in depth to prevent the eggs being thrown out by the high winds. But in the colder North, where tree-climbing foes are rare, it is hung, not at the extremities of the branches, but in a cluster of twigs that affords shelter. It is much shallower than when exposed to the wind, but is very thickly woven, and lined with soft, warm materials. The oriole's loud, fife-like notes ringing from the high tree-tops in the morning are an ample refutation of the old theory that melody and bright plumage have never been bestowed on the same bird.—From "The Birds That We See," by ERNEST E. THOMPSON, in the June Scribner.

EXTRAVAGANT.

In the other days, not so very long ago either, when part of life in the far West was shooting Indians, a young settler went out there from the East with a 16-shot repeating rifle that he was very expert in handling. The old chaps who still carried muzzle loading smooth-bores had their doubts about the new fangled gun, and they also had more or less fun with the youngster and were always telling him he'd have no use for a thing like that when they got into a fight with the Indians some day. A week later their stockade was attacked by fifty hostiles, and the new man with the new gun was not found wanting. By one lucky snot the tenderfoot sent a bullet clean through two Indians and dropped them both. He gave a yell of triumph and expected the men with him would join, but they dibn't.

"Here, young feller," said an old hunter, tapping him on the shoulder with his ramrod, "don't get extravagant like that any more. I want to shoot a few of them redskins myself when I get this gun loaded, if you don't keer."

Dreaming and Waking.

Beside the road I dreamed of heaven!
I heard its far-off fountains play;
I heard the song of souls forgiven,
Like birds that chant the birth of day.
I dreamed I saw an angel come
Down from those heights to lead me home.

His eyes were kind; his robes dropped dew
And fragrance of that unknown land.
He spoke, but in no tongue I knew—
No language I could understand;
And with a glance of pitying pain
He turned him back to heaven again.

A pilgrim passed. "And didst thou hear,"
I asked him, "what the angel said?"
Whispered the traveler in my ear,
Ere onward into light he sped:
"I heard the angel sigh, 'Not yet!
This soul knows not love's alphabet.'

"Oh, comrade mine, thou dreamst in vain
Of heaven, if here thou hast not found,
In soothing human grief and pain,
That earth itself is holy ground.
Unpracticed in love's idioms now,
A foreigner to heaven art thou.

"Cold wouldst thou walk, and blind and dumb,
Among those flaming hosts above,
A homesick alien; for the sum
Of all their thoughts and deeds is love;
And they who leave not self behind
No heaven in heaven itself can find.

"Rejoice that with the sons of men
A little while thou lingerest yet,
Go, read thy book of life again;
Go back and learn love's alphabet
Of Christ the Master. He will teach
Thy lips to shape the heavenly speech."

I looked within; a dreary scroll
Of loveless, dull, self-blinded days,
I saw my humble past unroll.
Not even my fellow-pilgrim's gaze
Could I uplift my face to meet,
Such glory played around his feet!

He went his way. I turned again,
Ashamed and weeping, to the road
Thronged by the suffering sons of men;
A beckoning face among them glowed.
Sweeter than all the harps of heaven
I heard a voice: "Thou art forgiven!

"Come follow me, and learn of me,
And I will teach thee how to love."
My Master! now I turn to thee;
I sigh not for a heaven above.
These human souls are angels bright;
Thy presence here is heaven's own light!

ANSWER YOUR LETTERS.

Few people, says a writer in Kate Field's Washington, know what a delight and an education correspondence may become. The reason is that few people know how to "answer letters." The chief cause of this condition of things is carelessness. A person receives a letter and is either too busy to re-read it when answering, or too lazy to take the trouble. If these slip-shod letter-writers could see the effect of their careless answers, they would rarely drop a letter in the box. A careless answer to a friendly letter is not only rude, but unkind—sometimes positively cruel.

An invalid, after reading aloud to me a letter she had received from a common friend, laid it wearily aside. I asked her if she had not enjoyed it. "Oh, yes," she said, "but it was such an effort to write to her, and she does not even mention my letter."

It hurts to give so much and receive so little.

A more pointed instance comes to my mind. An acquaintance who had recently married lost her husband. The thought of her pain so filled my heart at the time that I felt that I must mention it in a letter I was obliged to write. In the middle of the answer which came to me was this: "Isn't it a shame about Mr. S.——? I feel so sorry for his wife." And that was all! The very choice of words irritated and wounded me. The young man had died in the opening of his manhood, leaving his wife almost crazed with the loss, and my correspondent merely thought it "a shame!"

At another time I was in trouble of my own. I had to write to a friend, and forced myself to speak of it, thinking she would misunderstand silence, I mentioned the subject quietly, admitting that I felt it deeply, and made the rest of my letter as cheerful as usual. I received an answer in a few days, but on the subject which was uppermost in my thoughts there was not a word!

Of course, letters are often written merely to entertain or express friendship, and a specific answer is not required. It is almost always desirable to show the appreciation and the pleasure felt at receiving the letter. The answer should, in every case, respond to the spirit of the letter which called it forth. A grave, unresponsive reply to a chatty, amusing letter is humiliating in its effect. Light-hearted people are often the most sensitive to reproof, implied or otherwise. In like manner a light, frivolous response to a serious or despondent letter is out of place, and shows a lack of consideration for others. Again, a person writing to one older and wiser for information or advice, should not be made to feel by the long delay and unwilling tone of the answer that another had been put to great inconvenience.

We would not think of giggling at a person who came to tell us his troubles; nor would we deliver a discourse on vanity to the girl who calls for advice concerning her evening gowns. Who would tell a student to "wait a few weeks" if he dropped in on his way to school with an unsolved geometrical problem! Yet, many people deceive themselves with the idea that lack of sympathy or heartiness is not visible in their letters, as it would be in their manner, if face to face with their correspondents. A man who would have friends must show himself friendly in his letters as well as in everything else.

It is very true that answering letters is often a weariness and vexation, and that even a light correspondence is to some people a burden. This very fact should make every letter-writer more careful. Correspondence is a privilege and involves responsibility. It holds a double power, inasmuch as the pen that can comfort and cheer, and elevate, may become the weapon that wounds and

E. H. Truesdell has awarded the contract for his new residence on North Main street to George W. Lyman. The house is to have four rooms and a reception hall on the ground floor, and four rooms and bath on second floor, with all the modern improvements.

The attention of the officers was called Saturday night to a man who, under the influence of liquor furnished him by his father-in-law, persisted in pounding his wife. A repetition of the offense will be likely to cause his appearance in the district court.

The finest strawberries of the season are to be found in the market now, and are brought from Willimantic, being large, firm and luscious. The fruit will probably be in the market the greater part of next week, but after that will be scarce and high-priced, if any is to be found.

The Baptist Sunday school had a very pleasant picnic at Evergreen Park on Wednesday. A perfect day for weather, a large company, an abundance of food with ice cream and lemonade, and an efficient committee of arrangements, made the day one long to be remembered.

The assessors have advanced far enough in their work to be able to announce the tax rate, which will be $13.80, against $12.30 last year. The rate in the fire district will be $2, against $3.60 last year, while the combined rate in the fire district will be $15.80, against $15.90 last year.

There will be an excursion to New York to-morrow morning by way of New London and the Sound. A special train will leave Palmer at 9.55, and returning the boat will leave New York Monday night, the train reaching Palmer early Tuesday morning. The fare for the round trip is $2.25.

There is complaint that tools which have been used by individuals in caring for their lots in the cemetery and left there over night for convenience have been appropriated by other persons who have not returned them. Any who have thus borrowed tools and neglected to return them are requested to do so now.

Thomas Blanchard has to-day shipped his stallion "Amber," his four-years-old "Adele" and his two-years-old "Caddie Stout," and D. F. Holden his three-years-old "Alcove," to Rutland, Vt., to take part in the stake races there next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, for which they have been entered some time.

Users of water from the pipes of the Palmer Water Company will do well to lay in a supply next Tuesday night, as the water will be shut off early Wednesday morning for the purpose of making repairs at the reservoir. It is hoped to have the water shut off only half the day, but it may be longer before the repairs are completed.

At the Congregational church next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on "Church Membership, an Urgent Duty and a Rich Privilege." Eight will be received into the church, five on profession of faith and three by letter. The evening service will be held up stairs, and the subject will be "The Second Great Need of Humanity."

Eight of the sixteen members of the class of '93 of the Palmer high school have passed successful college examinations. Misses Jennie Brainerd, Bessie Moore, Ora Parent and Alice Thompson will go to Smith, Miss Maud Parker to Wellesley, Byron Shanks to the University of Vermont, Daniel Sullivan and Harry Newell to Amherst.

There was a little "scrap" in the post office Wednesday noon between two well-known business men. During a discussion as to the amount of a bill one called the other a liar and suddenly found himself lying on the floor, the fist of the other having suddenly shot out in an emphatic refutation of the epithet. No serious damage was done.

Travel on the south track of the Boston and Albany road was delayed Wednesday evening by an accident in the freight yard. Some freight cars were derailed near the agricultural grounds, and the trains had to be sent on the north track from this station to West Brimfield. The wrecker came out from Springfield and the track was cleared about 9 o'clock. The 6.08 train from the west was delayed about an hour.

The Palmers put up a good game of ball on the park Saturday afternoon with the Homesteads of Springfield, and defeated them 6 to 4 in an eight-innings game. A base on balls, a hit and a passed ball gave them two runs in the first inning, while a three-base hit by Lombard and a double by T. Rooney, with a little sharp base running, yielded two more in the second To-morrow the game will be with the Monsons.

At the annual meeting of the Eastern Hampden Christian Endeavor Union at Stafford Springs last Friday these officers were elected: President, H. B. Knox of Palmer; vice-presidents, Prof. A. N. Burke and C. C. Keep of Monson, Mr. Thayer of Enfield, H. M. Nichols of Three Rivers, J. M. McKinstry of Brimfield, Edith C. Parker of Stafford Springs, Dr. H. M. Auger of Bondsville, Ella M. Gill of Thorndike, Miss Gates of North Wilbraham; secretary and treasurer, Louis E. Chandler of Palmer.

Several merchants have been swindled recently by a young fellow who claimed to be getting up a card of rules for the Converse House, one of which was to be hung in each room of the house. The border of the cards was to be advertisements of the different business houses, and the fellow showed a letter purporting to be signed by the proprietor of the hotel, saying that he would do all in his power to send business to the advertisers on the card. The letter was a forgery, and the fellow collected for his advertisements in advance and left town.

Carlton A., whom people will remember as the youngest son of Rev. E. A. Perry, former pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church, was graduated last week from the Clinton Liberal Institute. This is a military school to which the United States government sends a regular army officer as professor of tactics and military science. The young man was president of his class, which numbered twenty-two, and senior captain of cadets, the highest position to which a student could attain. His name has gone to Washington as that of one competent to command a company of soldiers in war. He will probably enter Tufts College this autumn, and eventually study for a profession.

An engine and gang of men on the New London Northern road were called to Belchertown Sunday forenoon by the burning of a car of freight which was at first thought to be in charge of that road, but which it was found had been delivered to the Boston and Maine road Saturday night but had not been removed by them. The car was in the middle of a string of about 20, but was got out before the others were damaged. The car contained four cases of goods, six crates of yarn and 22 bags of wool waste, consigned to the Washington Mills Co. at Lawrence by D. McTaggart of South Coventry, Ct., and the loss will be about $1000. The cause was spontaneous combustion in the waste.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church elected the following officers and committees at the meeting Sunday evening: President, H. B. Knox; vice president, Mrs. G. H. Wilkins; secretary and treasurer, Edwin S. Gardner; prayer meeting committee, Dr. G. H. Wilkins, Mrs. J. W. Brainerd, Mrs. L. E. Chandler, Miss Mary Loomis, Miss Bertha Hastings, Harold Shaw; lookout committee, John Page, Miss Bessie Moore, Mrs. H. B. Knox, Miss Carrie Roper, Miss Flora Studley, Byron Shanks; temperance committee, Mrs. B. P. Morse, Misses Julia Allen, Phœbe Hastings, Maud E. Burnham, Mrs. W. H. Higgins, Walter Burford; social committee, Misses Addie Rogers, Effie T. Shaw, Grace Huntley, Lottie Bray.

This section of the country is receiving the attention of green goods men in New York just at present, and many letters are received hereabouts from these fellows. The post office authorities in that city are keeping a sharp watch on the mails, however, and whenever a letter is received for mailing which looks suspicious it is stamped with a request to the postmaster at the point of delivery to have the receiver open it in the presence of the postmaster, and if found to contain one of the contraband circulars it is to be forwarded to the postmaster at New York. Several letters have been received at the local office marked suspected, but as yet only one has been found to contain one of these circulars.

The bicycle races mentioned last week have been arranged for Labor Day, the first Monday in September. The towns to be represented are Palmer, Monson, Warren, Ware and Wilbraham, and the events will consist of a mile race for riders of each town, the winners to receive appropriate medals. Then there will be a race of one mile for boys under 17 years, open to boys in any of the towns; next will be a ladies' race, for the most graceful lady rider, speed not to count. A ten-mile race will be the next on the programme, and it is said that several riders are already training for this event. The last race will be between the winners in the five town races, the final winner to receive something emblematic of the championship of the five towns.

The carpet mill will shut down to-morrow night for an indefinite period, and by this action $100 a day will be withdrawn from the money circulated in town. Wild rumors have been on the street during the week as to the cause of the shutdown, and to the effect that the machinery of the mill was to be or was being shipped away. The latter is not so, and the cause of the stoppage is simply that there is no market for the goods, and it would be very foolish to go on making the carpets when there was no prospect of selling them. The carpet trade is poor all over the country, and the mills in Hartford, Worcester and Lowell will shut down until the state of trade is different from that of the present time. When there is a market for the goods the mill here will be started up again, possibly in a couple of months.

The Sunday school of St. Paul's Universalist church will unite with the Universalist Sunday schools of Springfield, Westfield and Monson in a picnic at Flynt's Park at Monson July 6th. The committee from the church here is W. W. Leach, C. E. Fish and E. E. Brooks. The following programme of sports has been arranged:

Base ball game.....
Open to all Universalist Sunday schools
100-yards dash.....Open to all
100-yards dash.....Open to boys under 14 years
50-yards dash.....Open to girls under 14 years
Tug of war.....
Open to all Universalist Sunday schoo's
Tug of war.....Open to married ladies
Tug of war.....Open to single ladies

The prize for base ball and tug of war is something useful for the Sunday school represented by the victor. There will be dancing from 2 to 5.30 p. m., music by the Philharmonic Club, T. A. Holland, prompter.

Next Tuesday will be the Glorious Fourth, but Palmer will have no general celebration. The mills and banks will close all day, and the majority of the stores will close at noon. Palmer people will have a choice of several celebrations near by, the most convenient being that at Forest Lake, where there will be a ball game between the Ware Y. T. A. L. and the Ware high school nines for a $10 gold piece, throwing base ball for a prize of a gold scarf pin, 100-yards dash for a box of cigars, half-mile boat race for a fountain pen, sack race for a gold watch charm, standing jump for an umbrella. The sports are in charge of Thomas Nelligan of Ware, and will begin at 2 p. m., with the exception of the ball game, which will be at 10.30 a. m. The Warren Cornet Band will give concerts from the band stand, and Messenger's orchestra of Warren will furnish music for dancing day and evening. Refreshments can be secured at any time on the grounds, and in the evening at 8 there will be a display of fireworks from Masten & Wells of Boston. Special trains will leave the lake for Ware and Gilbertville at 11 p. m., and for Thorndike, Palmer and Springfield at 12.15 a. m. At Stafford Springs there will be a balloon ascension and parachute drop, horse trotting. Imperial Japanese jugglers, day fireworks, etc. Willimantic is also planning a big celebration.

District Court.

Robert Kinkaid of Barre was before the court Saturday on the charge of drunkenness, and was put on probation. The same day Alexander Fredette of Three Rivers paid $5 for assault. Wales was represented Wednesday by two young men who were up on charges of assault and disturbing the peace. One paid $3 for assault and the other $15 for assault and disturbing the peace. The liquors seized recently from Michael St. John at Palmer Center, were claimed by Aimie Lavois. St. John states that the liquors were not kept with intent to sell, but for personal use. The hearing comes up Monday with S. S. Taft for the defendant and W. W. Leach for the commonwealth. Patrick J. Riley of Palmer was before the court yesterday morning charged with drunkenness and was given two months in the house of correction. Charles Mathon of Three Rivers was charged with an assault upon Arthur E. Twogood, a 12-years-old boy. The case was continued until Monday. This morning additional charges of corrupting the morals of young boys were brought against him. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cook were still further probated for 30 days. Louis Duprez of Three Rivers was further probated, without date, he having signed the pledge. Frank Fleury of Thorndike was placed on probation without date for drunkenness. John Kloughman of Hartford was sent to the house of correction for 60 days on account of drunkenness. John Braider, a Polander from Bondsville, charged with drunkenness and disturbing the peace, was placed on probation for the former and paid $10 for the latter.

On Wednesday, as J. B. Brown was riding on Springfield street, between this village and the Otis Company's farm, his horse stumbled and fell, breaking the carriage badly and receiving some cuts on his legs. Mr. Brown feels thankful that he escaped personal injury other than a disagreeable shaking up.

Charles Mathon, who has been a clerk in J. B. Brown & Co's. store for about six months, was arrested last evening, charged with subverting the morals of a number of small boys. S. P. Barnes, Mr. Twogood and Frank White are among those who will appear against him. Other charges of a similar nature may be preferred against him when the trial begins, as a most disgusting state of affairs has been brought to light.

A series of revival meetings is to be commenced here on Sunday next, under the auspices of the Union Evangelical church. Rev. J. R. S. Anderson of Boston is to conduct the meetings, and Mr. Paquette is to lead the singing. Both these gentlemen were here last fall and held some successful services. The work is to be carried on in a tent belonging to Mr. Anderson, who has had an extensive experience in this line in Chicago and throughout New England.

Joseph Benway, who has been employed as a mason by the Palmer Mill Company for the last two and a half years, has resigned his position and intends to commence the manufacture of a device on which he has just been granted a patent. The invention is an apparatus for lifting and holding fruit cans while being filled, and can be so arranged as to avoid all danger of burning the hands or dropping the jar while being handled. The article can be seen at Shaw Bros'. store, and ladies who intend to do canning would do well to see it, as it is claimed to greatly facilitate the work.

Naylor at the Four Corners cemetery has been placed recently by his wife a beautiful lily which was taken from the grave of her father, Ira Sprague, who died in the war of the rebellion in 1863. A new monument is soon to be placed in the family lot by Springfield parties.

A Snake Story.

Patrick F. Hurley, well known in this village, tells the JOURNAL correspondent the following, wishing to show how much virtue there is in Irish soil. A large adder was seen on his farm one day, and Mr. Hurley, who has in his possession a small piece of Irish turf which was brought here from Ireland about eight years ago, brought it from the house and laid it on the back of the serpent, after which the reptile was unable to move an inch. It twisted and bit at the turf, but was held fast and in about ten minutes was dead. Mr. Hurley tells this in good faith, and offers to wager $5 that the turf will kill any snake in half an hour by putting it into a box with the reptile.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

THREE JUNE WEDDINGS.

Noble—Carew.

A pretty home wedding took place last Saturday evening at the residence of Mark Noble, when his daughter, Minnie M., was united in marriage to J. P. Carew, Rev. W. H. Marble of the Methodist church tying the knot. The rooms were decorated with roses, and the couple stood before a bank of ferns and daisies. The bridesmaid was Miss Louise Nichols, and the best man was H. M. Noble, brother of the bride. Both bride and bridesmaid wore gowns of ashes of roses. After the ceremony a reception was held.

Whitney—Knowlton.

The marriage of Miss Lilla D. Whitney and Stephen B. Knowlton took place at the bride's home on North Main street Monday evening. The rooms were neatly decorated with roses and wild flowers, laurel predominating. A floral horse shoe and decorated mantel added much to the beauty of the room. The ceremony was performed with a ring by Rev. James Tufts under a bell of roses and laurel. Fred H. Tarr of Rockburyport was best man, and J. Annie, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. The bride was dressed in a cream colored silk gown and carried a bouquet of lillies of the valley. The bridesmaid was dressed in lavendar silk and carried a bouquet of roses. Among the large number of presents were conspicuous a silver clock with call bell, presented by the bride's scholars in No. 7 school, and a solid silver piece from her Sunday school class at the Congregational church. Among the guests present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Knowlton from Sunset, Maine, Mrs. J. E. Dutton and family of Hoboken, Miss Beebe of Wilbraham, also members of the Academy class of '87 with whom the bride graduated. Mr. and Mrs. Knowlton will spend a few weeks at the home of Mr. Knowlton in Sunset, Maine, after which they will make their home in Haverford, Pa., where the groom retains his position as principal of the department of English literature and elocution in Haverford College grammar school.

Merrick—McNulty.

Miss Carrie Merrick and Henry McNulty were married at the Universalist church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Harry Blackford officiating. Miss Lena Merrick, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and F. E. Allen of Worcester was best man. The bride was costumed in green and carried a bouquet of pink roses, while the bridesmaid wore a cream colored gown and a bouquet of pinks. The newly-married couple were taken by carriage to Palmer, where they took the 3.14 train for Boston.

There was some little excitement in the south part of the town Monday evening, when the saloon on wheels, which has been making regular trips from a neighboring town and which has been quite a thorn in the flesh of the temperance people, was raided by Constable J. H. Thompson, and drinks which were not strictly of a temperance character were found.

Professor Arthur Newell Burke, for the past two years teacher of science at the academy, has been appointed acting principal and will have charge of the school the next year. Professor Burke is a graduate of Wesleyan Academy, and is much liked by scholars and the public at large. There are still two vacancies to be filled to complete the faculty.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Keeney sustained somewhat of a fright last Saturday. Their little two-years-old son Hawley, while playing in the yard, loosened the screen to the cellar window, and seeing the kitten go through into the cellar thought it would be nice to go after it. He did so and fell to the cement floor beneath, a distance of about five feet, but luckily sustained no injuries.

The field sports on Flynt's park the Fourth will consist of a 110-yards dash, standing broad jump, half-mile run, pole vaulting, 220-yards hurdle race, putting 16-lb shot, quarter-mile run, running broad jump, 220-yards dash, 220-yards bicycle dash, running high jump, standing high jump, 100-yards slow bicycle race. Only Monson people will be allowed to enter, and entries should be made at G. L. Keeney's drug store.

While M. F. Moore was passing Butler's bakery Wednesday night about 10.30 he noticed a brilliant blaze in the cooking department, and at once broke open the door and found that a large pile of kindlings left to dry near the furnaces had caught fire. He flooded the same with the milk Mr. Butler had left for his cooking in the early morning, also with bread and pastry he found handy, and soon had the fire under control. Had it not been discovered just as it was a serious fire must have surely followed.

Warrants are posted for a special town meeting to be held in the town hall next Monday at 3. p. m., to see if the town will make a change in the amount to be paid the tax collector; to see if the town will build a new school house in the village, and appropriate money for the same; to see if it is advisable to dispose of any schoolhouse now in use; to hear the report of the committee appointed to move the schoolhouse in district No 5 and to take such action as may be deemed best in regard to providing a schoolhouse and lot in that district.

St. Patrick's church society will hold its annual picnic at Evergreen Park, State Line, next Tuesday, with a good list of attractions for all who attend. At 9 a. m. there will be a ball game, at 10 a football game, at 11 a boat race, an exhibition of muscular strength at 11.45 a. m. and 3.30 p. m. by the Sault Brothers, a clam chowder dinner at 12.30; at 2.30 there will be athletic sports, consisting of a 100-yards dash, running high jump, running broad jump, pole vault, throwing heavy weight, club swinging, sparring exhibition, wrestling match, etc. Dancing will begin at 1 p. m. Special trains will run from Palmer and Monson.

Daniels—Hayes.

On the evening of Tuesday, June 20th, at the residence of the bride's parents, Court street, Rev. Thomas Bell officiating, were united in marriage Clara A., eldest daughter of H. D. Hayes, and F. H. Daniels of Warren, Mass. The bride, tastefully attired in a dark blue serge traveling gown, carrying in her hand a beautiful bouquet of English laurel, was given away by her father. Miss Ida M. Hayes acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. John B. Daniels as best man. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful presents, comprising many costly pieces of silverware. Mr. and Mrs. Daniels were accompanied by their many friends to the depot, and departed with the congratulations and sincere well wishes of all who knew them, for Warren, where they will make their home. — Middlebury (Vt.) Register.

Fell Dead.

Fail to Do Their Duty.

Everybody has at times failed to do their duty towards themselves. Hundreds of lady readers suffer from sick headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and female troubles. Let them follow the example of Mrs. H. Herbechter, Stevens Point, Wis., who for five years suffered greatly from nervous prostration and sleeplessness, tried physicians and different medicines without success. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine caused sound sleep every night, and she is feeling like a new person. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, Laramie City, Wyoming, who tried all other remedies, declares that after three weeks' use of the Nervine for headache, nervous prostration, etc., she was entirely relieved. Sold by LeGro & Lynde. Trial bottle free. 52-17

Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills

Act on a new principle—regulating the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new discovery. Dr. Miles' Pills speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles, constipation. Unequaled for men, women, children. Smallest, mildest, surest! 50 doses 25 cents. Samples free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 52-17

It is nearing the Glorious Fourth, when the small boy will delight in firecrackers, but the older people delight in ease and comfort such as is to be had with a pair of women's comfort boots at $3.50. Corns and bunions disappear while wearing these, and Broadhurst Bros., 376 Main street, Springfield, send them to all parts of the world.

Cure Yourself.

Don't pay large doctor's bills. The best medical book published, 100 pages, elegant colored plates, will be sent you on receipt of three 2-cent stamps to pay postage. Address A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass.

Just Married.

How loving they are; this is always a sure sign. After the first year sometimes it don't hold good. When Charles comes home to you grouty and cross, snapping and snarling, unable to relish the nice dinner you have cooked, and feels as if there was a ton of pig iron in his stomach, he is troubled with dyspepsia, and Sulphur Bitters is the only medicine that will cure him.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Dr. Fowler of Boston, says: "I am satisfied that the use of coffee is the cause of much illness in many ways, while Ayer's Hygienic Coffee is beneficial.

Whiskers that are prematurely gray or faded should be colored to prevent the look of age, and Buckingham's Dye excels all others in coloring brown or black.

Impure blood is the cause of innumerable maladies. Hence, one of the greatest benefactions to humanity was the discovery of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which, more than any other medicine, has saved America from becoming a nation of invalids.

Pallor, languidness, and the appearance of ill-health being no longer fashionable among ladies, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is more largely resorted to as a tonic-alterative, nervine, stomachic, and builder-up of the system generally. This is as it should be. Ayer's is the best.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Those in want of healthy, out door employment for the summer will do well to read the ad. in another column headed "Work offered." 4-11

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

"It has cured others and will cure you" is true only of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The motto suits the medicine and the medicine the motto. What better assurance could you have that a remedy will cure you, than the fact that it has cured such multitudes of others?

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

Rheumatism's Awful Work.

RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE AND DYSPEPSIA BEING CURED DAILY.

Many Residents of Springfield and Vicinity Benefited.

Few people outside of the medical profession have any idea how many of the diseases we hear people suffering from are traced to the one source, excess of uric acid in the blood. "To find a dissolvent for this acid" said one of Springfield's most conservative physicians the other day, "seems to have been left to that hard and patient student, Dr. David Kennedy of Rondout, N. Y. In his preparation, Favorite Remedy, he has solved the mystery and to-day Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is being used by physicians and practitioners of medicine the world over for rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney, liver and urinary troubles, scrofula, eczema and the sicknesses women suffer from. Favorite Remedy dissolves the excess of acid in the blood, thus curing these dreadful and often times fatal diseases."

Perhaps no man ever suffered more with rheumatism than Mr. E. P. Tayer of East Nassau, N. Y. In a letter written by Mr. Tayer he says, "I was afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism for fifteen years so severe that I was supposed to be a cripple for life. I took many different remedies, and the best physicians I could find prescribed for me, but I grew worse, and I had about given up all hope of ever being cured, when Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was brought to my notice. I began its use with little faith that it would do me any good, but how different was the result, for I began to grow better slowly but surely and it was but a little while after I began its use that I was a well man. I have never had a pang of rheumatism since."

Mr. Tayer's recovery fairly electrified the little village of East Nassu, and to-day there is hardly a home there in which Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cannot be found.

No more glowing tribute was ever written of the merit of a preparation, than that of Lyman Crawford, our popular Main street druggist. In writing of Favorite Remedy, Mr. Crawford says, "For years I was afflicted with kidney disease in its most acute form. I tried different kinds of treatment and spent a great deal of money, only to find myself worse than ever. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy—I say it with a perfect recollection of all that was done for me—is the only thing that did me the slightest good. It gave me permanent relief. I am now well and strong. I have recommended this medicine to many people for kidney and urinary troubles and they all agree with me in saying that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has not its equal in the wide world for these distressing and often fatal complaints."

Scores of prominent men and women everywhere are as equally enthusiastic as Mr. Crawford. Commander James S. Dean of General Grant Post G. A. R., Rondout, N. Y., was declared to have chronic dyspepsia, and was cured by Favorite Remedy.

Rev. T. W. Hill, pastor of the Methodist church, Accord, N. Y., lends his name and testimony to its curative powers.

W. H. Morse, M. D., of New York city, and the Sisters of Charity, St. Mary's Female Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., say that they have realized the most satisfactory results from its use.

One of Dalton's most prominent physicians wrote that "in cases of persons recovering from the effects of la Grippe and for that run down and tired out feeling so often experienced in the spring, I have found no better tonic for brain, muscle and nerve, than Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy."

No more forcible remark was ever uttered as to the merit of an article than that of Mr. J. T. Harris, of Southboro, this state, at the Massasoit House the other evening in which he said, "I have struggled with dyspepsia for nine years. Up to the time I used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, I tried any number of sarsaparillas, nervines and compounds, but they were no good. From the first dose of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy I felt better, and it knocked dyspepsia right out of me, and I've not felt a trace of it since."—Springfield, Mass., Republican. 5

Another Aged Person

Tests the healing waters of Leon's famous fountain and is cured. He says he considers Leon's Sarsaparilla the Greatest Remedy on Earth.

The Kind that Never Fails

Inflammation of the Bladder and Enlargement of Prostate Gland permanently cured.

We are in receipt of the following letter from Mr. H. N. Woodcock, a well known and prominent citizen of Waldo County, Me.

Gentlemen:—For the benefit of suffering humanity I deem it my duty to say that for many years I have been troubled with Inflammation of the Neck of the Bladder and Enlargement of the Prostate Gland, occasioning frequent passing of water, and obliging me to be up frequently nights. My diseases, with broken rest and age, seemed to be working together to drive me to my death. I tried our most prominent local physicians and many different medicines, but without any benefit whatever. Three bottles of Leon's Sarsaparilla completely cured me, and I am now, at the age of 70 years, well and hearty. I consider Leon's Sarsaparilla the greatest remedy on earth.

After the Fourth.

We put him to bed in his little nightgown,
The worst battered youngster there was in the town;
Yet he said as he opened his only well eye:
"Rah, 'rah, for the jolly old Fourth of July!"

Two thumbs and eight fingers with lint were tied up,
On his head was a bump like an upside down cup,
And his smile was distorted, his nose all awry,
From the joys of the glorious Fourth of July.

We were glad; he had started abroad with the sun,
And all day he had lived in the powder and fun;
While the boom of the cannon roared up to the sky,
To salute young America's Fourth of July.

I said, we were glad all the pieces were there,
As we plastered and bound them with tenderest care,
But out of the wreck came the words with a sigh;
"If to-morrow was only the Fourth of July!"

He will grow all together again, never fear,
And be ready to celebrate freedom next year;
Meanwhile all his friends are most thankful there lies,
A crackerless twelvemonth 'twixt Fourth of Julys.

We kissed him good-night on his powder-specked face,
We laid his bruised hands softly down in their place,
And he murmured, as sleep closed his one open eye:
"I wish every day was the Fourth of July!"

She was smart and she was pretty, and her elders thought her witty, and she tripped the light fantastic like a fay,

She could read both French and Latin, and was sweet in print or satin, and 'twould make your bosom heave to hear her play.

But in single life she tarried, and she never, never married, and she'll doubtless be a maiden till she dies,

For she bade a proud defiance to the culinary science, and she never knew the mystery of pies.

They were talking about the beef, which was very tough, at the boarding house table. Some one suggested that it was from an old cow. "It seems strange," said Mrs. G., "but the tenderest beef I ever saw was from a cow fifteen or twenty years old." "That's easily explained," said a big Irishman at the foot of the table; "the cow was so old she was childish."—Harper's Bazar.

The conversation turned on the number thirteen, the spilling of salt, knives and forks placed crosswise, and other kinds of superstitions. "You need not laugh at similar beliefs," gravely remarked Tranquilletti. "An uncle of mine at the age of seventy-seven committed the imprudence of going to a dinner at which the guests numbered thirteen." "And he died that very evening?" "No, but exactly thirteen years afterward."—Gazetta Piedmontese.

The above articles will be distributed, by counties, among parties who chew SPEAR HEAD Plug Tobacco, and return to us the TIN TAGS taken therefrom.

We will distribute 226 of these prizes in this county as follows:

To THE PARTY sending us the greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS from this county we will give.....1 GOLD WATCH.
To the FIVE PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each, 1 OPERA GLASS.....5 OPERA GLASSES.
To the TWENTY PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 POCKET KNIFE.....20 POCKET KNIVES.
To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 ROLLED GOLD WATCH CHARM TOOTH PICK.....100 TOOTH PICKS.
To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 LARGE PICTURE IN ELEVEN COLORS.....100 PICTURES.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DON'T SEND ANY TAGS BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1894.

A MODERN ELIJAH.

He was small and black—a child of an inferior race. There was nothing in his appearance to suggest the hero, and if you had told him that he was a hero he would scarcely have known what you meant. An unschooled, illiterate, ugly, bullet-headed negro, he had nevertheless been baptized by the same spirit which had caused the face of St. Stephen to shine as the face of an angel.

One winter day—almost a year before the event which gave him a chance to show the stuff that was in him—he came into the hotel looking for a job. The office was brilliantly lighted and filled with a crowd of handsomely-dressed men. There were politicians, club men, men about town, reporters, many members of the sporting fraternity, the usual loungers and hangers on, an occasional hayseed—all forming a very startling background for the rags and filth of the poor, shivering, half-starved little darkey. It was no easy matter for him to steer his course to the desk, and when he got there the splendor of the man behind it dazed him so his courage almost failed him. He had, however, even at his early age, reached the point where he had to work or starve. So his necessities made him eloquent. His eloquence prevailed. He was on the next day placed on the pay roll of the great hotel.

As a bell boy he was not a success. I fear I must confess that he was lazy. People liked him—I do not know why—and for some reason or other he was a favorite with his employers. If he had not been they would have dismissed him before the first week was out. Instead of doing that they concluded to find more congenial work for him, so they put him in charge of one of the elevators.

Among the passengers who used to ride up and down with the boy was a little five-years-old girl, a daughter of a family living in the hotel. She was as perfect a type of her race as he was of his. With her fair, white skin, golden hair, deep blue eyes and pretty womanly ways, the child was a general favorite. Every one knew her; every one loved her.

Between her and the boy a great friendship had sprung up. He was devotion itself, and his attentions to the little Caucasian were so grotesquely chrivalrous as to be almost pathetic. She accepted them all with a dignity and grace that were charming. Her family lived on the top floor of the house, and as she always rode in his elevator when she could manage to do so, the boy and girl saw much of each other. Once she was ill. The medicine that helped her most was a wretched little bouquet sent her by her dusky friend.

It was winter again. The evening of which I write was very cold and clear. The stars were diamondlike in their brilliancy. Everything was frozen up—the wheels creaked on the snow.

The hotel was crowded with guests. Not more than two or three of the hundreds of rooms were unoccupied. A belated traveler who had been on a weather bound train, came in at 1 o'clock, tired and cold. He ordered a fire in his room and then went to the bar for a drink. A few minutes later he stepped into the boy's elevator and was carried to the top floor.

The great house was quiet. Most of the lights in the office had been extinguished. Two night owls were talking in low tones on one of the settees which lined the walls of the lobby. The bell boys were most of them asleep. The clerk was drowsing.

Two o'clock! The night owls got up and walked out into the cold air. A drunken man poked his nose in the door. The sleeping porter seemed to scent him, for he hustled the poor fellow out.

The quiet deepened till it became almost oppressive. The air was heavy with it.

Suddenly, without a note of warning, the cry of "Fire!" rang through the house. There was life enough now. Scantily clad people were scurrying wildly through the smoke-filled corridors. They came plunging down the stairs to the office, and so out into the freezing night. Shrieks and curses and groans and prayers—it was Babel broken loose. All the bells in the house were ringing. The smoke grew denser. It seemed to come from everywhere—above and below. Great black volumes rolled through the long halls. Outside, the streets were jammed with people. The engines, with their clinging gongs, hurried to the scene. Ladders were raised, and the work of rescue began.

It was time, for there was a white figure at almost every one of the multitudinous windows. The awful wail loomed up in the darkness, story on story, dimly seen as to its upper half, for that part of it was wreathed in the blinding smoke. The smoke turned to flame—flame bursting through scores of windows. The terror-stricken creatures began to jump. The people in the street below were frantic.

"Back! back!" they shrieked. "Wait! we'll save you! don't jump!"

Which is the pleasanter, to be roasted alive or to be mashed out of shape on the stone pavement? If there is to be any saving done, it must be done quickly. Many people were very busy themselves. The sleeping clerk and porter and bell boys had got out.

But what of the little black fellow in the elevator? He, too, had been asleep. He had been awakened as the others had been by the first cry of fire. Unlike them he had that "two-o'clock-in-the-morning courage" which Napoleon said was the rarest sort. In an instant he decided it was his duty to stick to his post. And stick he did.

Up and down he went, and every time his car touched the office door it was loaded with people. The journey was a frightful one, but he did not shrink. How long he could continue to make the trip he could not tell. The elevator might drop any minute. Very well, let it drop. Some of the people in it might survive the shock. It was sure to catch fire sooner or later. Even then he would be on the way to safety with the passengers. At any rate he knew that he could bring some people out of the fire burning above.

He had not been good at going upstairs but he could run his elevator. Trip after trip he made, each worse than the last. The firemen at the bottom of the shaft to whom he turned over his living freight sought to stop him in his dangerous work. The whole well was full of smoke, and far up towards the roof the fire could be seen.

Still he kept on, and it did seem that every time he started skyward he was going to certain death. But he knew that the rooms and halls were awarming with people, and he would take any chance to save a life. The firemen were doing their best outside; death was busy within; and he finally made up his mind it was no use to go back again, till all at once he remembered he had seen nothing of his little friend.

Could he weather the storm and flame once more? He could try. He pulled the rope, and the journey began. It was slow, oh, how slow. The smoke was terrible—worse even than the fire—but he held his breath and fixed his mind upon his business in hand.

The flame kindled the woodwork of the car. He fell on his hands and knees, but he kept his hold on the rope. At last he reached her floor. He found her room and found her. She was asleep and alone.

Wrapping her in the blankets, and throwing about her a rug which he snatched from the floor, he struggled through the flame and smoke back to the burning car. "Back from the jaws of hell" it was that he brought her, fighting the fire away from her every inch of the way down. He had just strength enough to stop the car. The children were taken out and carried to a drug store across the street—the girl alive and well and the boy seemingly dead.

He was horribly burned. Among the people who stood around were the parents of the little girl. They had been out to an evening party, and returning after a long cold drive found their home on fire. Every effort had been made, in response to the agonizing appeals of the father to save the child—and now here she was safe and sound, laughing in her mother's arms.

And the hero? He opened his eyes.

"Did I bring her froo all right?"

"Yes, yes," said the father, "and how can we ever thank you for what you have done?"

"Nebber min' 'bout dat, boss. Ef she's safe dat's 'nuff for me"—and he closed his eyes.

Dead? Yes, dead and gone to heaven in a chariot of fire.—Richard York: Romance.

DERELICT SHIPS.

One of the serious dangers of the sea arises from the risk of collision with abandoned ships. When a burning coal ship, built of iron, is abandoned, the cargo sometimes continues to burn for months. It is reported that the Ada Iredale, abandoned on fire 1000 miles west of the Marquesas, on October 15, 1876, was towed into Tahiti by a French man-of-war in June, 1877, and the coal kept burning until May, 1878. A water-logged timber ship will carry on a contest with elements for a long time. The Saturday Review cites the case of the three-masted schooner W. L. White. She was abandoned, waterlogged, on March 13, 1828 (the date of the blizzard) 80 miles from New York. On Jan. 23 of the following year she went ashore near the Hebrides, after traversing alone a distance of more than 5000 miles, and after being reported by at least 45 different ships—to say nothing of others that passed close to her in dark or dirty weather. May found her in the region of the Gulf Stream, and from that month to the end of October she drifted in and out of this current, which sets northeast, and the Labrador current, which sets northwest.—Boston Watchman.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.
Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

It is an old theory that new wood is entitled to three coats of paint, but many new houses have but two coats of Chilton Paint, and are then allowed to stand two and three years before they are painted again and then only one coat. Can you not profit by this suggestion? In painting your house this year get estimates on one, two and three coats. If the house is in fair condition and there is not too much difference between the shade you are to put on and the one on the house, probably one coat will suffice. If not one, two coats will surely answer. What is the use then of putting on three? We have had painters tell us that they had painted houses with Chilton Paint where the house looked better after two coats than three—upon being asked why then they put on three they answered that they were obliged to as the contract called for three. Word your contracts so you can stop when you have gone far enough. Put Chilton Paint over a dry surface only.

It Tastes Good

One reason why Scott's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda has had such a large sale is because it is "Almost as palatable as milk;" but the best reason is that its curative properties are unequalled. It cures the cough, supplies the waste of tissues, produces flesh and builds up the entire system.

Scott's Emulsion cures Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, and all Anaemic and Wasting Diseases. Prevents wasting in children. Almost as palatable as milk. Get only the genuine. Prepared by Scott & Bowne, Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

Cures Others

Will cure You is a true statement of the action of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, when taken for diseases originating in impure blood; but, while this assertion is true of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, as thousands can attest, it cannot be truthfully applied to other preparations, which unprincipled dealers will recommend and try to impose upon you as "just as good as Ayer's." Take AYER'S Sarsaparilla and AYER'S only, if you need a blood purifier and would be benefited permanently. This medicine, for nearly fifty years, has enjoyed a reputation and made a record for cures that has never been equaled by other preparations. AYER'S Sarsaparilla eradicates the taint of hereditary scrofula and other blood diseases from the system, and it has, deservedly, the confidence of the people.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

"I cannot forbear to express my joy at the relief I have obtained from the use of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with kidney troubles for about six months, suffering greatly with pains in the small of my back. In addition to this my body was covered with pimply eruptions. The remedies prescribed failed to help me. I then began to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla, and in a short time the pains ceased and the pimples disappeared. I advise every young man or woman, in case of sickness resulting from impure blood, no matter how long standing the case may be, to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla."—H. L. Jarmann, 33 William street, New York city.

The Little Arm-Chair.

Nobody sits in the little arm-chair;
It stands in a corner dim;
But a white-haired mother gazing there,
And yearningly thinking of him,
Sees through the dusk of long ago
The bloom of her boy's sweet face,
As he rocks so merrily to and fro,
With a laugh that cheers the place.

Sometimes he holds a book in his hand,
Sometimes a pencil and slate,
And the lesson is hard to understand,
And the figures hard to mate;
But she sees the nod of his father's head,
So proud of the little son,
And she hears the word so often said,
"No fear for our little one."

They were wonderful days, the dear sweet days,
When a child with sunny hair
Was hers to scold, to kiss, and to praise,
At her knee in the little chair.
She lost him back in the busy years,
When the great world caught the man,
And he strode away past hopes and fears
To his place in the battle's van.

But now and then in a wistful dream,
Like a picture out of date,
She sees a head with a golden gleam
Bent over a pencil and slate.
And she lives again the happy day,
The day of her young life's spring,
When the small arm-chair stood just in the way,
The center of everything.

A REJECTED FREEDOM.

Sad days had come upon the old family at the hall. From time immemorial there had always been Langtons at Langton Hall, and though they could boast no title for the head of the family, though none of their members had a right to a seat in the Upper House, yet they looked in scorn upon many a newly-created noble, holding their own simple name handed down to them from a long line of ancestors vastly superior to any bran new title acquired by political or mercantile cunning. Their ancestral home—a long, low, many-gabled house—had once laid in the very center of their large and valuable estate; they had then, indeed, been monarchs of all they surveyed—for the land, as far as eye could reach, had owned them as lord. This had been the zenith of their prosperity; soon after the estate had passed on to those who valued their pleasure and their enjoyment far beyond the old-fashioned satisfaction of bequeathing the land intact to those that should come after; and these for the sake of a few moments of excitement on the race course, or at the gaming table, heaped loads of debt and mortgages on the property, that it, rich as it was, became utterly unable to bear.

As money begets money, so debt draws debt unto itself; and though the present owner, Squire Langton, had tried by every means in his power to stay the tide of ruin that was steadily creeping upon them with deadly, though quiet, force, he was fully aware that his efforts were worse than useless. Still he persevered, adding by anxious thought and care many a wrinkle to his finely-chiselled face; while his slender form bent lower every day under the load of anxiety that fate had laid upon him. At last things reached a climax, and as he could no longer shut his eyes to the fact, he determined, after much sorrowful consideration, to break the news to his wife and his only daughter as soon as a fitting opportunity occurred. This presented itself sooner than he had expected, as the very next morning came a letter inviting Dorothy to spend part of the season in town, under the protecting wing of her aunt.

"It will be a splendid change for the poor child," said Mrs. Langton. "For since her presentation she's had but a hurried glimpse at the gaieties of town. So write me a cheque out, Gilbert, for she must have a few new gowns and things."

The squire had always been a most indulgent father, giving many things for his daughter's pleasure that strict prudence would have withheld, but now he was obdurate, and in spite of his wife's anger, and also the face of the tearful pleadings of Dorothy herself, he refused to allow her to go to London, and plainly laid the case before them both.

For the first few moments they were utterly stunned. They had lived so long in an atmosphere of death and expected collapse that they had become used to it, and thought that nothing more dreadful would happen in their time. But after some bitter tears and sorrow at the prospect of being turned out of their old home, Mrs. Langton, who was eminently practical, said:—

"There is only one way in which we can retrieve our position. Go, Dorothy, dear, leave your father and me alone while we discuss this only hope of escape."

The young girl rose at this bidding, and after kissing her father tenderly withdrew through the open window to wander around the place she knew and loved so well, realizing in all its bitterness what parting from it would mean to her.

Meanwhile, within the squire's room, called by courtesy his study, though it had been more properly for many years past his counting-house or office, wherein he battled with the grim array of figures that represented his liabilities—within this apartment he now listened with a hopeless expression of countenance to his wife's suggestion.

"It is very simple, Gilbert, and easily done, too, if you and Dorothy will be sensible and take my advice. Dorothy must marry money. No, no; don't interrupt me now. I know what you would say. She is too young and too precious to part with. Nonsense, no girl that is 'out' is too young, and she might thus save the old home and name."

"But who could she marry?" asked the squire, reluctant to discuss such a possibility. "She meets no one here, and as I cannot afford this stay in town, there is no one worthy of her that I can see."

"I don't mean a grand marriage such as I once contemplated for her," said Mrs. Langton. "Beggars as we are cannot expect all things. She must marry money—and that she can do any day she and you please."

"How?" asked her husband abruptly, while a slow flush mounted to his pale cheeks.

"Well, there is our neighbor, Mr. Smith. He admires Dorothy very much indeed, though only from a distance as yet. He would not presume—"

"I should think not, indeed. A tradesman, who has made his money goodness only knows how," exclaimed the squire angrily. "To marry my daughter, to enter my family! Never!"

Mrs. Langton was a born diplomatist. She did not press this disagreeable point, but allowed the idea to sink into the squire's perplexed mind. Then she said:—

"I believe his firm is held in very good repute in the city, and there is certainly no doubt whatever about his wealth. Why, he has some things at Broomlands even I long to possess."

"A bran new place that sets one's teeth on edge to look at even," cried the squire. "Why, to live there would kill Dorothy, accustomed to everything so entirely different."

And his eyes dwelt lovingly on the old oak carving that decorated his room, and passed on to the big covered gable that abutted on to the open window.

"But perhaps even she'd prefer that to the poverty-stricken lodgings in some dull continental city, which is all we can expect unless something is done and done at once," replied his practical helpmeet.

"Think it over, Gilbert. Of course he is one of the people. I don't believe he professes to the possession of even a grandfather; but he's not so bad, and oh! so ridiculously rich."

For many an hour the squire pondered the plan his wife had proposed, and the more he thought of it the less it commended itself unto him. He shrank from sacrificing his daughter, and yet he could not shut his eyes to the exceeding gravity of their position; and at last he agreed to leave the decision in Dorothy's hands, and to leave Dorothy to to her mother's management in the matter. But Mrs. Langton was too cautious to hurry things now that she had got them in her own keeping. Her first step was to drive off in state to Broomlands, and, after admiring all the things she saw, concluded by asking Mr. Smith over to dinner the next evening.

"Just ourselves, you know," she said, as he handed her into her carriage, "if you won't find us too slow and quiet, and Dorothy, I am sure, will be glad to give you a little music. Good-by, at seven, don't forget."

And as she drove away she knew that one of her puppets was ready to her hand.

"Why, he blushed like a schoolboy at the mere mention of Dorothy's name. He will only be too glad to cry 'yes' to the bargain."

"Dorothy," she said, a little later in the day, "I wish you'd practice some old English ballads and things like that, easy to understand. Mr. Smith is coming to dine to-morrow, and I dare say classical things won't suit him."

"Mr. Smith coming here to dine," repeated the young girl in amaze. "Why, I thought you only asked him to squashes, where he wouldn't be noticed. And neither does father want any one when—when he and all of us are so sad and troubled."

"A change will do him good, and Dorothy, be as pleasant to Mr. Smith as you can," said Mrs. Langton. "He's not nearly such a boor as I expected, and could be made quite presentable with good management."

"He's rather old to learn, mother dear," said Dorothy with a little chuckle. "He's getting quite bald, but still I must say he's tractable. I wish you could have seen me try to teach him to waltz a short time ago at the Gresham's. Oh! how I did laugh, and he didn't mind a bit."

And her gay young mirth rang through the room. Youth easily forgets its sorrows, at least for the passing moment.

This little dinner, quite "en famille," as Mr. Langton said to Mr. Smith, was such a success that it proved but the forerunner of many such. True, the squire, sitting sad and watchful in his seat at the head of the table, did not contribute much to the mirth of these occasions, but his silence was not noticed, for his wife was an admirable hostess, and Dorothy's gay chatter fully entertained their guest. And, too, he had received a diplomatic hint of the happiness that was to be his, or at least had been given to understand that his suit would not be disagreeable to the family. And to Dorothy—How would she receive him? He asked himself this question oft and anxiously.

"It seems too good, too holy, to dream of, and yet she does not dislike me or despise me, though who am I that I should be deemed fit mate for one like her? An honest man, and that's all you can say, and yet sometimes she looks at me in such a way—well, I can hardly restrain myself from laying my whole life at her feet to do with it as it seems good to her. And yet I gathered from her mother that I'd better let her prepare my way for me with Dorothy. Ah, my love, and so I must wait! wait! wait!"

But, alas! man is not even master of himself, and one evening, after dinner, as he and Dorothy strolled near the river's brink in the silvery moonlight, he could not keep back the words of love that rushed to his lips, but told her his hope in earnest, pleading tones.

She heard him in silence, bewildered silence, but as he stepped forward and would have taken her hand she drew quickly back.

"No, do not go. I will restrain myself," he said in a low, broken voice. "I have frightened you. Your mother told me to wait for her permission."

"My mother told you that," repeated Dorothy slowly. "Did she know that you—you loved me?"

"Yes, indeed. Without her encouragement I would not have dared to aspire to you," he said. "She said you were too young for love, but—that you liked me, and—and perhaps the rest would come in time."

"No, no, never," cried Dorothy with the sound of tears in her voice. "I like you—but—but I could never marry you, never."

And like a frightened bird she eluded his detaining hand and disappeared amongst the thick shrubs, leaving him crushed amid the ruins of his hopes.

"And yet what could I expect?" he said. "Nothing, nothing. I was a fool to be so deceived."

And, after a hurried good-bye to Mrs. Langton, he went down the dark avenue and heard its gates clang behind him with great sinking of heart, shutting him out forever from his fool's paradise.

Mrs. Langton was not long finding out from her daughter's manner that some of her plans had gone "agley," and though she blamed Mr. Smith's impetuosity she did not despair or look upon his ultimate chance as hopeless. She lost small time, therefore in beginning to repair the mischief he had wrought, putting plainly before Dorothy all that she was thus refusing, and in this way, "with a little hoard of maxims, preaching down her daughter's heart." She painted too in the beautiful colors of self-sacrifice the duty that lay plainly before her, and appealed so eloquently to the love she bore her father and her home that at last the young girl, forsaking the promptings of her inner self, consented to receive Mr. Smith again, this time as her affianced lover.

These tidings of joy, conveyed to him in a note from Mrs. Langton, brought him to the hall on the swift wings of love, in a perfect whirl of conflicting emotions. He could not honestly believe that these few days had wrought such a change in Dorothy's feelings toward him, especially when he remembered the frightened glance she had given him by the river—as her first reply to his pleading.

"She has been persuaded into this," he said, as he stood awaiting her entrance in one of the drawing-rooms at the hall. "And the reason is not far to seek. The squire's difficulties are the gossip of the neighbors. It is my gold, not my love, that has bought her for me."

He saw this only too plainly when at last the door opened and Dorothy stood uncertain on the threshold. Very pale she looked, while her eyes, black-ringed, showed signs of recent tears. He would have rushed to her and taken her to his beating heart, but her whole demeanor withheld him. At last, after a quick glance at his face, she came forward, and laying her hand in his, said simply, "I will marry you—if you will have me now."

Her pause was more eloquent than her words, and for a moment the quixotic thought of rejecting his life's happiness thus offered flashed into his mind, but the touch of her hand, the sight of the troubled face he loved so well were too much for him, and his hand closed over hers in a grasp of self-possession.

"I know you do not love me now, but my life's work will be to win your love, my life's joy to make you happy."

And he stooped his head and imprinted a lingering kiss upon her trembling hand. Dorothy submitted with a good grace. The bright blood rushed to her cheeks. She was thankful he was content with that and did not then claim greater privileges. But her lover was a gentleman in deed and truth, though he could boast of no blue blood, and though his crest was the product of the ingenuity of a living authority at the Herald's office. He was too wise a man, too, to hurry matters in the least, feeling sure that his role was a waiting one. And so as the summer days went on, though he never obtruded his love, he tried to make himself indispensable to her, making her slightest wish his law, supplying her every desire. He was a well-read man, too, and had traveled much, and he thus opened out to her things she had never dreamt of before, as she, in spite of the fragment of a season in town, notwithstanding that she had received the cachet of society by having kissed hands with Her Majesty, was a little stay-at-home, to whom the outside world was mostly a blank.

He made her life very pleasant to her, and one day as they were walking over a barren moorland that lay at the other end of the once large Langton estate she caught herself quite longing for the tour on the Continent he was busy sketching out, and then with a blush, remembered that to obtain that pleasure she must put the seal of marriage to their engagement, and this was to be the honeymoon journey. She stopped suddenly, and while he went on describing the beauties and wonders they would thus wander amongst, she absently chipped a piece out of a bare rock that was near with the stout walking-stick she carried. Her conflicting feelings made her very energetic, and presently she had loosed a large piece of stone from its mossy bed and sent it rolling to the earth at Mr. Smith's feet.

"And then there will be Venice awaiting us—Venice the poetic, Venice the magnificent," he continued, then suddenly he paused, his eye fixed on the stone beside him. He stooped quickly and took it up, examining it carefully and weighing it in his hand. Then he looked at Dorothy's conscious face and paused with a strange light in his eyes.

"You've made a wonderful discovery Dorothy," he said, in a strained voice, "unless I am much mistaken. This moor belongs still to the Squire?"

"Oh, yes; no one would buy it, it is so barren," she replied casually. "I always think the few sheep we have on it look half-starved."

"It may prove the most valuable possession," he replied, "worth all the rest put together. See the veins of this stone, and feel how heavy it is. Iron-stone, and of the best quality, I think! I've had many samples through my hands in my time," and he began quarrying with his stick in the hole Dorothy had first made.

"Yes. There is more behind—Dorothy—Miss Langton, at last your father will be a rich man, will be eased from all his troubles, will—"

"No, no. It can't be true, it's too good for that," cried she. "Don't make fun of our troubles, don't raise hopes that can never be fulfilled."

"I tell you nothing but what I believe to be the truth," he said. "I'll send these samples to be tested, and then we'll be better able to judge, but until I get the report, let this be a secret between you and me—it may be our last—who knows."

She was too excited to catch the significance of his last sentance, to notice the pain in his voice. The world had changed for her as if by the wave of a magician's wand, and she hurried homeward filled with overwhelming feelings of hope and joy.

The official report of the ore proved even better than Mr. Smith had expected, and further quarrying showed the whole moor was full of veins which promised a rich harvest. Operations were speedily begun, the Squire having arranged with a company to carry out the work, paying him a royalty which seemed untold riches for him, and which, in a few years would release him from his encumbrances and restore the family to its former prosperity, while Mrs. Langton planned daily the round of gaieties that she now meant to indulge in, and the advantages that awaited their daughter and sole heiress.

"She must make a good match; with her birth and fortune there is no family too high to welcome her with open arms," she said. "She must make a marriage worthy of herself and us."

"But what about Mr. Smith?" asked the Squire, dubiously. "She is promised to him, and its through him that all this wealth is ours."

"Through him, indeed! Why, Dorothy herself found the first piece of the precious stone," exclaimed his wife. "I haven't a word to say against him, though, and I'm certain he's too honorable a man, though a tradesman, to keep us to our promise now. No; I'm sure he will release our daughter.'

She knew full well the man she had to deal with. For even now, having met Dorothy in the grounds as he was coming up to the house to see the Squire, he was returning her the plight she had once so reluctantly given him.

"Yes, I give you back your freedom, Miss Langton. I knew from the first you accepted me from a sense of duty, and I, poor fool, was only too thankful for this at your hands, hoping against all my common-sense that you would one day come to love me. But fortune has released you from my bond, and I am the last one to wish to keep you now. I knew I could serve you then, that I and my exceeding great love could make your life easier for you. But that is not required. You will marry some one infinitely more worthy of you, and, believe me, no one will wish or pray more earnestly for your happiness than I will."

He concluded, and then waited for some words from her; but she was silent, and after one glance at her averted face he turned sadly and went his way down the soft, grassy path. But he had not reached the little wicket gate that led on to the highway when he heard the sound of flying steps behind him and turning quickly saw Dorothy close beside him.

"Oh, don't go!" she said as soon as she recovered her breath. "I can't let you go like this. You loved me when I was poor, and I said I'd marry you for your money. I am rich now; but—but—oh, why don't you speak; you leave me to say all. Only don't go, for—I—you've taught me to love you now—and want you all my life."

And as she laid her head upon his shoulder, and felt his arm close tightly around her, all her mother's grand matrimonial schemes on her behalf collapsed forever, as Dorothy in her newly-awakened love refused to accept the freedom he so grudgingly offered her.—G. B. Jones, in the Newcastle Leader.

What is Beyond?

The blue sky and the blue lake
Meet together
In sunny weather,
But what, oh! what is beyond?
I know this side the horizon line,
With its purple hillsides, broad and fine;
But the country beyond, has it lakes like ours,
And trees of grandeur, and fruits and flowers?
What, oh! what is beyond?

The gray sky and the gray lake
Meet together
In somber weather,
But what, oh! what is beyond?
I know these homes, with their loves and woes,
Their buried hopes from which patience grows;
Are these broken affections united there?
Are hopes fruition, and answered, prayer?
What, oh! what is beyond?

The black sky and the black lake
Meet together
In stormy weather,
But what, oh! what is beyond?
I know the currents that thrill the earth,
And flash the sky at the thunder's birth;
But what of the circuit for souls between,
And the central power in the Great Unseen?
What, oh! what is beyond?

THE WONDERS OF ARIZONA.

"There's hundreds of wonderful things here in Amerika that we don't pay no heed to," said a Yankee traveling in England. "You mean Niagara Falls and the Mammoth Cave, and such things?" said a bystander. "Pshaw! We don't count caves nor waterfalls nor burning mountains nor boiling springs, though we can beat creation in such things. Say, did any of you fellows hear of the petrified forest in Arizony? hundreds of thousands of acres of stone forests." "And the trees standing?" "The trees standing? Waal, I should say so; and not only standing, but all in leaf and some of 'em in blossom, and others again full of nuts and other fruit. All turned into stone, mind you." "And I suppose there were birds in the trees," sneered one.

"Birds? Yes, sir, no end of birds; all of the most beautiful plumage and all turned into stone. Even the nests in the trees and the eggs in them were petrified in the most wonderful manner you ever saw. I see some of you fellows doubt me. Well, all I have to say is that what I am telling you is true, and I'll bet any sum on it and take you there to prove it. I'll tell you what I saw the last time I was in the petrified forest. There was a hunter who must have been in the forest when the petrification took place, for he was petrified, too, and there he stood as straight as you please, with a petrified gun on his shoulder, a taking aim at a petrified bird. Why the whole thing was so natural that you could see the shot and smoke coming out of the muzzle of the—" "I've got you there!" interrupted the Englishman. "The law of gravitation would have brought down the smoke and the bullets." "So it would," said the Yankee, "but the funny thing about it was that the law of gravitation was petrified, too, and the blamed thing could not work."

THE CHINAMAN IN THE HOUSEHOLD.

As servants the Chinese are very capable in many respects, and very undesirable in others. They never gossip about the affairs of a family that employs them. They learn whatever it is desired they should know, acquiring skill with apparent ease by means of their wonderful power of imitation. They are perfectly willing to do every kind of household work, and the average servant will act as cook, chambermaid, launderer, and waiter all at once for one salary. They cannot bear to be ordered about by women. They will take any amount of scolding or fault-finding from a man, and none from a woman. In two cases of which I heard the Chinese servants chased their mistresses out of their houses with axes. A very vexatious thing is that they never give warning when they are going to leave a place. They suddenly announce, "Me want to go," and the utmost questioning is not likely to elicit any more than "Me want to go; me tired." One lady in Victoria told me that she moved from one house to another, and employed a new servant. He staid an hour. The next one staid an afternoon, the next one staid a day. Puzzled and worried, she persuaded one who was about to leave her to tell her why he was dissatisfied. He took her to the sink in the kitchen, and showed her a peculiar mark in chalk under the sink. It was a notification by one servant to all the others that the head of the house was not kind or honest in his dealings with his servants. She explained that she had but just moved into the house, and the servant took off his street apparel and remained with her. But he told her that whenever a Chinaman came to work in a new place he always looked through all the pots and pans and kettles and cupboards for some piece of paper or mark of some kind left by preceding servants, and explaining the character of the house.—Julian Ralph, in Harper's Weekly.

AN INDIAN SHAMPOO.

"If by any chance one of our Arizona Indians should go into a barber shop and ask to have his hair dressed he'd run out of the shop when he discovered the barber's way of dressing hair," said an Arizonian. "The Indians out there, both men and women, are very fond of a shampoo, but I don't believe their way will ever become popular among white folks. Both sexes wear their hair long, reaching nearly to the waist, and cut square across. Now they wouldn't think of such a thing as touching those raven locks of theirs with a brush or comb. When an Arizona Indian feels that his hair wants doing up he makes a thick paste of the adobe soil and water. He winds his hair tightly about his head and smears it from his forehead to the back of his neck with a plentiful supply of the

PALMER NEWS.

Burglars Make a Haul.

The lunch room of B. L. Dunton on South Main street was entered by burglars some time during last Friday night. An attempt was at first made to obtain an entrance through the cellar, but the door at the head of the cellar stairs resisted their efforts. They then went to the back door, toward the railroad track, and after breaking out a pane of glass, which it is thought was done while a train was passing, as no noise of breaking glass was noticed in the night, reached in and slid the bolt on the door. About all the cigars, cigarettes and tobacco in stock were taken, also a pair of pants belonging to Mr. Dunton, which fortunately contained only some small change. The pants were found the next day on the street. Mrs. Loren Reed also is mourning the loss of between $18 and $20, which was taken by the same parties.

The cattle which were sold from the state primary school some time ago and which were, by some, claimed to be afflicted with tuberculosis, have been examined by Prof. Stockbridge of Amherst and an expert and declared to be, as far as can possibly be known, free from the disease and safe to use for any purpose.

Eighteen bicyclists registered at one of our local hotels last Sunday. One of them said he started from Lowell that morning and was on a trip west, another was on his way from Boston to Albany, four came up from Meriden, Ct., going to Maine on a vacation trip; the rest were mostly from Springfield and vicinity.

It would be well for people to have a care as to the direction in which they point sky rockets in Fourth of July celebrations. There is one house in town that has a rocket stick standing up in the roof, as a relic of the Fourth, where it struck after being fired. Had it hit a person on the head the result would have been serious.

The body of Louis M. Rand of Worcester was brought here for burial yesterday afternoon. Mr. Rand had been a conductor on the Boston and Albany road for many years, his run being between Worcester and Boston. He was formerly a resident of Palmer and was a member of Thomas Lodge of Masons, under whose direction the funeral services were held.

At the Congregational church next Sunday morning the subject will be "The Old Within the New." In the evening the pastor will speak, by request, on his work in the South, taking for his subject "The Yankee Christian in the South." The ladies' prayer meetings will be discontinued during July and August. It was voted last evening to continue the use of the printed orders of the Sunday morning service.

Miss Lizzie Wassum arrived home Saturday from Westbrook Seminary, Deering, Me., where she was graduated last week Thursday. Miss Wassum and one other lady received the degree of laureate of arts, which is conferred by state authority upon ladies who complete the classical course. She was one of the nine essayists of the graduating class, and also gave the class prophecy at the class day exercises.

There was somewhat of a sensation on Central street Wednesday morning when a man who was getting over the effects of a spree attempted to hang himself, or threatened to do so and began preparations for the event, greatly to the terror of his family. The man has been inclined to dissipation somewhat of late, and if matters are not altered it is not unlikely that he will be summoned to appear in court.

At a session of the probate court held in Springfield Wednesday administration was granted in the estate of Mary P. Conner, late of Brimfield, Alfred L. Converse administrator. An account was rendered in the estate of Amos Whitaker, late of Hampden. Jason Butler was appointed guardian of Benjamin Butler, of Wilbraham insane. Mary Gee was appointed administratrix de bonis non in the estate of James Rossbottom, late of Palmer.

The Palmer ball team has had good success the past week, playing four games and winning three. Last Saturday they easily defeated the Monsons on the home grounds, 20 to 1; Monday afternoon the boys went to Three Rivers and defeated the team there 14 to 2; Tuesday forenoon they "did up" the Bondsvilles 16 to 6 at Bondsville; in the afternoon they went to Ware and were "done up" 6 to 4. To-morrow afternoon they will play the Gilbertvilles on the grounds here.

The Palmer and Monson Electric Co. hopes to get started in the new station at Blanchardville next week. The work of setting the poles for the street line in the other villages commenced yesterday, and will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The thunder storm of Wednesday evening interfered a little with the service rendered by the company. Four transformers were burned out and all the lights were out about ten minutes once, owing to the blowing of a fuse in the station.

Thomas Blanchard's two-years-old "Caddie Stout" did well in the stake race at Rutland, Vt., Tuesday. There were fifteen starters and a poor track. "Caddie Stout" finished eighth in the first heat and then won second in 2.45. The third heat was lost, however, the horse finishing eleventh. Three dropped out of the fourth heat, and for the second time the horse won from eighth position, the time being 2.44. D. F. Holden's "Alcove" won third money in the three-years-old class.

What might have been a serious blaze started in the millinery store of Miss K. I. McMahon just before 10 o'clock Monday evening. Miss McMahon and one of her employes were working after the store was closed and locked; the girl in taking down a lamp dropped it behind the counter, and the burning oil was scattered over the goods and floor. In her excitement the girl could not find the door key and there was a little difficulty in getting in to put out the flames. Finally Joseph Barrett and Oliver LaSalle got in and succeeded in stamping out the fire and removing the burned goods. The loss was about $100. No alarm was rung in.

The Fourth passed off in an unusual quiet manner for Palmer. The noise began about 11.30 the evening before, when a company paraded the streets with tin horns, etc. Two large fires were built on Main street, one opposite the Nassowanno House and one opposite the east end of the opera house block. The bells rang at midnight and again at noon, but there was very little noise during the day, and many people were out of town at the celebrations at Forest Lake, where there was a large crowd, at Stafford Springs and Willimantic. No serious accidents have been reported, though there were the usual number of burned fingers, etc. In the evening there were good displays of fireworks by private individuals. The roof of J. C. Wing's shed on Central street caught fire from a rocket, and a hole two by three feet was burned, but the fire was discovered and extinguished.

The joke was on three boys who boasted that they would ring the Congregational church bell the night of the third. The janitor of the church had heard of their boast, and decided that they should not ring it, as the bell is not in condition to stand the rough usage it would receive at inexperienced hands. He accordingly went into the garret, locking the doors behind him and pulling up the bell-rope. About midnight three boys gained an entrance to the building, and finding the doors locked broke open two, and were climbing the posts into the belfry when the janitor flashed his light in their faces and casually remarked that he thought he could take care of that bell. He says the way those boys went down the posts and out of the building was in no manner slow. The breaking of the locks is a serious matter, and it is possible that the would-be bell ringers have not yet heard the last of the affair.

State Primary School Notes.

Miss Cederroti was in Boston the first of the week.

Miss Hancock and her assistant, Miss Page, are at the school.

Mrs. Royce is in Middletown, Ct., this week, taking a vacation.

Mrs. Hall of Sutton is at the school visiting her neice, Miss Luther.

Miss Allen of Belchertown and Miss Murdock of Three Rivers visited Miss Walker yesterday.

Misses Katherine and Laura Clemons of Springfield spent the Fourth at the school, visiting Miss Pearson.

Fine weather, a good programme, and plenty of noise all helped to make the Fourth a day to be remembered by the boys. The programme as printed last week was carried out. The fun and the noise began before five in the morning, and did not cease until the last crackers had been fired and the boys were in bed. In the forenoon the swimming and tub races furnished sport for all present. In the afternoon a large number were present to applaud the close finishes in the foot races and to watch the girls throw the base ball. In the evening a crowd came up from Palmer to watch the fireworks. Each balloon and every rocket as sent up called forth as many "ohs" and "ahs" as the first cracker in the morning, and at nine o'clock, when the party broke up, a more tired or a happier lot of boys probably could not be found. Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Wetmore were untiring in their efforts that all should have a good time. Our rockets went higher and our balloons were larger than any others seen during the evening. Maloney's cat doesn't like firecrackers, and even "Skip" was decorated. The laugh is on the officer who locked the six alarm clocks in his trunk and in the evening found they were gone. When he thought of the young lady to whom he innocently loaned his keys during the afternoon his feelings were more Wet than otherwise.

District Court.

The new drunk law went into effect July 1st. It differs from the old law as follows: Under the old law the police officer or lock-up keeper could release a drunk upon his making a statement that he had not been twice arrested in the past year for drunkenness, or if he had been arrested twice and discharged once. This is done away with now, all cases having to come before the judge. By the old law the judge had to either probate the offender or imprison him. Now he can impose a fine, give a sentence of imprisonment, or probate the party for a given time and at the end of the probation can impose a fine if he sees fit. The maximum fine is $15. The first victim under this law paid $10 Monday. Charles Mathon of Three Rivers, on three charges of assault, continued from last week, paid a fine of $15 for each charge. The charges against him of lewdness were placed on file on condition that he should leave town, he agreeing to go to Canada. The case of Thomas Quigley of Thorndike for larceny was placed on file. Charles Wilcox of Wales was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. He was bound over to the superior court, and in default of $500 bonds was sent to jail. Nelson Lanphear of Monson was up on two charges of drunkenness and had them continued until Wednesday. The liquors seized from Michael St. John of Palmer Center were returned to the claimant by order of the court. William Andrews of Monson paid a fine of $10 for disturbing the peace in that place last Sunday. Wednesday the continued cases against Nelson Lanphear of Monson were taken up. On a complaint of drunkenness on June 27th he entered the plea of nolo, paid the expenses and was discharged. A similar charge against him for July 1st was continued. Thursday morning Emery McGregory of Wilbraham paid a fine of $6 for drunkenness, and James Breen of this town for the same offense was placed on probation until August 5th.

The society of St. Anne's church held a picnic in Burns's grave the Fourth, and a delightful time was afforded to everyone present. It is said that a much larger number attended the outing this season than in preceding years, and that the exercises and entertainment far surpassed any similar celebration of the society.

One of the many tricks the boys reveled in during the evening preceding the Fourth was somewhat of a surprise to Daniel Lane. Mr. Lane is the proprietor of a rather antiquated "one-hoss shay," which was hoisted to the roof of the old depot, which he moved to his premises some time ago. No one has heard how the vehicle was raised to its elevated position, but many are sure that it exceeded in a shorter time than it took to lower it.

Monday afternoon a game of base ball was played at this place between a local team and a team representing Palmer, which resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 14 to 2. It is said by the men who played on the Three Rivers side that the Palmers violated the conditions of the game by having six players who have professional pretensions, whereas the game was to be played by local men on both sides. However, when the game is returned Three Rivers goes to win.

The picnic which was held by the Union and Baptist churches on the Fourth was a very enjoyable affair throughout. The Sunday school children and church members turned out in large numbers and had a joyous time. Boating, base ball and croquet were among the games indulged in, the children especially being delighted with the boat riding. The grounds were handsomely decorated with flags and other ornaments, which added much to the picturesque views that are to be had up and down the river from the comfortable platform erected by Charles Ruggles.

One of our local wheelmen will be apt to observe the laws of the road after this. While riding the other day he met a team and took the wrong side of the road, and as a result his wheel is now in the repair shop.

The second game between the Palmers and Bondsvilles was played upon the home grounds Tuesday forenoon. It was won by the Palmers, 16 to 6. The home team showed its weakness in its liability to get rattled. They put up a good game except for one inning, when the Palmers made eight runs. Several brilliant plays were made on both sides during the game.

The ball game between the Gilbertvilles and the home team Saturday resulted in favor of the home team, 7 to 5. The score stood thus in the last half of the ninth inning with the home team at bat, when the Gilbertvilles made a kick. As they refused to play the umpire gave the game to the home team, 9 to 0. The features of the game were catches by D. Sullivan and Sanborn, and the batting of Flaherty and Slate.

THORNDIKE.

Mrs. William Sullivan, who has been engaged in the millinery and dressmaking business, has moved from her rooms in McCormick block to her home on Commercial street.

A horse hitched to a carriage and owned by Jerry Shea of Bondsville became unmanageable at the upper end of the village Monday afternoon and capsized the carriage, badly damaging the same. The horse was injured somewhat about the legs.

John Dailey's horse became frightened on Sunday, freed itself from the post it was hitched to and ran a short distance down Main street toward Three Rivers, doing no damage except to the harness and knocking down a hitching post in front of Rev. F. J. Lynch's residence.

Patrick Sullivan of Bondsville, while riding on a bicycle one evening last week, collided with a team on the long bridge near the No. 1 mill and was thrown from his wheel into the iron work of the bridge, receiving a slight cut above the eye. The machine was badly demolished.

John Crowley, while at the depot on Monday after freight, met with what came near being a bad accident. A special train came by the station at great speed and frightened the horse, the reins broke and Mr. Crowley and a companion were thrown out of the wagon. Fortunately both escaped without injury.

The Fourth.

The night before the Fourth was observed in the usual manner, with a large bonfire, the tooting of horns and the firing of cannon crackers, etc., until the small hours of morning. There were no bells rung, for the first time in 15 years. The school house was guarded by a special officer by order of the school committee. There were no accidents reported, and all seemed to enjoy their independence. Taken altogether it was a very peaceful day. On the morning of the Fourth a parade of the French Circle Society passed through the village, headed by the Three Rivers Band, making a pleasing appearance. The day being a beautiful one there were not many stay-at-homes in this place, as there were too many attractions to draw them away. Large numbers went to Stafford, Warren, Forest Lake and the Four Corners.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN ss. June 28th, A. D. 1893.

By virtue of an execution which issued on a judgment recovered in the Superior Court at Springfield, within and for the county of Hampden, on the fifth day of June, A. D. 1893, in favor of Minnie A. Roberts of Manchester, county of Hillsborough, and state of New Hampshire, and against Mary Keith and Edwin E. Keith, both of Palmer, in said county of Hampden, I have this day taken all the right in equity that the said Mary Keith and Edwin E. Keith had on the second day of November, A. D. 1892, the day when the same was attached on mesne process in this action to redeem certain mortgaged real estate, with the buildings thereon, situate in said Palmer, and bounded and described as follows, to wit: Commencing on the highway at the southwest corner of the lot on the road leading from Hastings' bridge, so called, to Greenwich, 47 rods to a stone placed in the ground, thence 23 rods east to the Ware River, thence south on said river 31 rods to the highway and bridge, thence on the highway west 34 rods to the first mentioned bound, containing six acres, more or less, and being the same conveyed to the said Mary Keith by C. F. Smith, March 9th, 1889, and recorded in the Hampden County registry of deeds, book 457, page 207, and on Thursday, the third day of August next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, in front of the court house in said Palmer, I shall offer for sale by public auction to the highest bidder, said right in equity of redemption to satisfy said execution and all fees and charges of sale. H. A. NORTHROP, 3-13 Deputy Sheriff.

At the athletic contest at Evergreen Park Tuesday the pole vault was won by Connell, the 100-yards dash by Busher, with Stone second; running high jump, Stone first, Connell and Savage tied for second place, Savage winning on the toss; running broad jump, Stone first, Norman second; the boat race was won by Guiham, with Savage second. Sault Bros. gave a very interesting exhibition of physical strength.

A special town meeting was held in the town hall Monday. S. F. Howard was moderator. The warrant contained three articles, which were disposed of as follows: Voted to give the tax collector 1¾ per cent of the total amount of taxes collected; in regard to building a new school house in the village a committee of five was appointed, G. H. Newton, Rev. J. F. Lee, Dr. G. E. Fuller, R. C. Cushman and G. C. Flynt to consider the matter; in regard to moving No. 5 school house, the committee appointed in 1892 was not present, and will report at the adjourned meeting.

The temperance picnic held on Flynt's Park July 4th was well attended. Speeches were made by the local clergymen, and there were recitations by Misses May Phillips and Ruth Bosquet, after which were the athletic sports. The 100-yards dash, half mile run, hurdle race and 220-yards dash were won by Clarence King; Myron Wright won the bicycle race; Fred Lull the doughnut and potato races. Clarence Wing of Palmer won the broad and high jumps; A. N. Gaoutte the slow bicycle race; Phillips the running broad and standing high jumps; Bennett the pole vault. The cobweb race was awarded to Miss Alice King and Miss Bertha Bosquet. The sports concluded with a ball game between nines chosen by H. A. Felton and C. P. Keep, being won by the former with a score of 13 to 3.

A Tribute to Mr. Dustan.

The following, written by Rev. P. W. Lyman, president of the board of trustees of Monson Academy, shows that body's appreciation of the work done by Mr. Dustan during his principalship at that institution:—

The decision of Principal Dustan to accept the offer of the principalship of Tabor Academy at Marion will remove from Monson a man whose work in behalf of Monson Academy, at a somewhat critical period of its history, has been attended with marked and beneficent results.

For six years past Mr. Dustan has given his thought and toil without stint to the work of building up and directing the institution entrusted to his charge. Hammond Hall as a feature of the academy life, in a very large sense, may be said to be his monument here. His influence in winning favor for the academy and funds for its treasury have been decided. He has seen the number of its non-resident pupils increased more than three-fold, a material increase both of the permanent funds and of the annual income, the enlargement of the faculty, and a broadening of the facilities and courses of study, and in the measures which have led to this gain in the condition of the school, he has borne his full share.

With unflagging zeal he has sought to promote the welfare of the school and to broaden the scope of its influence, and in a good degree he has succeeded. Monson pays the penalty of his success in this line by seeing his services sought by other schools, and now by yielding him to the call of a munificently endowed academy with a more extended field from which to draw pupils, but which is in need of having done for it the work of reorganization and enlargement which he has done here.

Mr. Dustan's general qualities will commend him to the favor of the constituency of the institution whose leadership he has consented to assume. Monson Academy will be fortunate if, with the means at its command, it can secure the services of a man who can render it a better service than has been rendered by the retiring principal.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Dustan will be greatly missed when they withdraw from the life of the place into which they have entered with so much zest. They will be followed to their new field of labor by the good wishes of the pupils and other friends of the academy, and of the community generally.

WARREN.

A party of about 25 young people visited Steerage Rock on the Fourth.

A large company gathered at Mr. Day's Wednesday evening in spite of the showers, at the wedding reception given in honor of Mr. Day's son.

Mrs. Guilbert and daughter spent the Fourth in Holyoke.

Henry Powers and family of Worcester have been spen ding a few days with friend in town.

Mr. Hill is placing a curbing adjoining his land on Pleasant street, which will add much to the appearance of the street.

Mr. Whitney, an artist from Salem, with his family, is to spend a part of the month in town, and will board with Mrs. Lyman Powers.

WEST BRIMFIELD.

Miss Lucy Shaw is visiting friends in Norwich, Ct.

William Allen has returned to town for a short stay.

A. L. Pasco and family of Springfield were the guests of Calvin Shaw Tuesday.

Edward Powers and family of Springfield spent Monday with his father, N. S. Powers.

Mrs. George Hocum of West Brookfield has been spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. William Allen.

The usual quiet that generally prevails was somewhat broken "the night before the Fourth," and revelry and song were heard until a late hour.

A young man with a heavy "load" aboard was found stretched at full length on the track Tuesday, and but for timely assistance a different tale might be told.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Frank A. Fuller has purchased the Chapin lot on Maple avenue for $357.

Miss Maybelle Gates is attending the Christian Endeavor convention at Montreal, as delegate of the society here.

Miss F. Bassett of New Britain, Ct., is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. E. Gates.

A. Friend and Miss B. Dempsey were united in marriage last Monday. They left on the 2.20 p. m. train for a visit to New Haven, Ct., and vicinity.

A young son of E. H. Ward met with a serious accident on the Fourth which will leave him marked for life. It appears that another young boy had found a dynamite exploder, and not knowing what it was they proceeded to fire it with the result of the young boy in question having two of his fingers and part of the fleshy part of his hand blown off. Dr. Damon attended the injuries.

BELCHERTOWN.

Miss Bessie Bridgeman has gone to the Adirondacks for the summer.

Twenty-three pupils have passed the entrance examinations for the high school.

Cards are out for the reception next Wednesday evening of Dr. and Mrs. C. B. King.

The post office has been moved to W. E. Bridgman's store on the corner of Main and Maple streets.

Stillman Weston, who has been a life-long resident of Belchertown, as was his father before him, has moved to Amherst.

The Christian Endeavor Society has elected these officers for the ensuing six months: President, Eugene Randall; vice president, Ida L. Shaw; recording secretary, Julia Smith; corresponding secretary, Luella Hawkes; treasurer, H. F. Curtis; chairman of prayer meeting committee, Rev. W. S. Woolworth; lookout, Walter Blackmer; social, Mrs. H. D. Hoag; welcome and vsiting, Stella Shumway; flower, Delia E. Stacy.

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Minnie Weld is at her home in Sturbridge.

James L. Brown of Maynard was in town the Fourth.

Marshal Allen of Worcester spent the week at his home.

Louis Jones and wife of Worcester are visiting David Jones.

Miss Winifred Sawyer returned to her home in Worcester to-day.

Miss Muzzy of Worcester is at the Warren residence for an indefinite stay.

Mrs. Elijah Sherman and family of New York city are in town for the summer.

Eugene Brown and wife of Sturbridge are visiting for a few days at Mrs. C. O. Brown's.

Albert Bacon and family of Springfield are occupying the Bacon homestead for three weeks.

Mr. and and Mrs. Oscar Washburn of Brocton are guests of Dr. and Mrs. R. V. Sawin.

Sale Charles of Boston spent a few days in town this week, the guest of his sister, Mrs. Ed. Bliss.

Misses Carrie Smith and Bessie Brown leave for Cottage City next week, to attend the summer school.

Miss Grace Kinney, who has been in town for a few weeks, returned to her home in Springfield Wednesday.

The Fourth passed off pleasantly with a union picnic on the common. Remarks were made by Rev. W. K. Pierce, there were recitations by several young ladies, and singing. Fireworks in the evening closed the day's sports.

The remains of Mrs. Mary Tarbell Wheeler were brought to this place Monday afternoon from Rome, N. Y. Funeral services were held in the Second church Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock a. m., Rev. W. K. Pierce officiating. Interment was in the Brimfield cemetery. The deceased was a native of Brimfield and aged 78 years.

WEST WARREN.

Miss Minnie Orcutt of Worcester spent the Fourth at her home.

James Marshall has rented the Lombard tenement on Main street.

Miss Mary A. Dean spent the Fourth with friends in Manchester, Ct.

Miss Mary T. Connor of Chicopee spent the Fourth at her old home.

Mrs. Alfred Converse has returned from a visit with friends in Boston.

Mrs. Willard Watts's house has received a new coat of paint, and looks much improved.

Mrs. Putnam Webber, and baby Marian have returned from a visit with her parents in Salem.

Mrs. Stockwell and grandson of Providence, R. I., have been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Rufus Baker.

The Epworth League held a business meeting Monday evening. Ice cream and cake were served. Singing, reading and instrumental music concluded the entertainment.

The Fourth was well celebrated all day. Early in the morning the place was made merry by the appearance of horribles, on wheels, riding in 'busses, even the cowboy joining in the parade. The West Warren brass band led, and the small boy brought up the rear.

The house of Austin H. Doane, on the road to Ware, was burned between 1 and 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, together with the entire contents. Mr. and Mrs. Doane were away, and the fire was discovered by members of the Warren band on their way home from Forest Lake. When first seen the interior of the house was well ablaze and not a thing could be saved. There had been no fire or lights in the building for a day or two, and the fire must have been of incendiary origin. The loss will be something over $2000, insured through Lincoln's agency of Warren for $1300.

WARE.

J. C. Byrnes commenced his duty as postmaster on Saturday. Mr. St. Onge will remain as assistant postmaster.

It is reported that a gingham mill with forty looms is to be built at Ware Center by three sons of Mrs. Farrar, who it is said are expert weavers. The mill is to be located on land formerly owned by Mrs. Lambert. The latest reports are that the foundations are being put in and Lyman Hathaway & Son are to do the carpenter work. It is proposed to commence small, with a building only 28 by 36, but so constructed that additions may be made in the future.

The excitement of the week has been the assault on Miss May Gould, aged about 18 years, on the West Warren road near the railroad crossing last Saturday evening about 7 o'clock by three young fellows from West Warren. She was thrown down and roughly handled, but her assailants were frightened away by a passing team, whose driver notified the Ware police as quickly as possible, and chase was immediately given. Two of the fellows were captured in the woods near by and taken to the lockup, a large crowd following them through the streets. The third was taken at Warren. Their names are reported as William Haley, William N. Crawford and Daniel McKelligett. They were taken to Northampton and arraigned before Judge Strickland on Monday, being placed under $1000 bonds each to appear at Ware for trial to-day, when they were bound over to the superior court at Northampton.

Strong Witnesses.

Among the thousands of testimonials of cures by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, is of Nathan Allisons, a well-known citizen of Glen Rock, Pa., who for years had shortness of breath, sleeplessness, pain in left side, shoulders, smothering spells, etc.; one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and one box of Nerve and Liver Pills, cured him. Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with Heart Disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, death stared him in the face, could not lie down for fear of smothering to death. Immediately after using the New Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Cure is sold, also Free Book, by LeGro & Lynde. (2)

A Great Benefactor.

"Educators are certainly the greatest benefactors of the race, and after reading Dr. Franklin Miles' popular works, we cannot help declaring him to be among the most entertaining and educating of authors."—New York Daily. He is not a stranger to our readers, as his advertisements appear in our columns in every issue, calling attention to the fact that his elegant work on Nervous and Heart Diseases is distributed free by our enterprising druggists, LeGro & Lynde. Trial Bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine are given away, also Book of Testimonials showing that it is unequalled for Nervous Prostration, Headach, Poor Memory, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Neuralgia, Hysteria, Fits, Epilepsy. To restore gray hair to its natural color as in youth, cause it to grow abundant and strong, there is no better preparation than Hall's Hair Renewer.

In old times it seemed to be thought that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now, all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

Just Married.

How loving they are; this is always a sure sign. After the first year sometimes it don't hold good. When Charles comes home to you grouty and cross, snapping and snarling, unable to relish the nice dinner you have cooked, and feels as if there was a ton of pig iron in his stomach, he is troubled with dyspepsia, and Sulphur Bitters is the only medicine that will cure him.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Those in want of healthy, out door employment for the summer will do well to read the ad. in another column headed "Work offered." 4-11

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

"It has cured others and will cure you" is true only of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The motto suits the medicine and the medicine the motto. What better assurance could you have that a remedy will cure you, than the fact that it has cured such multitudes of others?

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

Forbes & Wallace's.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., July, 1893.

A lively entertainment is promised this month.

We have been doing some great bargain buying. Certain disturbances in the money market have unroofed values. A makes a blunder, manufactures too much underwear, B buys too many wash fabrics, C this or that. Unless some one will relieve them they must go on through the season loaded, handicapped, unable by reason of excess of one thing to do something else.

Here comes our opportunity. We are not glad that anybody must lose, but if a loss has to be made we want to bring our great buying power into the case, and make operations so big and so marked as to produce phenominal bargains for you. The present state of the market gives that chance.

The wash fabric counters were never more tempting than to-day.

For instance:

Ginghams, worth 12½, for 5 and 6¼c.
India organdies, worth 10, for 4c.
Taffet veloute, worth 25, for 10c.
Satsumma silks, worth 12½, for 8c.
Shantong pongees, worth 12½, for 8c.
Foochow pongees, worth 12½, far 8c.
Crinkled seersuckers, worth 12½, for 6¼c.
Oriental cords, worth 10, for 5c.
Duck suiting, worth 19, for 12½c.
Fine Scotch gingham, worth 37½, for 21c.
Fine Scotch gingham, worth 50, for 25c.

Right aisle.

We have just started the greatest special summer sale of muslin underwear ever made in this market; every garment being worth more money than anything you ever saw at the price; worth more in material, worth more in work, worth more in style.

One of the hardest things for Springfield women to understand is how such prices are possible. There's the cost of the cloth and the cost of making; and here's the underwear for less than the two foot up.

Second floor.

A catalogue of books suitable for summer reading will be sent to all who say they wish it.

Chicago, Denver and Cincinnati Physicians fail to Help Mrs. Willey.

[FROM THE CINCINNATI (O.) POST.]

To the Editor:—I believe that I can help the sick and suffering by giving them the benefit of my experience.

For years I have suffered from rheumatism, complicated with neuralgia and severe headaches, and at regular intervals with the illness peculiar to my sex, at times almost crazy with pains in my head and body. I have employed physicians in Denver, Chicago, here and other cities who have given me but temporary relief.

Some time ago I began the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it has done me more good than all the doctors put together. I am better now than I have been for years, and my neighbors will vouch for the great improvement Favorite Remedy has made in me. I have recommended Favorite Remedy to many of my friends and it has in every case helped them.

Having found a medicine that has demonstrated its power to benefit and cure in such a complicated case as my own, I feel it a duty to make it known publicly so that the many suffering ones of this city can avail themselves of it.

MRS. A. WILLEY, Cincinnati, O.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has certainly made many wonderful cures in cases where the skill and methods of other physicians have been baffled. Dr. Kennedy has prescribed Favorite Remedy and it has produced permanent recovery in rheumatism, dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaints which always arise from acidity of the blood.

Still Another Victim of La Grippe cured by . .

Leon's Sarsaparilla!

Only one case among a thousand.

To Leon Sarsaparilla Co.:

Gentlemen:—After a very severe attack of La Grippe, I was much reduced in strength. My stomach was out of order, I had no appetite, and a severe cough set in. People told me that with the coming of warm weather I should get better, but as the summer passed, I found that unless I got relief, I should soon be a confirmed invalid. I became despondent, and entirely without energy. Early in the autumn I commenced to use Leon's Sarsaparilla regularly, and occasionally took the Liver Granules. After two months, I find their use has changed me completely. I now have a good appetite, my food digests well, my cough is all gone, my strength has returned, and I am helped in every way. I am well and able to work.

Yours very thankfully,
MRS. LOVINA PHILBRICK.

Don't Drink Rum.

Come here, my sturdy little boy, and listen to my rhyme,
Be sure to paste it in your hat and heed it every time;
Your life is all before you, there are enemies to fight,
And 'tis a most important thing to start just right;
So, first and foremost, seek the road to happiness and health,
Those blessings go together, and are better far than wealth;
Life is a battle, so be brave, and when your trials come
Show what you're made of, be a man,
And Don't Drink
Rum.

Cold water is a lion's drink, the king of beasts is he,
A drunken lion is a sight you very seldom see;
He never smokes a dirty pipe or filthy cigarette,
In all my travels I've ne'er found a smoking lion yet;
A drinking, smoking lion, armed with teeth so sound and white,
Chewing tobacco in his den would be a funny sight;
My boy, behave as well, at least, as creatures wild and dumb,
Temptation you must laugh to scorn,
And Don't Drink
Rum.

Take stock in no new-fangled "cure" that's everywhere for sale,
Well may the hideous details cause your ruddy cheeks to pale;
Those portraits of the rescued ones settle the case at once,
The buyer of such loathsome trash must be a wretched dunce;
Their lungs and livers they extol, and brag with cheerful air
Of their lovely mucous membranes, and regenerated hair.
Never be duped and humbugged by that pestilential scum,
But put your money in the bank,
And Don't Drink
Rum.

With this advice and counsel I must leave you to your fate,
Form habits of the very best before it is too late;
Keep your feet warm, your head cool, your back keep straight, and try
To be a centenarian at least before you die;
Eat sparingly of wholesome food, drink crystal water pure,
Avoid vile cranks with nostrums foul, each warranted to cure,
Of poisonous tobacco never use one single crumb,
And bless your stars that you're all right
And Don't Drink
Rum.

The above articles will be distributed, by counties, among parties who chew SPEAR HEAD Plug Tobacco, and return to us the TIN TAGS taken therefrom.

We will distribute 226 of these prizes in this county as follows:

To THE PARTY sending us the greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS from this county we will give.....1 GOLD WATCH.
To the FIVE PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each, 1 OPERA GLASS....5 OPERA GLASSES.
To the TWENTY PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 POCKET KNIFE.....20 POCKET KNIVES.
To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 ROLLED GOLD WATCH CHARM TOOTH PICK.....100 TOOTH PICKS.
To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 LARGE PICTURE IN ELEVEN COLORS.....100 PICTURES.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DON'T SEND ANY TAGS BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1894.

JUDGE CEPHAS.

Happening soon after the close of the war to ride along the road past "Old Pop Castle," I observed a large and excited concourse of colored people standing under the famous oak at that place. Upon approaching and making inquiry I learned that Uncle Cephas —now Squire Bolden—who, along with some others of his race had recently been appointed magistrate, was about to hold his first court.

Elbowing my way through the dense crowd till I reached and mounted one of the gnarled roots of the oak, I was enabled to overlook the sea of heads and survey the court. On the safest corner of a very unsteady shuck frame was perched the presiding magistrate, his ebony forehead, which bowed back without limit over his ball pate, covered with an appropriate frown. The rest of the frame held the six jurymen, who leaned against or sat upon it according to each one's confidence in its stability. The prisoner, a vagabondish but harmless-looking man, on whose crow-black face fright was imprinted in an ashy cast, was wrapped up in ropes and placed in the middle of the shuck frame for safe keeping.

I had scarcely gained my position and taken in the surroundings when the court opened.

"De court am now adjurned en will perceed to bizness," cried Uncle Cephas in a loud voice as he removed his hat and dropped it on the ground. "Let whomsoever gwi' pussycute dis pusson hyere in de shuck frame now speak up er f'rever hole his peace!" he continued with solemnity.

A young mulatto, the smartness of whose dress culminated in a highly-glazed paper collar, slowly arose from one of the oak roots, cleared his throat in the most approved legal fashion and announced that he had been engaged to conduct the prosecution.

"Well, den, shoot, Luke, er give up de gun," exclaimed the court after the counsel had wasted a good while fumbling through his pockets in a perfunctory manner.

"Mister Magistrate en genermen ob de jury," began the prosecutor after this warning, "you am dissembled tergedder hyere dis puirty day under dis blue sky en dese green leabes to deform one er de highes' juties er freemuns en feller citizens."

"De genternmuns better not take sich er big chip, en chop li'l' closeter to de line," put in the court.

"You am dissembled tergedder," continued the counsel, in no wise abashed, "hyere to see dat er pusson dat needs jestice wess'n anybody in de sucele er my whole intelligence gits hit, en gits her plenny ob it, heaped up, sheken down squashed in en runnin' ober. En ef—ef de law didn' inquire dat some confusions must perceed out'n de mouf er de pussycuter, ev'y word dat would be necessary would be, 'Hyere's Nickydemus en dat's de lim' er grapevine,' pointing to a stout grapevine which lay on the frame near the magistrate. "Ev'body knows he's done broke ev'y law dat been made sence dey fust started to makin' laws, sides all sights en stacks un um dat nebber ai' been made. He's broke um sideways, en broke um crossways, en broke um sloperdicler, en broke um puppendicler, uppendicler, downendicler, en roun'endicler twel he's nately wo' nn out to er frazzle.

"But es de law do inquire some confusions to perceed fum de mouf er de pussycutin' lyyer, I will perceed. Fustly, who is dat in de shukk frame? Nickydemus Wagstaff! What is he excused oh? Ev'ything in God Ermighty's worl 'cep'n one theng, en dat is doin' right. Eben de biggist lier 'twixt Roanoke en Tar river never excused him er doin' dat.

"Who'll come to yer house en holler tull he'll make yer walk two miles from yer work en mebbe wade de crick, en den des want to borry 5 cents? Who c'n gin er thousin reasons why yer mus' len' him er dollar, en den turn roun en gin ten thousand w'y he ca' pay it? Who c'n make de biggis' promus en de littles' kerformence in de Nunited States? Who c'n outargyfy Daniel Webster hisself when he wants to git holt er yer thengs, en den outargyfy him ergin when yer tries to break dat holt?

"Who is de lazis', lyinist, eatinis', outlandishis', worryinis' nigger awn dis side ob de river? Who aggyvates en 'starbs de neighborhood till dey don' know dar heels from dar head? Ergin I axes yer who owes ev'body in twelb miles er dis place en furder ef he ranges furder! Who c'n look into yer min' en tell to er minute how lawng it takes yerto furgit dat las' 25 cents he borrid, en den step right up en borry er nudder one? Nickydemus! En now who ken be spar'd de bes' en missed de less? Nickydemus!'

The magistrate, who for some time had been extremely busy trimming the knots from the grapevine with his pocketknife and twisting it into suppleness, now paused and delived the following charge:

"Gentlemuns ob de jury, you's hyeard ernough to hang er whole cuppen (cowpen) full er niggers. En all I'm got to say is dat pull'n fodder time putnigh hyere en dis is er mighty good chance to git ridder Nickydemus."

"Gentlemuns ob de jury, is yer ergreed?" demanded Squire Bolden.

"We am, sah," came in dignified tones from the frame.

"What is de wordick?" solemnly demanded Uncle Cephas.

"De wordick, sah, am it nebber won' do to let slip dis chance er gittin' ridder Nickydemus," was the reply.

"Stan up, prisn'ner," was the superfluous order of the magistrate to the condemned, who had been standing up from the first. "You's done plenny harm in dis worl' fer one nigger; en side's you's had er fa'r trial 'fo' yer feller citizens. Now, it's de jedgment er dis court dat yer be hung to de biggis' lim' awn Pop Castle oak widder grapevine, caze t'ud be bad luck to use er rope after it been 'bout dead folks, en dat de jury is debbytized to do de hangin'."

"Hold on!" I shouted, throughly aroused by the groans of the prisoner and the screams of his wife and children.

"Do you know that you are about to deprive a humam being of life against law and justice? Why, not even a witness has appeared against him. Mind what you do!"

"De genterman in sto'cloze," replied the magistrate sternly, "will please don't bodder de exscusionment er dis hyere court. De chac'ter er Nickydemus Wagstaff is knowed fer as de train goes, of not er li'l furder. De whole yearth en ev'ytheng in it b'rs witness ergin him. Gentermuns, do yer juty."

While I was struggling desperately to force my way through the throng and reach the spot, the ropes were stripped from the prisoner, a slip noose in the grapevine thrown around his neck, and he was dragged away to the designated spot. One end of the vine weighted with a small stone was thrown over a huge limb. The jury seized it as it fell and pulled with might and main. The doomed man rose, wildly kicking and struggling against the background of blue sky. He was already several feet in the air when a hitch occurred. The jury gave a jerk. With a snap the grapevine broke, piling them in a heap on the ground. In an instant Nicodemus was making for the woods, descending the hill 20 feet at a bound, with half the grapevine standing out straight behind him, and the whole crowd, Uncle Cephas in the van, in head long pursuit.

Before 100 yards were covered it was clea that Pop Castle would witness no hanging that day, and in half an hour the breathless, baffled crowd was back again seeking what consolation the cool spring water could afford.

Whether it was an accidental break in the grapevine or whether the shrewd old man while trimming and,"spoolin," gave it a nick it was impossible to say, although there was plainly a twinkle in Uncle Ceph's eye when his gaze met mine on his return from the chase.—David Dodge in Kate Field's Washington.

A SLIGHT MISUNDERSTANDING.—He had just received a letter from his son at college, and was reading it aloud to his family, when he came to this passage:

"I am taking lessons in fencing, and as the fee must be paid in advance will need another remittance."

"Wa'al, now, that do beat all," said the old man, "what on airth does anybody need to take lessons in fencing for, I'd like to know? I've been fencing for forty years and never had to go to college to learn how."

"But times have changed, father," said his wife, "fences ain't made as they used to was when we clim them in Rock Hollow."

"That's so," said the old man. "Ed don't say of its a wire fence or a rail one, but I reckon he'll learn both ways. But I vum, I never expected a boy of mine would hev to go to college to learn fencing. It do seem queer."

Then he wrote out another check and forwarded it by the next mail.

HENS IN THE PROCESSION.—Col. William Olin told the following story at a little dinner party at Parker's one day:

Two little children who had seen a Memorial day procession decided they would decorate the grave of a favorite pussy that had been buried under a pear tree in the back yard. So they marched toward the spot one behind the other. The first child, who carried a drum, was the band, and the second, with a tiny flag, was the Grand Army.

Before they reached the grave a lot of hens ran in front of the procession.

"Shoo, shoo!" cried the band.

"Don't do that, sister," said the second division, "don't scare them away. They are the Woman's Relief Corps."

Miss Upton—"Did you tell him I was not at home?" New Servant—"Yes, mum; but he didn't seem to believe me, bein' as I'm a stranger. Mebby you'd better go down and tell him yourself, mum."—New York Weekly.

On the day after his best girl left for a summer in the country, Algernon went into a book shop to buy Mrs. Burton Harrison's "Sweet Bell Out of Tune." But he was absent-minded and asked for "Sweet Belles Out of town."—Hartford Courant

THE KIND THAT CURES

H. B. HITCHCOCK,
Springfield, Mass.

The following wonderful testimonial from Mr. H. B. Hitchcock, who was shipping clerk for the Powers Paper Co. for 19 yrs., and who now resides at No. 100 Water St., Springfield, Mass., proves that DANA'S is "THE KIND THAT CURES."

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.:

GENTLEMEN:—I am now 41 years old, and some 15 years ago I began to fail—an all-gone, tired feeling would permeate my whole being. I grew worse and worse, and as the years went by I employed in all seven Physicians—tried a noted Sarsaparilla, but received no benefit. I had terrible headaches—had to live on the most simple diet—my stomach was so weak that it would retain only the lightest food—had severe constipation. It was hard work for me to rise from my bed. My nerves were prostrated to such a degree that I could not bear to be left alone in a room—it seemed as though I should fly, and I felt that I would rather die than live. This was my condition last November when I began taking as a last resort. It helped me from the first. I have taken only four bottles. Can eat anything—sleep like a child, and am in fact, completely CURED. DANA'S is the only medicine I would recommend for it cures when all others fail.

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

Yours very truly, H. B. HITCHCOCK

We have been time and again asked the question why the Chilton Paints have such a high gloss. The Chilton Paint Co. in buying linseed oil contracts for "prime, well-settled, old-fashioned, raw linseed oil" This is, being interpreted, oil crushed from prime or first-quality flaxseed and which has been tanked and allowed to settle. The oil is then drawn from the upper part of the tank, leaving undisturbed the lower part. "Old-fashioned linseed oil" is from seed crushed and pressed instead of a recent method called the naptha process. Having obtained this oil, the Chilton Co. tank it again, and the oil gradually looses what little moisture it originally possessed and becomes very heavy boiled. It is this cause and the seven mixings and grindings given each shade, crushing and grinding each particle of pigment into each particle of oil that produces the lustre. On well painted houses this gloss alone has been known to last three years; ordinarily the gloss on newly painted houses where common paints are used vanishes in from six months to one year.

To Preserve

The richness, color, and beauty of the hair, the greatest care is necessary, much harm being done by the use of worthless dressings. To be sure of having a first-class article, ask your druggist or perfumer for AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It is absolutely superior to any other preparation of the kind. It restores the original color and fullness to hair which has become thin, faded, or gray. It keeps the scalp cool, moist, and free from dandruff. It heals itching humors, prevents baldness, and imparts to

Deacon Jones's Grievance.

You'll excuse me, Mr. Parson,
If I seem a little sore,
But I've sung the songs o' Isr'el
Fur threescore years an' more,
An' it sort o' hurts my feelin's
Fur to see 'em put away
Fur these harum scarum ditties
'At is capturin' the day.

There's anuther little happenin'
'At I'll mention while I'm here,
Just to show 'at my objections
All is offered sound and clear.
It was one day they was singing
An' was doin' well enough—
Singing good as people could sing
Sich an awful mess o' stuff—

When the choir gave a holler,
An' the organ gave a groan,
An' they left one weak-voiced feller
A-singin' there alone!
But he stuck right to the music,
Though 'twas tryin' as could be,
An' when I tried to help him,
Why the hull church scowled at me.

You say that's so-low singin',
Well, I praise the Lord that I
Growed up when folks was willin'
To sing their hymns so high.
Oh, we never had such doin's
In the good old Bethel days,
When the folks was all contented
With the simple songs o' praise.

Now, I may have spoke too open,
But 'twas too hard to keep still,
An' I hope you'll tell the singers
'At I bear 'em no ill-will.
'At they all may git to glory
Is my wish an' my desire,
But they'll need some extra trainin'
'Fore they join the heavenly choir.

HER HEART'S DESIRE.

"Walk right in," said Miss Cynthia Ruggles to the two girls who stood at her front door. "There's a good fire in th' settin' room."

It was, indeed, a cheerful room into which she led them. A flood of frosty sunshine streamed through the four low windows and the fire glowed in the open Franklin stove. A bright braided mat lay on the hearth and a tortoise-shell cat was curled up in it. A canary sang in its gilded cage; a globe of goldfish stood on a little stand with a crimson cover; there were various effects in tissue paper and Japanese fans upon the walls; a gay afghan was folded across the lounge, and crazy patchwork cushions adorned the chairs. Visitors did not notice that the furniture was old and worn. They all said as these girls did now:—

"My, ain't it cozy and homelike!"

If Miss Cynthia had been a sophisticated woman, she would have called her taste a love of color. As she was a simple, narrow little country soul, she only rubbed her hands nervously together and beamed her satisfaction at such flattery as this.

"We come, Miss Ruggles," said one of the girls, looking appealingly at the other, "t' ask a great favor of you. I hope," with a constrained giggle, "you're real good-natured this mornin'."

Her hostess assumed a prim air of importance, pursing up her lips and looking supremely solemn. She felt very independent in the village of Higley, as a person who was not "doin' business," which always entails conciliatory manners. Her income—tiny, but sufficient for her actual needs, and a trifle over—was invested in government bonds. She had all of woman's thirst for power with great good nature and a warm heart. She waited in grave silence for what was to come.

"We want t' know," Delia Richardson went on bashfully, "if you'll learn us how t' make wax fruit. I'll do as much for you some day, and so'll Sophy."

Sophy nodded her head.

"Oh, I'm agreeable," Miss Cynthia assented, her eyes beginning to shine. "They ain't nothin' I love better t' do 'n fuss with wax. It's elegant work."

She crossed over to a closet and took a pasteboard box from the shelf, the girls watching every movement in reverential awe. She carefully lifted out a large wicker basket. It was filled with representations of apples, oranges, pears and other edibles.

"There," said Miss Cynthia, trying to veil the triumph in her tone by a sigh at the basket's weight as she set it on the center table. "I'm fixin' this up t' send t' th' fair nex' fall."

"Oh, look a' that cucumber!" exclaimed Della, hanging over the display in ecstasy. Even the silent Sophy emitted a cry of delight. It was a sweet moment for Miss Cynthia.

"I never could make 'em like this! could I?" proceeded Delia. "Why, they're just as natural! Seems if I could bite right in that plum. An' raisins, too!"

"I made up them raisins myself," the exhibitor explained with dignity. "I'm goin' t' make a potato, too, an' some green peas. I guess I can. It's just as fascinatin' when ye git t' doin' it! I'd really love t' learn ye!"

Delia expressed their common thanks. "I've always heard about your beautiful fruit," she said, "but I never seen any of it before. Is it hard t' do?"

"Not very when you get th' moulds." Miss Cynthia re-seated herself, and picked up the cat. "If you think my fruit so nice," she reflected aloud, "I wonder what you'd 'a' said to Sarah Gibbons's flowers. They was lovely."

"Wax?"

"Yes. Just made out of common white wax like them is. But I declare, you'd most think they was growin'. You'd ought to have seen her fuschias. They was just as natural! One time she sprinkled some o' th' leaves with cologne, so's you could smell 'em, too."

The girls gave little staccato shrieks at this ingenuity. "Where is she now?" asked Delia.

"Oh, she's married. She was old Squire Gibbons's daughter. They lived nex' door there, where th' Lockwoods is now. My! we used t' set up till all hours o' night a-workin' together. Sev'ral times t'was broad daylight before we closed our eyes."

Again the two cried out together.

"But she got married," continued Miss Cynthia, mournfully, "an' moved off int' York state. I've often wondered ef she kep' up her wax flowers. Seems if she'd ought to."

"Yes, indeed," said Delia.

After the friends had gone away and Miss Cynthia sat down again by the fire she fell to thinking of Sarah Gibbons; not, as usual, with a questioning interest, but with a fluttering feeling of tenderness that was almost painful in its intensity. The talk, and the sight of the two inseparable companions, brought back memories of her own girl friend, and all the confidences, plans, and pleasures of years ago; most of all, of their absorption in the art.

"She's got some one t' take care o' her," mused Miss Cynthia, an' a lot o' little children. An' here I be, settin' by my fire, all alone. It mus' be pleasant t' have a baby what belongs t' ye. I wonder how it would seem?"

The cat mewed. "Yes, kitty, yes; I s'pose it's dinner time." She glanced at the clock. "I've wasted th' hull mornin'. I don't believe I'll wait t' cook a reg'lar dinner. I'll just have some pie, 'n a cup o' tea, an' git supper a little early with somethin' hot."

Before she went to bed Miss Cynthia wrote to Sarah Gibbons. She asked about the children and waxed almost sentimental over a namesake of her own. An answer came after Miss Cynthia had given up all idea of hearing, and had recovered her usual poise of mind so that she felt ashamed of the burst of affection. Mrs. Duncan wrote kindly. She said that she had been hindered from writing before, but that Cynthia's letter brought back old times, and made her real homesick. "I'd like to see you first-rate," she wrote, in the small and delicate characters taught forty years ago. "Why can't you come out and make us a visit. He would admire to meet you, and I guess the children would not quite pull you to pieces."

Miss Cynthia let the letter fall into her lap. "I'd like t' go," she said to herself. "It 'u'd seem queer t' shut up th' house, an' I s'pose I couldn't sleep in a strange bed. But I'd like t' go."

Her arrangements were soon made. The cat, the canary and the goldfish were committed to the care of Lucinda Lockwood, whose oldest son, according to the terms of the bargain, was to go all over the house each day "on account of the insurance."

"I may be gone two weeks she announced to the neighbors who flocked in to say good-bye; "but likely it won't be more'n one. I ain't uset t' bein' away from home."

"It'll seem awful queer here, without you," some one remarked. "We won't have no place t' run in."

"No," Lucinda Lockwood added; "an' I shell miss th' smoke out o' th' kitchen chimbly. I always feel 's if I mus' look over every mornin' t' make sure Miss Cynthy ain't died in th' night."

Miss Cynthia's heart glowed at these tokens of good will. It was not the first time since her mother's death left her alone that she had vaguely understood what she could not express,—that the village folk encompassed her and cared for her. Then, too, having no men folks to do for made her lax as to meal hours, and ready in emergencies. Every one was free to run in at all times, and apt to call upon her for any sudden pleasuring or any dire need. It all was very sweet and dear to her, now that she was about to turn her back upon it.

Mrs. Duncan's boy, Addison, met her at the station,—a rosy, bashful fellow, mid-way in his teens. He took the company's numerous parcels, and she found it pleasant to be thus waited on.

"Your ma mus' take a sight o' comfort," she observed, walking up the snowy street, "in havin' someun t' fetch 'n' carry for 'er. I wisht I had a grown-up son."

"I do' know," said the boy, grinning shamefacedly; "mebby, if ye had t' mend my clo'es, you wouldn't. You ought t' see my stockins; I go through 'em like that." He slid one hand across the other to express great speed. "Ma'd 'a' come out herself," he went on, "but Benny had an earache 'n' cried."

"Earache? Oh, my! That's dretful. Can't ye do nothin' for it?"

The boy stared at her. "I guess ye'd think they done somethin' for it if ye'd heard 'em up las' night. Ma never slep' a wink after 2 o'clock."

Miss Cynthia made a sound of sympathy by clicking her tongue against her teeth.

"He will play in the snow," said the elder brother, disapprovingly, "an' then he gits th' earache. There's ma now, an' th' kids, in th' window."

There was a prodigious amount of giggling, and ducking, and waving of hands. Miss Cynthia was quite bewildered, and altogether delighted by it.

"How she has fell off!" was the unspoken comment upon her old friend's appearance; and—though that she could not know,—these were the very words that Sarah was saying to herself. The one had grown prim and precise, and dressed in the quaint style of her youth. The other wore the air of one who knew the world, but her hair was roughened by little fingers. Her face was worn and thin; and the baby-blanket pinned across her shoulders gave her almost an invalid air. The five children were a sheer delight to the eye; apple-cheeked and yellow-haired. Miss Cynthia kissed one after another, though they pulled away and pounded at her with their small fists.

"They's nothin' like young folks, is they?" she said, wistfully.

"No, indeed, they ain't!" Mrs. Duncan gave the baby a quick hug. "A house don't amount t' much;—Lizzie, if I see ye lay a finger on your little brother again—"

The trio who were scuffling and shoving off in the corner tumbled to the floor in a confused heap. It took Addison and his mother both to disentangle and shake them out properly. Miss Cynthia remarked upon the big boy's general goodness after he had left the room.

"He is good," assented the mother, fondly. "He's real good;—Benny, leave that cushion be. He ain't over quick at learnin', Addy ain't; an' him an' me'd like t' have him quit school; he's goin' on seventeen. But Samyell is all for havin' him graduate. It frets me—Lizzie, stop, I tell ye—th' continual time. He's got a cough, for all he looks so rugged. He'd be a good deal—hush, baby; hush, baby; ma's right here—a good deal better off in th' store, long 'th his grandpa. It stan's to reason that settin' all day is bad for 'im."

"Then I wouldn't have it," expostulated Miss Cynthia, much alarmed. "I'd put him in th' store."

"His pa won't see it that way," Mrs. Duncan frowned worriedly. "An' I know just how it'll be. Gran'pa'll take Jane's boy in. An' he'll go right in. An' he'll go right on—Children, keep still; ye can't hear a body think!—an' by an' bye he'll have th' business. An' Addy named for th' ole man, too!"

Her visitor looked properly sympathetic.

"Samyell's as good as gold," proclaimed the loyal wife: "but if I do say it myself, that oughtn't t' say it, he's awful set. You can't budge 'im!"

She went off presently, to see about supper. "Ive got a girl in th' kitchen," she explained, "that ye can't trust t' put a potato on t' boil." And standing in the doorway soothing the baby and scolding the children, she entered upon a long disquisition, having for its theme the evil ways of maids and woes of mistresses. When, at length, Miss Cynthia was left to herself, she looked around her chair back at her tittering, blushing companions. "Come see Aunt Cynthy, sonny," she began, ingratiatingly, holding out her hand to Benny.

"You ain't my aunt."

"Don't ye want"—she racked her brains to please them—"t' hear a nice story 'bout a ole hen 'n' her little bits o' chickies?"

There was an instantaneous avalanche of young Duncans. They fell upon her like wolves. Miss Cynthia had never known a tenderer emotion than that which filled her heart as she sat, her namesake on her knee, weaving an old foolish story, with their eager, upturned faces to spur her on. She told it with an elaboration which one used to the ways of children would have avoided. She spoke in a mincing voice and imitated various domestic fowls to the entire satisfaction of her audience. Directly she ceased.

"Tell it again," demanded Benny, pounding on the char arm.

"O, not that one. Shell I tell ye 'bout—"

"Tell it again."

Both little girls puckered up their faces.

"I want t' hear 'bout th' chickabiddy," they said in duet.

Miss Cynthia repeated the tale, with—now that it was too late—an attempt at lopping off superfluous ornamentation. These efforts were speedily detected and checked. Not one silly syllable could be omitted. Then she finished.

"Tell it again," said Benny.

"Once they was an ole hen," began Miss Cynthia in a droning tone.

A shout arrested her. "Ye said ole chickabiddy."

Mrs. Duncan thrust her head in from the dining-room. "Havin' a good time? That's right. Don't wake th' baby. He's just dropped off t' sleep."

When her husband came home to supper, half an hour later, he found their guest surrounded by three impatient infants greedily following the latest repetition of the favorite tale.

"Them young ones won't give ye no peace," he observed gayly, shaking hands with her, "now they've found out you can tell stories They're the greatest hands for stories I ever see."

He smiled as though this was a rare trait. He soon turned his attention to weightier matters.

"Sate," he called, "ain't tea most ready? I've been waitin' here five minutes. I should think, with a girl in th' kitchen, ye could have meals in some kind o' season."

Mrs. Duncan looked much mortified. "In a second, Samyell," she said. "Baby woke, 'n' had to be took up. Is th' biscuits done, Mame? Then come on."

It was a very nice supper, but Miss Cynthia had gone too long without, and had a headache now. I'd 'a' offered ye a cup o' tea when ye first come, Cynthy," said her hostess, "if 'twasn't Mame is so put out if ye go in th' kitchen between meals. She's awful quick-tempered, an' we have t' humor 'er. 'Taint none too easy gettin' a girl for a family the size of ourn."

"We'll have to be lookin' up a beau for Miss Ruggles," announced the gentleman of the house, biting into his cake. "Mustn't have no old maids 'round here."

He was so far from intending an insult that none could be accepted. Yet Miss Cynthia felt that she hated him. She had never been called an old maid, to her face, before.

She hailed the bedtime for the children, who clung close to her till it came. It gave Sarah a little respite, too, and a chance for something more than a half-hearted attention to the information as to whom Lije Buckley married, and what became of the Terwilliger girls. "Samyell," however, had his daily paper to read, and must not be disturbed; so the two women took their basket of stockings into the corner, and conversed in an undertone.

"D'ye ever do wax flowers any more?" Miss Cynthia inquired.

Mrs. Duncan almost spoke aloud in her astonishment. "Land! no. I ain't touched 'em since Addy was born. I don't have no time."

Her old friend regarded her mournfully across the sock she was filling in. "But sech talent as you hed, Sarah!"

Mrs. Duncan laughed rather bitterly. "A married woman ain't no use for talent."

Yet when she took Cynthia in to see her children asleep, their red cheeks pressed into the pillow, fond tears filled her eyes. "It's better'n wax flowers, Cynthia," she said. "I let Benny have that big basket o' fruit you made for me, one day when he had th' mumps. He cried for it."

Miss Cynthia might have sympathized with the first part of the speech, had it not been for its close. No child need have wax fruit because he cried for it.

There was a peremptory kicking on her door before the wintry daylight. There were loud voices that would not be gainsaid, demanding the chickabiddy. Miss Cynthia was a late riser as country people go. She did not relish the early breakfast, "t' git th' children off t' school," nor the horrible bustle and stir in adjusting coats and hunting up mittens and tippets.

Indeed, it seemed to the peaceful, sober spinster that Mrs. Duncan did naught with her days save walk up and down with the baby, brave the quick-tempered Mame, serve meals, and welcome or speed her family. It was a life of incessant hurry and worry. Miss Cynthia gazed aghast upon it. "Samyell" was a good provider, his wife said, and showed himself, in his way, devoted to his home. But he was fault-finding and officious—"a hen hussey" his guest considered him. Each child was a separate care, from Benny, who woke the echoes almost every midnight after playing in the snow, to the baby, already developing a will that fretted his parents constantly.

Mrs. Duncan found a certain comfort in detailing her daily grievances. She had no notion—so immeasurably superior do the married deem their state—what deductions her visitor was drawing, as time went on. It seemed to Miss Cynthia that next Thursday would never come. She felt that she could not, in decency, start home under a week, but how she longed for her sunny little rooms, her cat and canary. They were company, but never cried, nor teased for chickabiddy. They showed affection without interrupting her most exciting narrative to Sarah by incessant questions, or by an inopportune header down the cellar stairs. She wanted to order her own meals, and have pie as often as she chose. "Samyell" didn't believe in pastry, and Sarah had given up making coffee because no one drank it besides herself.

"You mus' come again some time," Mrs. Duncan said, swinging the baby to her shoulder to kiss her friend farewell. "Th' visit's done you good. You look younger 'n' brighter when you came."

Miss Cynthia always resented allusions to her age, but she could not say now that it was the thought of home that made her eyes shine and her cheeks glow.

How sweet it was that evening to seat herself, when the neighbors had gone, before the open fire in the little rocker, her cat upon her knee; to rest, in body and in spirit, from the turmoil and the trials of those long seven days; not to have her nerves shocked by a sudden crash nor her brain fagged by incessant demands.

Once in the night she started up, dreaming that she heard a step upon the stair, and that baby had the croup.

"Land sakes," she thought, as she replaced her tired head on the pillow, "I wouldn't be Sarah Gibbons!"

At that very moment Mrs. Duncan, many miles away, was creeping back to bed after a stealthy visit to Lizzie's crib, to see that she was covered up. She was worn out with a long, hard day; another stretched before her on the morrow. As she softly drew back the quilt, her hand touched the baby's roseleaf palm. Tears came to moisten those weary eyes.

She took the warm little body on her arm. "Land sakes," she reflected as her head sought its pillow, "I wouldn't be Cynthy Ruggles!"—Ruth Hall, in Kate Field's Washington.

The newspapers are now publishing lists of "delicious summer beverages." Strange to say, they omit the favorite cooling and temperance drink of John Phœnix: "Three parts water gruel and two root beer; thicken with a little soft squash, and strain through a cane-bottomed chair."

OBSOLETE WORDS.

The number of obsolete words that are to be found in Webster's Dictionary is considerably larger than people have any idea of. The following letter, written by an alleged poet to an editor, who had treated his poetry with derision, furnishes some idea of them:

"Sir—You have behaved like an impetiginous scrogle! Like those who, envious of any moral celsitude, carry their ungicity to the height of creating symposically the fecund words which my pollymathic genius uses with uberty to abligate the tongues of the weetless. Sir, you have crassly parodied my own pet words as though they were trangrans. I will not coascervate reproaches—I will oduce a veil over the atramental ingratitude which has chamfered even my indiscerptible heart. I am silent on the focillation which my coadjuvancy must have given you when I offered to become your fantor and adminicle. I will not speak of the lippitude, the oblepsy, you have shown in exacerbating me, one whose genius you should have approached with mental discalceation. So I tell you, without supervaneous words, nothing will render ignoscible your conduct to me. I warn you that I would vellicate your nose if I thought that any moral diarthrosis thereby could be performed—if I thought I should not impignorate my reputation. Go! tachygraphic scrogle, band with your crass inquinate fantors; draw oblectations from the thought, if you can, of having synchronically lost the existimation of the greatest poet since Milton!"

And yet all these words are to be found in the dictionary.—Boston Herald.

CURIOSITIES OF MISNAMING.

Arabic figues were not invented by the Arabs, but by the early scholars of India. Cleopatra's Needles were not erected by that queen, neither do they commemorate any event in her history. They were set up by Rameses the Great.

The Jerusalem artichoke has no connection whatever with the holy city of the Jews. It is a species of sunflower, and gets its name from girasole, one of the scientific names of that genus of plants.

The word "pen" means a feather and is from the Latin penna, a wing. Surely the expression "a steel pen" could be improved upon.

Galvanized iron is not galvanized at all, but is coated with zinc by being plunged into a bath of that metal and muriatic acid.

Pompey's Pillar at Alexandria was neither erected by Pompey nor to his memory.

Common table salt is not a salt and has long since been excluded from the class of bodies denominated "salts."

Rice paper is not made from either rice or rice straw, but from a pithy plant called tung-tsua, found in China, Corea, and Japan.

Brazil grass never comes from nor grows in Brazil. It is strips from a species of Cuban palm.—St. Louis Republic.

BURNS KNEW BETTER.

It was the fate of a practical and patriotic Scotchman of Rochester to assist at a meeting of a certain improvement society, the while a Shakespearean scholar dilated upon the virtues of his favorite writer. At the close of the meeting the stranger approached the lecturer, and the following dialogue ensued:

"Ye think a fine lot o' Shakespeare, doctor?"

"I do, sir," was the emphatic reply.

"An ye think he was mair clever than Rabbi Burns?"

"Why, ther's no comparison between them."

"Maybe no, but ye tell us the nicht it was Shakespeare who wtote Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown.' Now, Rabbi would never hae written sic nonsense as that."

"Nonsense, sir?" thundered the indignant doctor.

"Aye, just nonsense. Rabbi would hae kent fine that a king, or a queen either, disna gang to bed wi' the croon on their head. They h

The Rogers Osgood Hat Company.

The organization of the Rogers Osgood Hat Company has been completed, with a capital stock of $20,000 and the following officers: President, J. Andrew Rogers; vice president, W. H. Osgood; superintendent, Jesse A. Rogers; clerk and treasurer, Chas. B. Fiske; directors, J. Andrew Rogers, W. H. Osgood, Jesse A. Rogers, J. B. Shaw, and G. H. Wilkins. The company has bought the Goddard hat shop on Commercial street, and expects within a few days to begin moving from Barre the machinery, etc., in the Rogers & Osgood shop at that place. The Goddard shop has had a thorough overhauling. Repairs have been made on the brick building. The storehouse has been clapboarded and four work-rooms have been finished off inside. The bleachery building has been repaired and a new roof put on. A new box shop, 20 by 40 feet, two stories, is to be built below the brick building, and is to be connected with it by a bridge. The firm is at present working on samples for the fall trade at their factory in Barre. By making three grades of goods the company is enabled to get in a full season's work without any waits. They commence in the early fall with what is called the harvest work; this lasts until the season for the fine men's goods commences, about January 1st. After this slackens up in the spring ladies' goods are made, thus completing the season. The firm have already engaged for the selling of the output for the coming year.

Repairs on the Reservoir.

The Palmer Water Co. has been making repairs upon its reservoir this week. It was expected that last week Wednesday the work of making the new connections between the lower reservoir and the street mains could be done, but owing to delays in getting some of the materials the change was not made until this week Tuesday, when the water was shut off from about nine in the morning until half-past five in the afternoon. A pipe is also being laid that will allow the waters from the upper reservoir to be let directly into the street mains instead of having to be taken from the lower one as heretofore. The upper reservoir has been emptied, and all the mud and like impurities are being removed from the bottom. After this is done the water from the upper reservoir will be used and the lower one cleaned out in a like manner.

A bill in equity has been filed with the court at Springfield by Epaphro A. Day of Hampden against George H. Newton of Monson and William H. Brainerd of Palmer, praying for an injunction restraining them from selling a certain piece of real estate advertised to be sold at Palmer July 20, at 10 a. m.

Owing to the rain of Wednesday evening the lawn party of the Baptist society, which was to be held on the grounds of J. H. Shaw on South Main street, had to be held indoors. There were about 40 or 50 present, and these passed a very enjoyable evening. Enough money was taken from the sale of ice cream to pay expenses. An entertainment, consisting of singing, recitations, etc., was given.

At the meeting of the A. O. U. W. at Three Rivers Tuesday evening papers were circulated for names of those interested in forming a lodge of the Degree of Honor, which is an organization for wives, sisters and members of the A. O. U. W. Quite a number of names were secured and it is probable that a charter will be applied for. Refreshments were served by Caterer Barr of Springfield. A number from this village attended.

The Palmer base ball nine defeated the Gilbertvilles on the agricultural grounds last Saturday, 26 to 2. To-morrow they play the Wares. The latter club is the only one that has beaten the present Palmer team and a good game may be expected. Lombard, who was to catch for the Palmers, was called away yesterday by the death of his father, and will be unable to play. Ash will pitch for the home team, and Sugrue and Longtine will catch.

District Deputy Smith of Warren installed the following officers of Palmer Lodge, No. 190, I. O. O. F., last Friday evening: N. G., G. H. Magrath; V. G., C. A. Royce; W., J. V. Clark; conductor, E. G., W. H. Osborne. A collation was served after the exercises.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening Miss Young read an essay on the clovers and exhibited specimens of all but two or three of the species found around here. Miss Flora Studley read an interesting essay on the wild roses. Several members of the society took a field day yesterday afternoon for the purpose of identifying the trees of the town. The subject of the meeting next week will be the composite family, with an essay by Harry Sisk.

The giant century plant, now in full bloom at the agricultural college at Amherst, is attracting the attention of local admirers of plants and flowers. This is probably the largest plant of the kind growing under glass in this country. The plant has been grown on a mound of especially prepared soil 15 by 15 feet at the base and 8 by 8 feet at the top, 5 feet high. It is estimated to weigh 2000 pounds and has a flower stock 18 feet high with a panicle of over 3000 buds and flowers. The plant will remain in bloom several weeks.

Two of our townsmen are just at present involved in a slight difficulty as to the possession of a dog. It seems that one of the parties went out of town and on his return was followed by the dog in question. He claims to then have advertised for the owner. The other party by some means got the dog and took it home. Party No. 1 tried to get a warrant to arrest party No. 2 for taking the dog but did not obtain it. The other party also has taken legal advice in the matter. Neither can obtain any legal claim on the dog and it goes from one to the other every time it appears on the street, party No. 2 now having possession of it.

The postal clerks of the Boston and Albany and Boston, Springfield and New York railroad post offices played a game of ball on the agricultural grounds yesterday afternoon. The victory was in favor of the Boston and New York boys, 26 to 10. The winners were assisted by some of the Palmer boys, as all their number did not come. The Boston and Albany boys had a "hoodoo" in the shape of James Sharkey of Chatham, N. Y., who was attired in a calico coat and clown's hat and rode around the bases on a donkey to spoil the luck of the opposing side. The score seems to indicate that he proved a "hoodoo" for his own side. A supper was served at the Converse House after the game. The B. and A. boys have challenged the victors to another game in the near future.

District Court.

Lewis L. Clark was up Saturday on the charge of illegal transportation of liquors. He was arrested Friday night in charge of a load of beer which it is claimed was being taken to Monson. The case was continued until to-morrow. A return of the seizure warrant issued against the above liquors was made, and the case will be tried the first Monday in August. Tuesday morning John O'Brien of East Brookfield paid a fine of $4 for having been drunk. The charge of cruelty to a horse against Charles Mumford of Monson, which was continued from July 5th, was placed on file, as Agent Anderson was satisfied there was no intentional cruelty in the using of the horse.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor is debating the question whether it will continue its society under that name or change it to the Epworth League. There is only a slight difference in conditions of membership.

The lawn party that was to have been given by the Y. P. S. C. E. at C. E. Ryther's Wednesday evening was rather dampened by the rain. Those who attended adjourned to the house and felt well repaid for coming, and an enjoyable time was had.

The local ball team went to Ware last Saturday and played a tie game, 6 to 6, or at least that was the score when the game stopped. In the ninth inning, with no one out, a wild throw by the Wares allowed the Bondsvilles to score two runs, and as the umpire refused to call them out the Ware team kicked and would play no more. The Bondsvilles then challenged them to play a game at Palmer for $100, but they would not accept. The boys complain of the treatment they received at the hands of the Wares. They play the West Warrens to-morrow on the home grounds. Game called at 3.30.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Clara Green is expected to return from Boston about the 20th.

Mrs. Curtis of New Haven, en route to her home in Providence, R. I., stopped with Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Lavene a few days this week.

Miss Minnie Willis of Minneapolis, Minn., is the guest of her brother, Herbert Willis, and intends to spend the summer in this locality.

Frank Tarbox, formerly second hand of the spinning-room in the mill, has accepted a position as overseer for the Otis Company at Ware.

Miss Clara Hurlburt of Somers, Ct., Miss Celia Hyde and Mrs. E. Aldrich and daughter, Miss Florence, of Ware, visited E. Aldrich the latter part of last week.

Miss Nettie Tricket cut her hand quiet badly with a pocket knife last Tuesday. The wound proved serious enough, after examination by Dr. Bliss, to require six stitches.

Rev. Mr. Ufford of Hingham preached in the Baptist church last Sunday. Mr. Ufford is the author of the hymn "Throw out the life line." Rev. Mr. Townsend of Brighton, Vt., is expected to occupy the pulpit next Sunday.

Yesterday evening three local admirers of horseflesh enjoyed a free-for-all race on the park at Palmer. The owners of the horses were Joseph Belanger, Arthur Grise and Mr. Fleury. Three heats were trotted, two of which were won by Mr. Grise and one by Mr. Fleury. It seems that Belanger's horse, although the favorite before the race, was "not in it," but he is not discouraged, as he intends to try it again when his horse is better prepared to race.

The A. O. U. W. held a social meeting in the rooms over the company's office Tuesday evening, the principal object being to make arrangements for forming an honorary branch of the order for the admission of ladies, which is to be auxiliary to the organization. About 80 persons were present, including several from out of town. Music was furnished by local talent, consisting of Mr. Barbour violinist, Martin Leonard piccoloist, and N. M. Hinman banjoist. There were also recitations, and Mrs. Louis Hodgerny delighted the audience by her readings, after which a sumptuous collation, furnished by Caterer Barr of Springfield and served by the members of the order and their wives, was partaken of. Speeches were next in order, and Horace Paine being toastmaster, called on G. W. Pattison of Springfield, district deputy, to explain the character of the proposed association, who lucidly expressed its merits in other sections of New England. Mr. Hitchcock of Palmer, F. A. Upham and W. G. Twogood also responded suitably to the toastmaster's call, and finally a petition was passed around, to which 26 subscribed as favorable to the institution. The charter is to cost $25 and will be obtained as early as possible, when a name is to be adopted for the degree and other requisites settled. After some gospel hymns had been sung by the company and the largest hour of the night announced, every one left for their respective homes, feeling thoroughly satisfied with the evening's entertainment.

The home team will play a return game at West Warren to-morrow afternoon, and a good delegation from this place will accompany them.

A word in time perhaps would save the town many dollars. This will apply to the condition of the sidewalks on the long bridge near the No. 1 mill, which is greatly in need of repairs. The attention of the town fathers is called to this a second time, as some one may fall into the river below and bring suit for damages against the town.

Officer Griffin and Mr. Russell were given quite a chase Thursday afternoon after a man who had hired a team of Mr. Russell at Three Rivers and was overdriving it. Mr. Russell was sent for to come and take his team, which he did, and afterward secured Officer Griffin to arrest the man, but he escaped.

Mr. Miller, the coal and wood dealer, is to introduce a new machine in the shape of a cutter and binder of grain, and will operate one of them to-morrow in the field of the Thorndike Co. As this is the first machine of its kind that has been introduced in the state, Mr. Miller, who is to act as agent for them, invites those interested to be present and see it in operation. The machine is known as the "New Osborn," and is manufactured by D. W. Osborn of Auburn, N. Y.

The Columbian Band Fair.

The Columbian band at their meeting on Thursday evening voted to hold a fair in Union hall some time in September. The following committee was appointed to make arrangements: J. F. Luman, Charles Clark, Daniel Broshnan, E. B. Williams, Dennis F. Sullivan, Thomas Ronan, Joseph Caito, John Bedford. The generous public will be called upon to give articles, etc., and the ladies especially are invited to donate articles in the line of fancy work, which may be left with any of the above named committee. The members will do all in their power to entertain those who may attend, and will give a change of bill each evening, which will include dancing, vocal and instrumental music, etc. The band has worked hard during the past six months, giving their time and money to entertain the public, and the people will be called upon to do their share in making the affair a success. The proceeds will be used to defray the now on the instruments, and to procure new uniforms for the members of the band.

The cold storage warehouse at the World's Fair grounds at Chicago was burned Monday afternoon and elevan firemen fell victims to the fire, which for a time threatened the destruction of the entire White City. The building contained a skating-rink and the exhibits of the Hercules iron works and ice and refrigerating machine manufacturers It was 250 feet long by 150 wide, and was constructed entirely of wood, covered over with staff. The main body of the building was five stories high. In the center of this rose the smoke-stack in the shape of a cupola, to the top of which was almost 200 feet. The base of this cupola was about 30 feet square. About 80 feet from the base of this cupola there was a balcony, from which another square tower rose, culminating in the mouth of the smoke-stack. In the interior of this tower and around the smoke-stack were the wooden beams and frame work on which the staff covering was laid. It was at this point of the cupola that the fire was discovered. Fifteen bodies have already been recovered, but it probably never will be known how many persons perished in the terrible fire, It is certain that the firemen are not the only ones who lost their lives.

The large barn of the Baeder, Adamson Co., glue manufacturers at Woburn, was destroyed by fire early Monday morning with all its contents. Nineteen horses and one cow perished. Loss $9000; cause probably incendiary.

Considerable excitement was caused Saturday by the disappearance of Howard Gath, the four-years-old son of Mrs. W. H. Gath. Mrs. Gath, with her children, was spending the day at Mrs. Boulter's on Moulton Hill, where the little fellow strayed off on his own accord. His mother soon noticed his absence, but supposing him to be with his brother she did not think anything of it till the latter returned alone and said that he had not seen him. Mrs. Gath was very much frightened and a search was instituted at once, in which nearly all of the neighborhood took part. Almost every conceivable place where a child could hide was searched, but he could not be found. In the meantime a terrible thunder storm had came up, making the situation still more uncomfortable. At last Mrs. Boulter discovered some small footprints in the sand and began to follow them. After going about four miles she found the little fellow, none the worse for the adventure, though considerably drenched from the rain. He had been gone about four hours.

WEST WARREN.

Mrs. Rufus Baker has returned from a visit to Palmer.

Chester A. Bemis is spending the summer with his aunt on the Alec Bemis farm.

The house occupied by Columbus Reed and Miss S. G. Bond was struck by lightning Wednesday evening. Miss Bond and Harry Reed were somewhat shocked. Not much damage was done to the house.

Alfred Lombard, well known in this place, was found dead beside the railroad between Brookfield and East Brookfield Wednesday morning. An early freight train noticed the body, and found that he had been dead some time. He was on his way home, as he expected to go to work in Warren. There were two bruises one on his hip and another on the head.

Miss Mabelle F. Gates has returned from Montreal where she has been attending the Y. P. S. C. E. convention as delegate from the North Wilbraham society, and reports a very good time.

The employes of the Cutler Co. received a dividend on last pay day averaging 6½ per cent for the first six months of the present year. This speaks volumes for this enterprising company.

Miss Lola B. Andrews received a pleasant surprise Tuesday evening. A party of about twenty-five young people gathered at her home for the purpose of giving her a happy send-off and wishing her bon voyage, as she intends spending a couple of months at Cassadaga Lake, N. Y., and also visiting friends and relatives at Toledo O., and a few other places. Her mother, Mrs. O. F. Andrews, accompanies her on the trip.

The so-called "No-Good-Democrats" in town are very jubilant over the inactivity displayed by those who term themselves "Straight Democrats" as regards the removal of the post office. If the new appointee has received his commission as postmaster it is surprising he does not take possession immediately. However, the patrons are well satisfied with the present postmaster and the manner in which the office is conducted, and no reason is at present shown why he should not be retained.

HAMPDEN.

Lyman Smith is having a piazza put on his house.

Sullivan Staunton, one of our oldest citizens, is lying at the point of death, the result of a slight shock Sunday night. His advanced age and previous feeble condition give little hopes of his recovery.

This quiet town has suddenly become famous by having within its limits a person whose invention will no doubt attract world-wide attention. D. O. Pease has, after eight years of study and experiment, perfected a machine for the continuous spinning of woolen yarn. Mr. Pease has kept the nature of his invention a profound secret, until patents covering the processes involved have finally been secured and the machine is about to be put on the market. The new device does away with the old process of alternate spinning and winding by spindle, and substitutes the ring principle, which has long been used for cotton but has not before been successfully applied to wool. The inventor claims for his machine increased and more perfect production, with saving of power, floor space and cost of labor. Several large manufacturers have examined the product of Mr. Pease's machine, and they do not hesitate to commend the invention as a great advance in wool spinning. It is in fact the most decided advance in woolen manufacturing of recent years, and bids fair to completely revolutionize the whole present system of wool spinning. One of the largest manufacturers of fine goods in the country claims that it will cause a saving from 50 to 75 per cent in the cost of his spinning.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Dr. G. Howard Jones, of Boston, says that Ayer's Hygienic Coffee will fill a long felt want to persons who cannot use coffee on account of the effect it produces on the liver. Robinson & Tayler sell it.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Ayer's Pills promptly remove the causes of sick and nervous headaches. These Pills speedily correct irregularities of the stomach, liver, and bowels, and are the mildest and most reliable cathartic in use. No one should be without them.

"Be sure you get Ayer's" is an important caution to all in search of a thoroughly-reliable blood-purifier, Ayer's Sarsaparilla being the one on which there can be no manner of doubt. It has stood the test of nearly half a century, and has long been considered the standard.

Honest.

In these days of adulteration and fraud, in all branches of business and pursuits, it is pleasing to know that there is one medicine prepared which is strictly pure. Such a medicine is Sulphur Bitters in curing scrofula; you can depend on them every time. W. B. EVERTS, A. M., Charleston, S. C.

It is Useless.

for young ladies who are troubled with freckles, pimples, moth and tan and a bad skin generally to use liquid paints or dry powders, for they only make the skin look well for the time being. To have a good complexion you must have pure blood. Use Sulphur Bitters and your skin will be far and complexion rosy.—Young Ladies' Magazine.

Chicago, Denver and Cincinnati Physicians fail to Help Mrs. Willey.

[From the Cincinnati (O.) Post.]

To the Editor:—I believe that I can help the sick and suffering by giving them the benefit of my experience.

For years I have suffered from rheumatism, complicated with neuralgia and severe headaches, and at regular intervals with the illness peculiar to my sex, at times almost crazy with pains in my head and body. I have employed physicians in Denver, Chicago, here and other cities who have given me but temporary relief.

Some time ago I began the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it has done me more good than all the doctors put together. I am better now than I have been for years, and my neighbors will vouch for the great improvement Favorite Remedy has made in me. I have recommended Favorite Remedy to many of my friends and it has in every case helped them.

Having found a medicine that has demonstrated its power to benefit and cure in such a complicated case as my own, I feel it a duty to make it known publicly so that the many suffering ones of this city can avail themselves of it.

Mrs. A. Willey, Cincinnati, O.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has certainly made many wonderful cures in cases where the skill and methods of other physicians have been baffled. Dr. Kennedy has prescribed Favorite Remedy and it has produced permanent recovery in rheumatism, dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaints which always arise from acidity of the blood.

At the Mnsicale.

Last night my daughter tuk me out to hear a feller play
Upon a fancy fiddle in a highfalutin' way;
He tucked his fiddle 'gin his neck and sawed her forth and back,
But allers seemed to lose his heau and badly fly the track.
Says I to Sue, "With all them breaks he'll never reach the pole."
"W'y, pa," says she, "he's given us the longin's uv a soul—
A worn and weary doubt-racked soul that knows not where to turn,
An' is yearnin' for the Infinite with a deep an' mighty yearn."
"I s'pose," says I, "that's what it is, becuz you say it is;
It sounds a heap to me more like a man with roomattiz,
Who's howlin' fer the mustard and a cussin' of his wife.
And a-beggin' fer the doctor to come and end his life."
"W'y, paw," says Sue, "I do believe you never had to feel
That cruel fate was crushin' you beneath its iron heel.
Nor that yernin' of the Ergo (I think that was the word)
To shout against the universe and make itself be heard."
"No," says I, "I never did, ner likely never will,
Not while there's bitters to be had, er quinine, er a pill.
I guess I'll never feel the way that feller's fiddle squeals
As long as I kin have my sleep and buck agin my meals.
Besides," says I, "what is the use of fiddlin' like that?
Of a yearnin' and a-moanin' and a acting like a flat?
The fiddlin' 'at I used to hear, long 'fore you larnt to walk
Was did by men that knowed just how to make a fiddle talk.
The fiddles that I used to hear was not so full of pain
And looney yearns and all such truck; I guess not, Mary Jane!
The men that fiddled in my day, they wa'an't no yearnin' spoons,
And they seemed to have a notion that they orter give us tunes;
The like of 'Turkey in the Straw,' and 'Comin' Thro' the Rye,"
And the "Dyin' Californian', though that allers made me cry.
But I s'pose this yearnin' business is another fancy fad,
Jist like them "impression pictures' that you sprung upon your dad;
But when I hear a fiddler, I don't want no 'soulful squawk,
I want a man that knows the way to make the old thing talk."

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

They talk about a woman's sphere
As though it had a limit;
There's not a place in earth or heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whisper yes or no,
There's not a life, or death, or birth
That has a feather's-weight of worth,
Without a woman in it.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, Middletown, Ohio.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

THE FARMER'S ALLIANCE.

Amanda Johnson was an orphan school teacher who had traveled many weary miles to take up a land claim.

Hiram Goodson was an ambitious young man who had gone west against the advice of his people, to seek his fortune. They said he would be glad to get back to the old farm inside of a year.

He sat in the shadow of his grazing team and glanced with scowling visage across a quarter section of land toward an emigrant wagon like his own.

"I'd like to know how long that woman is going to hold out over there. I don't propose to be beaten out of this section. Not if I know it."

Amanda Johnson shaded her eyes with her hand and peered anxiously across the land to the man behind the wagon.

"'Tis a man and he's alone. It's too bad; I know I reached here first. We won't be driven away this time, will we, Watch?"

The dog followed her eyes and growled savagely at the objects in the distance.

Two days passed and the white tops of the two wagons shown from opposite sides of the section.

Amanda Johnson had improved the time by spading a small patch of ground for a garden. Hiram Goodson had gnawed his moustache and clinched his fist at his foe in the distance.

"Confound that woman! I'll have to go over and argue the point with her, though one might as well try to influence a stump as a determined woman."

She saw him coming and held on to the dog's collar while the man came forward.

"He's a good-looking young fellow, isn't he, Watch? but I reckon he's mad by the way he digs his feet into the ground."

The man was slightly embarrassed at the pair of handsome eyes that steadfastly met his own; and the smile that played about her dimpled cheek and chin seemed defying him.

"Good morning, Miss; I thought I would come over and see why it is you stay on my claim so long. You must know I reached here first."

"I think you are mistaken, sir," she said firmly. "There wasn't a soul on here as I could see when I came."

"Come, now," he replied, "I have been driven away from half a dozen sections because I wouldn't stand out against a woman; but I find it don't pay."

"That is my position," she said. "I have given up several good places to men with families; but a single man can easily find another place, while he ought to give a woman a chance."

"This is not a question of sex, Miss, but a clear case of justice. We all had the same chance. I can swear I drove on this section first. I am sorry for you, but I am afraid you will have to go."

"So can I assert I came here first, and furthermore, I think I shall stay. Won't we, Watch?" she replied with aggravating positiveness, caressing the dog.

The young man flushed angrily and turned on his heel, muttering something about he guessed he could stay as long as she could.

Watch would have gladly followed and extracted a meal from the man's nether protection, but his fair mistress held him back.

"Don't touch him unless he tries to put us off and then we will see who is master."

After Hiram Goodson had reached some distance he could not resist the temptation to turn and look at his fair adversary.

"Hold the Fort," came musically floating to his ear, while she had taken a spade and was working in her garden.

His anger melted in spite of himself, and if she could have seen the expression of his face just then she would have been puzzled as its meaning.

"I guess I've found my match for once," he said thoughtfully, "and how am I going to get rid of her. If she would only leave her things long enough I might manage it."

"Hello! sir," said a man driving by his place the next day. "Did you know that there was a woman squatter on your section over there? or are you trying to drive a poor woman out of her rights?" he added menacingly.

"No, sir. I reached this section first and she won't go."

"Make her, if the land is yours. Watch your opportunity and shove her things off."

"That's what I've been waiting for, but she don't leave long enough and keeps a big dog to guard her things."

"Why don't you put up your shanty and let her know you have first right?"

"I don't care to go away long enough to get the lumber. You see, she might come over here and take full possession."

"Well, you'll have to do something soon, for the officers are expected around to see that every one has their rights."

"I believe I'll go over again," said Hiram Goodson the next morning, "and see what the prospect is about her leaving. 'Tis getting mighty lonesome here, anyway, and I want some one to talk with." Before going, however, he arranged his toilet by brushing his hat and putting on a bright new tie.

She saw him coming and disappeared into the wagon to appear in a minute with a fresh white apron on, tied coquettishly in the back.

"I wonder what he wants now?" she thought. "Maybe he has made up his mind to go and leave me in peace."

"Good-day, Miss," said he, as he came forward smilingly. "Why don't you put up a shanty?" he began, by way of opening the conversation.

"So you can shove my things off the land when I'm away after lumber?" she questioned archly.

He changed countenance. "Do you know the officers are expected around to see that every one has their rights?"

This is not what he intended to say but it took effect.

She was truly alarmed. How could she prove she came there first, while he could easily get some one to assent his claim. She thought of the man who stopped at his place, and their looks and gestures towards her wagon plainly told about whom they were talking.

He saw a vantage in her anxiety though he really thought she stood the best chance for the land. He knew the officers would favor a good-looking and determined young woman.

"I'll tell you what," he hastened to say, "I don't like to drive a woman away from her land, and I don't want to go myself, as the other claims are taken before this. Suppose we effect a compromise?"

"Yes," she said, despondently. "We might divide the land if they would let us. Eighty acres is better than none at all."

"I have thought of a better way than that," he said, twirling his hat on his thumb.

She looked at him wonderingly, and he continued, "We could unite our interests and our cabins and put it on that rise of ground over there. I would work the farm and you could be my housekeeper."

"What do you mean?" she said freezingly, her face growing white and her fingers loosening on the dog's collar.

"I mean," said he, as he looked at the dog in alarm, "to get married and have the land made over to both us."

"Oh," she drew a breath of relief. The crimson came back to her cheek and a slight curl to her lip. "Well, I hadn't thought.

"Who are you, anyway?" she asked, looking him over critically.

"I'm sure," he retorted, with pride, "if you can show as good a record as I can, I don't think you need hesitate to unite your interests with mine."

"How could you manage it?" she said, more softly.

"I thought if we came to an agreeable understanding, you could go after a minister to tie the knot, while I stayed and watched the things."

"You must know, it is a man's place to engage the minister," said she pertly.

"But this is an exceptional case," he replied. "Some jumpers might come while I was away."

"Watch and I are perfectly capable of taking care of the land. How do I know but that is a trick to get rid of me. If you wish to marry me you must go after the minister."

"Well, if you can't trust me to stay and watch the things I can't trust you to stay," he said doggedly. "How do I know what might happen when I was away? The officers might come to make out the contract."

"If we cant trust each other before we are married we certainly can't afterwards," she replied with equal mistrustfulness.

While they were discussidg the vexed problem a man was seen driving by with a load of lumber.

The man seeing their shanty was not up and supposing them to be man and wife, hailed them to see if he could not get their order for some lumber.

They told him their troubles.

"Oh, ye ain't mar'id but want ter be?" he said with native good humor and curiosity. "I'm goin' back to teown soon, and if I kin be of any help to ye I'm at your sarvice. If you don't git spliced right away one o' ye'll hev to vacate, for the officers are comin' this way," and he jerked his thumb over his shoulder.

Matters were finally amicably adjusted between the two land contestants and before another day closed the first Farmer's Alliance was organized on the Eureka reservation.

Matrimony was the Alpha and Omega of the contract, and the disputed quarter-section was made over to Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Goodson.—Yankee Blade.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Said the man to the Irish boy: "What are you fishing for?" "Frogs," said the boy. "What do you bait with?" "I bate 'em wid a stick," replied the boy. Frogs and some people's ideas about paints are the same as they were a hundred years ago. The Chilton Paint Co. is trying to convince the public that given the proper materials, mixed and ground by the proper machinery, the result can but be a better paint than it is possible to make by hand. Does it not seem reasonable that where the materials used in making a paint are seven times passed through machinery that does not vary in its action, the mixture is going to be more perfect than where a men or boy stirs them with a stick, adding a little oil, stirring a few times, then a little more lead and color, a few more stirs with the stick, until he gets tired and says he guesses it will do. Think this over. You must see that the man cannot do the work of a machine. We have the latest and best paint machinery that can be bought.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

Is superior to all other preparations claiming to be blood purifiers. First of all, because the principal ingredient used in it is the extract of genuine HONDURAS sarsaparilla root, the variety richest in medicinal properties. Also, because the yellow dock, being raised expressly for the Company, is always fresh and of the very best kind. With equal discrimination and care each of the other ingredients are selected and compounded. It is

Round the Camp-Fire.

"All present or accounted for."
Comrade, listen! Hear the voices echo from each far-off year,
Old-time voices answering "Roll call"—gaps of silence—ringing "Here!"
Hush! the sergeant is reporting;—hear the old-time legend run:
"Fit for duty,—sick,—on furlough,—wounded,—dead,"—Hark! "Missing, none!"

Thus, within our hearts the echoes keep the roster name by name;
And the dear old voices answer to the roll-call still the same,
Time and change and death surviving:—still we hear the legend run;
"Fit for duty,—sick,—on furlough,—wounded,—dead,"—but "Missing, none!"

"Missing, none!" though ranks are thinning, though the comrades round us fall,
Memory's hosts remain unbroken, answering each the old Roll-call!
Graven on our hearts the record,—"All accounted for!"—not one
Dear old name dropped or forgotten;—still the legend,—"Missing, none!"

Comrades, when the last man lingers on Time's outposts,—waits alone
For the reveille and roll-call,—let him echo back the tone,
And reporting to headquarters,—battles over, victory won,
Wrap our legend in the colors,—seal the record,—"Missing, none!"

—John Howard Jewett.

THE POULTRY SHOW.

They were two forlorn chickens that landed at the foot of the garden, where the river ran, fast wedged in a cake of ice, with hardly any feathers, and with both feet frozen. Marcia took them in and wrapped their poor claws in oil and wool, and fed them in a basket, and gave them the air on fine days by walking abroad with the basket on her arm, till, as she went by, the neighbors were wont to speak of her as the poultry show.

But Marcia was sublimely indifferent to neighbors, considering that they existed only for the purpose of "borrowing," and being much more fond of dumb animals than of humanity, going about half the time followed by her pets—a bird in her hair, a parrot on her finger, cats purring round her feet and dogs bounding in her path. She heartily agreed with somebody who says a dog is a perpetual baby in the house, never growing up, never telling tales. Of course her brothers and her superior elder sisters, and all her cousins and their confidential friends, thought Marcia's latest fancy was the worst of all. "Those ridiculous chickens!" was becoming a family watchword. But their condition on that cake of ice, as they floated farther and farther away from the barnyard that was home, had rather touched poor Marcia's heart, and she would have given them her own breakfast, and have gone without every day herself, rather than not have fed them. Although the means at home were limited, still they were not so much so that the chickens needed to go unfed; but the fact of Marcia's temper getting fired early in the affair, although she said nothing, determined her to make those chickens pay for what they had; and when, one day, she brought in a dozen great pearly eggs and laid them in triumph on her mother's lap, she felt that she had said a good deal.

But, those eggs bestowed, she allowed her mother no more. Great ideas had entered her head. She came home one day from a long walk with a black Spanish hen in her arms, for which she had contracted a debt to be paid in her Houdan eggs. When, some six weeks afterward, a dozen curious little gallinaceous specimens were running about the yard, Marcia watched them with intense curiosity, and for weeks, if not months, to come, seemed to be holding her breath. Not an egg of her Houdin hens, however, did she allow to be taken for pudding or cake; one basketful of them went to buying a pair of young Brown Leghorns, another basketful was found to have purchasing power equal to securing a pair of white bantams, and then the Houdan hen, whose inclinations had been seriously tampered with, insisted upon raising a family of her own. But Marcia felt very well equipped, and she added only some patience to her stock in trade just then. At four months old her brown Leghorn pullet laid an egg, and on that same day she brought one of her twelve chickens into the house in a rapture—it was a black chicken with a huge white top-knot.

"My fortune's made!" said Marcia. "There are no fowl like these in all this part of the country. It's a black Poland—I read about them in the library book."

"I declare, Marcia," moaned her mother, "I believe you're insane about these miserable birds. You have no time or thought for anything else. And here is all your music gone to waste."

"How many years have I been taking lessons, mamma?"

"How many years? Ever since you were born, I was going to say."

"And I can't play a page without my notes, nor then so that the composer wouldn't run away if he heard me. So what is the use? Now I have found just what I'm fit for. If I only had some sort of carpenter's skill—"

"Well, I should like to know what you want that for in taking care of hens," said Bessie.

"I should think it would be of about as much use as embroidery," said Emily.

"Marcia always was so impracticable!" sighed her mother.

"What is it you want to do, Marcia?" asked Philip—Tom's classmate, who spent half his time at the place.

"Just to make boxes and roosts for my hutches for my hens, so as to keep them wholesome and happy, you know."

"Wholesome and happy!" said her mother.

"Why, yes, mamma," said Bessie. "I should think there was really sense in that, if there is any sense in having the things at all. If their water is clean, they'll drink more, and if everything is to their hen-mind, of course they'll lay more."

"Marcia, I am ashamed of you," said her mother. "I must beg to hear no more such conversation."

"Now, Mrs. Thurston," said Phil, "I'm sure I saw you laughing. And as for me, I'm going to make those boxes for Marcia. I'm just as good a carpenter as Noah."

And so Phil went down the garden with Marcia, and there were days upon days of hammering and sawing and fitting; and Tom was going about full of mischief, and Emily had her sewing under the apple trees near by, and Bessie came down to bring a freshly-baked tart or some hot gingerbread.

"And I'm sure it's just like picnicking," said Marcia. "You ought to be obliged to me for making such a pleasant occasion. And I am awfully sorry that we're almost through." And as she uttered the last sentence, Philip happening to glance down at her in that moment from the ladder where he was standing, her face suddenly flamed up as if a torch had been held before it, and she turned and hid its color over a box of old nails that she and Tom—an age ago that seemed now—had taken at school in exchange for pins, meaning to sell them to the junkman, but diverted from their purpose by one of Mrs. Thurston's methods of persuasion.

"Mamma was always the enemy of enterprise," said Tom when they found the box. "I suppose it's the oil of birch that has kept these nails from getting rusty."

But as soon as Marcia could slip away from all that merry racket she flew down to the foot of the orchard, and cast herself into the deep grass there in the shadow, and cried to break her heart. That one glance in Philip's face, that swift instant, had served to turn the whole earth on a pivot to another issue of life. It had, indeed, held up a torch before her, it had showed her that of which she was unconscious before, and now she knew that she loved Philip Masters, and she knew that he loved Bessie, and the world was one dead blank.

The hens were not fed that night, and nobody carried the eggs in; it was only when the moon set that, her skirts dripping with dew, Marcia stole in herself, with her dogs, and crept away to bed.

It was a long fight that Marcia had with her heart on that September night. She rose early in the morning, and gave the hens into Bridget's charge, looked into her mother's room, and told her she was going to see Aunt Brown; and as that good lady, now that she could no longer whip her children, generally allowed them their way, no objection was made; and Marcia found herself, after a couple of hours, in the arms of her old counselor and friend, to whom, albeit, she never breathed a word of her trouble. A day of Aunt Brown, Marcia used to say, set her up in virtue for half a year, and now she took seven of them. "Seven days' counsel with an old angel ought to make an angel out of me. But nothing will ever do that."

Yet when she went home there was something different in Marcia's face from anything that had ever been there before; and if nobody paid heed enough to observe it, nevertheless the fact that the hoyden girl had vanished, and a grave and active woman had taken her place—a woman who never allowed herself to be still long enough to think. She asked for no more dresses; she never put a ribbon near her; she brushed the kink out of her hair as well as she could, and said to herself that it was of no use for her to try and look anything but a fright, with one eye hunting up the other the way hers was—an allusion to a slight cast in her eye that was not at all unbecoming on the whole; of course nobody would think of falling in love with a Cyclops, and of course nobody could help loving such a rose and lily piece of beauty as Bess. She was sure she thought, she was glad that Bess was happy; but, for all that, she cried sadly about it. Yet after any of these secret crying spells she fought her battle with herself all the more furiously; and although it wrung her heart, she would insist upon talking about Philip, and suffer Bessie to sing his praises on every occasion that offered, in fear and trembling all the while lest voice or face surrendered, and took all his small kindness as a matter of course.

The winter wore away at last, and Marcia might have felt her trouble in their behalf, her self-denial, and the money, or rather the eggs, that she had spent, all repaid in the glossy look of her hens, with their red combs and their nests full of eggs. Those who are in search of anything can always find it, and she had secured, in one way and another, eggs of many of the choicest breeds, the hatchings had all turned out well, and the result was a great flock of some of the finest looking birds in the country, among which a troop of black Polanders went about shaking their full white crests, and hardly able to see out of their eyes. "I'm sure they're fine," said Marcia. "And as I'm never going to marry, and shall have to earn my living in some way, I'll earn it this way." And she then announced that she was going to contribute to the poultry show in the city, and waited for some opposition.

But they had done with opposing Marcia, in the matter of hens, in that house. "They treat me with the silent contempt I deserve," she said, lightly. But she bribed Tom to help her manufacture a set of coops, bribed him with a promise that Bessie should make him a box of cookies to take away with him; for he had begun his study of medicine, while Phil, who thought the learned professions already full, was looking in vain for something to do in which to start himself in life. "Poor fellow!" thought Marcia over and over again, "if he only could get something to do, then the engagement could be announced, and by-and-by they could be married." It seemed as though she herself would be easier when it was all over. But there was no prospect of it, and Phil's outlook was dark enough at present. She meant to ask him, at some favorable time, why he didn't go out to Colorado, and, after he had made a home there, send for Bessie. She fancied that, after all, the best thing for her would be not to be obliged to witness their happiness at last.

But when Marcia had emptied the better part of her hennery into the great poultry show, she felt it necessary to go and look after her interests there, and she sold enough of the common stock at home to pay the expenses of herself and Bessie in the city. Her mother burst into tears with the thought of the vulgar pursuits of her daughters; and they left Emily wiping her mother's tears.

It was a fine thing, that show, as Marcia said, trusting Bessie could make out what she said in the riot of chanticleers, each rivalling his unseen opponent. "Just hear the rumpus those roosters keep up?" she cried. And what with the cackling of the geese, the quacking of the ducks, the gobbling of the turkeys, the clatter of the guinea-fowl, the cooing of the pigeons, and the screams of the peacocks, the rumpus was that of Pandemonium itself. But, except for the unsightly coops, it was rather a beautiful Pandemonium—the hugh Brahmas with their fluff of snowy feathers like so many arctic owls, the jet and shining Creve-cœurs, the silver-spangled Hamburgs fine as silk-clad court ladies, the Cochins with the gloss of dark green enamel on the blackness of their plumes, the superb red Game, the crested, ruffed and bearded Sultans, and the little Bantams more important than the whole. Marcia felt all the glory of a connoisseur and the wealth of a producer, as she moved through the place, and recognized her own, and listened to the clarion calls about her.

She found a seat for Bessie at last, and then went to see the secretary. "Phil will be sure to be here," she said to herself, "so long as he knew Bess was coming. He'll find her, and keep her from being lonely." As she came back with a radiant face after a half hour's interview, she saw that her prophecy was fulfilled—Phil was there sitting by Bessie, their heads close together, their backs toward her. Meaning to be as merry as she could, she started to put her face close down between theirs in order to tell her news, and so it came about that she heard Phil saying: "Ah, if I only had some sort of business, so that I could speak without disgracing myself!"

"Speak any way, Phil," answered Bessie, putting Marcia in mind of Priscilla and John Alden, in spite of herself.

The little hen-woman drew back and waited half a minute before she touched them on the shoulders.

"Come with me, Phil," she said; and she led him down the lower corner of the hall, where, the peacocks having rested from their screaming, it was a trifle less noisy than anywhere else. "I heard what you said, Phil," she contrived to say directly, "and I have a proposition to make to you. See here"—as he turned to her with a stare of utter amazement in his handsome eyes. "Look at this list of premiums—I've taken twenty. And every one of my birds is sold, some at ten and some at fifteen dollars a pair, just as the secretary chose. What do you think of that for wealth?" she cried, gayly. "My receipts and my orders from this poultry show will be only a little less than one thousand dollars. Now, Phil—you're listening?—if you don't feel ashamed of it (and I'm sure you won't, if you really want to marry dear Bessie), I propose to sell out my hen business to you. You can double it; you're a man, add can do twice as well as I could; and you can have, anyway, in spite of accidents, a good income of fifteen hundred or two thousand dollars a year, with everybody buying your rare breeds and coming after your choice eggs, you know. And you can pay me in the course of your life, and you can marry Bess to-morrow."

Then there was silence a moment, while she looked at the gorgeous illumination of the azure on the peacock's breast, and feared that Phil would hear her heart beating.

"Marcia," said he, presently, getting hold of her hand somehow, "you are certainly the most ineffable little goose in this hall. What in the world do you suppose I want to marry Bess for? It's you I am in love with!"—Harper's Bazar.

A DOG AND HIS MONEY.

"Speak for it, Duke, speak, sir."

The old doctor, with a penny in his hand, stood offering it to the great English mastiff, who thudded with his heavy tail and finally answered with a short, sharp bark.

Doctor Brown was well known in the village of Deerfield, where for the last half a century he had not only been the physician but the friend of both young and old.

Duke always accompanied him on his professional visits, and when the doctor went into a house Duke was left outside, sitting erect on the seat, holding the reins between his teeth.

One day a runaway came tearing down the street and the doctor's horse was badly frightened, but Duke managed to hold him until the doctor came out. It was then the penny was offered. "Brave fellow," the doctor said, "you shall have a penny for your faithfulness, and we will drive to the baker's and you shall spend it for a bun."

Duke, who had been taught to carry the mail and hold parcels, took the penny in his mouth and they drove to the bakery.

Upon entering the doctor laid his hand on the counter and said: "Up with your paws, sir." First one paw, then the other went up. Turning to the baker he said: "G.ve this dog a bun," and to Duke, "drop your penny, sir; pay for your bun, sir." Which Duke did after some hesitation. "Now speak," said the doctor, and a sharp bark followed, upon which the dog received his bun.

Going for his bun soon became a part of the daily routine until the very sight of a penny from the doctor's purse made Duke bark with delight and jump about like an excited child. Finally the doctor tried the experiment of sending him alone for a bun, with such success that he rarely went with him after that.

The neighbors became interested and often furnished the penny, which Duke carried as soberly as if it were a large sum he was going to deposit in the bank.

One day the doctor was called out of town, and Duke for the first time in his life was left behind. When luncheon time came there was no penny for the bun. The neighbors seemed occupied in various ways, and Duke vainly appealed to the cook, with wagging tail and bark. Her mind was on the dinner she was preparing and she ordered him out of the way.

Getting no sympathy from any one, he wandered out into the yard and looked up and down for some benevolent person who would understand his wants, but no one was in sight. He stood a moment in deep thought, then walked to a gravel bed at the foot of the grounds and began pawing about among the loose pebbles, as if to unearth a buried bone.

Presently, having found what he searched for, he looked back at the house in a guilty manner and started down the street. Dashing into the shop he put his paws on the counter. Usually he first laid down his penny, but not so this time.

The bun was handed out, Duke seized it, then dropped his money and fairly fled from the shop.

The baker reached out for the penny, gave a start and a low whistle of amazement.

Duke had dropped a smooth, circular, flat pebble about the size of a penny, which he had found in the gravel bed; and, rogue that he was, he knew enough to secure his bun before paying such coin for it.

Never after that could he be persuaded to enter the shop, and the mere sight of a penny made him hang his head with shame.

When I hear people say animals cannot reason, I wonder how they would explain this incident.—New York Press.

FOR HOT SUMMER NIGHTS.

The following is of such real benefit to the many thousands of our sweltering people that I cannot forbear sending it to you, that it may be to your readers what it has already been to the writer:

One night last week, when the mercury had been up to 99 in the shade during the day, we had retired early, feeling that it would be a relief to lay aside every unnecessary garment, yet failed to find the anticipated comfort, and visions of a sleepless night, which meant a sick day to follow, began to float through my troubled brain. This would never do, and a "woman's wits" were set to work for a solution of the difficulty.

"A hot water bag on a cold night is very nice—why not a cold water bag on a hot night be equally as desirable?" was the thought flashed through my mind by some good fairy, and sooner than it takes to write it the water in our little dressing room was running, the bag brought out from its summer quarters, and when the faucet felt cold was filled and placed in the center of the bed between us and lo, a change indeed! The air radiating from that simple rubber bag was delightfully cool, and before ten o'clock both were asleep and knew no more till at two, when the bag was refilled with fresh, cool water, and off again to dreamland, and my companion did not again awake till 7 a. m., delightfully refreshed after the hottest night of the season. For those who are not so fortunate as to possess a rubber bag, one or two large bottles might be used with the same good effect, but care should be taken that they do not come in contact with the person, lest a chill and unpleasant results follow, especially with children. Try it, friends. B.

"That's a fine, solid baby of yours, Newpah," said a friend who was admiring the first baby. "Do you think he's solid?" asked Newpah, rather disconsolately. "It seems to me as if he was all holler."—Detroit Free Press.

"The tornado," said the artist, "is an example of the great force that may be found in a rough draft."—Washington Star.

An Old Song.

[The Song of Solomon, v 2, 5.]

Love, I have wandered a weary way,
A weary way for thee,
The East is wan with the smile of the day—
Open thy door to me!

My hair is wet with the dew of the night
That falls from the cedar tree:
The shadows are dark; but the East is light—
Open thy door to me!

The stones of the road have bruised my feet—
The hours till morn are three—
Thou that hast spikenard precious sweet,
Open thy door to me!

Stay not thy hand upon the lock,
Nor thy fingers on the key.
In the breeze before morn the treetops rock—
Open thy door to me!

My love is the fairest, the only one,
The choice of her house is she—
The height of heaven hath seen the sun—
Open thy door to me!

The holy kiss of my lips and thine
Shall the sun have grace to see?
The hours foregone of the night are nine—
Open thy door to me!

AN ARMY OVERCOAT.

It was a frayed and ragged coat,—a soldier's overcoat,—and it was worn by a frayed and ragged man, whose face showed scars—not of honorable warfare, but of ruin and dissipation. It was the only badge of service about him that commanded respect, and on the strength of that old army overcoat he received many a meal and imbibed many a drink that cost him nothing but a florid account of his valor on the field of battle.

He was drinking now and alone. There were others present, but none who cared to acknowledge the company of the wretched object in the army overcoat, though one of the men had included him when he ordered the drinks, and the tramp had shrunk away with his portion to rid them of his presence.

He had finished his glass, when from out the company a man approached him, an elderly man who limped with a cane. He then throwing open his coat showed on the lapel beneath the badge of the Loyal Legion.

"Are we comrades?" he asked, sternly.

"I—I—I guess so, boss," answered the man, humbly.

"What company were you in?"

"Company —, Second Michigan Cavalry," stammered the tramp.

"It's a lie! You never were in any company. You've no right to wear that army overcoat. You're a fraud and an imposter, and I'll prove it, too."

"You—you can't! Look at the scars," and he held out a trembling hand, seamed with cicatrized wounds.

"Aye, and look at this! a cork leg where there should be one of flesh and blood! I left my own on the battlefield of Shiloh. See the hole in my cheek—there's a bullet in there yet. Now, where were you wounded? Those are not battle scars, and I'll prove it! Off with that coat! You shall not disgrace that uniform another day!"

He took the outcast by the shoulder and shook him as if he had been a rat.

"Easy, easy there," said the man, struggling away from his indignant captor. "You've told your story, comrade,—yes, I'm a comrade, all right,—now let me tell mine. Our luck has been a little different. You touched the tramp on the shoulder, and see. I was in Company — of the Second Michigan Cavalry all right. I fought in the battle of Shiloh, too, and was mentioned for promotion."

"This looks like it," said the other man angrily. "If you were deserving of promotion why didn't you get it?"

"Why didn't I get it? Because I exchanged into Libby Prison for my brother. My gold paid for the privilege, and he went home to his family. He lived in Michigan on the old farm, and when he was well of his wounds he went back to the army and finished with the war. I served his time out and when I was liberated I looked like a scarecrow, and was a wreck from fever and hardship. And I tramped home to the old place to get nursed well and be made over into a new man, and he didn't know me, and set the dog on me for a vagabond. He denied that I was his brother, and fed me outside the door as he would have fed his dog. I got up and went away, I don't know where, but I guess into some hospital. It's a blank, you see, comrade, when it ain't a prize. I heard afterwards he was sorry and was looking for me, but it was too late. I guess he's dead now—I wish I was. I sometimes wish, when I'm very bad, that I'd let him die before I threw away my life for him."

"No, no, don't say that! Don't say that, dear brother Luke, for you are my brother Luke—brother, friend, comrade. Why, I've hunted the world for you just to tell you that it was a dreadful mistake. How could I believe that my handsome brother could have changed like that! Why, Luke, if our mother had been alive she wouldn't have known you."

"Yes, she would; she'd know me now. Is it really you, Joseph? I'm glad you look so prosperous. Don't take it from me—It's all I've got—this army overcoat is the only true friend I've known. It has given me food and lodging when I had neither."

They embraced, holding each other's hands and looking into each other's eyes, after all those dreadful years. Joseph took off his badge of the Loyal Legion and fastened it to the breast of the old army overcoat with a reverent touch.

"I have no right to that badge—I haven't won any battles—I had no chance—that badge isn't mine"—

"You have won a greater battle than any of us. Wear this till you have one of your own. You have been a wanderer thirty years, but now you've come home. Brace up, brother, your luck has changed."

"He often gets those fits," said one of the habitues of the place, "I guess there's something wrong with his head. Give him air. He'll be all right in a minute."

"Luke," said his brother, leaning over him "don't you know me?"

"No, I don't know you," said the soldier, opening his dim eyes very wide. "I haven't any brother. Listen! It's the bugle call! Boots and saddles! I'm ready—r-e-a-d-y

S. Wilson Lawrence Assaulted by a Tramp and Seriously Hurt.

S. Wilson Lawrence was brutally assaulted by a mulatto tramp at the farm of his brother-in-law, Charles Foster, about 2.30 Wednesday afternoon, his head being repeatedly struck with a large stone in the hand of his assailant, seven blows taking effect, and he is at this writing in a dangerous condition at Mr. Foster's house, about a mile and a quarter from this village, on the road to Thorndike.

Last spring Mr. Lawrence bought the King Knox farm, which adjoins that of Mr. Foster, and they frequently exchanged work. Wednesday Mr. Lawrence was helping Mr. Foster with his hay, and had been pitching off a load in the barn. He had gone to the house for a moment when the mulatto, who is described as being rather short and thick set, came to the house and asked for work, saying that he had tried to obtain it at a number of places and failed. Mr. Lawrence said that he had a load of hay in the barn partly pitched off, and if the fellow wanted to finish the job would pay him for it. He agreed and Mr. Lawrence went to the barn to show him where to put it, the mulatto following him. As Mr. Lawrence stood just inside the barn door giving the directions he was suddenly struck in the back of the head with a stone in an old stocking. It was a severe blow, and Mr. Lawrence is not a robust man, but it did not knock him down and he stepped out of the barn past his assailant, who continued to shower blows upon him, the next striking him in the left eye and crushing it, others following upon other parts of the head. After the second or third blow Mr. Lawrence became somewhat dazed, but suddenly seemed to regain his senses and kicked viciously at his assailant, hitting him in the stomach, which caused him to double up as if in pain and go into the barn. Mr. Lawrence then started for the house, which is only a few feet away, but was followed by the mulatto. As he came near the door Mrs. Foster looked out and seeing him with his face all blood asked what was the matter. Mr. Lawrence replied "The nigger has struck me," and called to Charles Johnson, Mrs. Foster's son, to get the gun and shoot him. The fellow started for the road at this, and Johnson went for his gun. There had been company at the house the day before, and the cap had been removed from the nipple as a precaution, as there were several children, and he was somewhat delayed, but fired at the fellow just as he rounded the corner of the stone wall on the road to Thorndike. The fellow stopped and grabbed his right leg, and it is evident that some of the shot took effect, though as the gun was of very small bore and the shot fine it is not probable that he is seriously wounded.

Officers were at once notified and searching parties set out and scoured the woods in the vicinity of the crime, but as yet the fellow has not been apprehended. Several times the searchers were close upon him, but he always seemed to be just a little ahead of them, and in the thick underbrush and dense foliage managed to escape. Daniel Broshnan of Thorndike saw the fellow in the road ahead of him acting strangely, and suddenly disappearing. He searched a little and found him lying on his face behind a stone wall, but at that time had not heard of the crime. Patrick McKelligett, who was working in the Catholic cemetery, was approached by the fellow, who wanted to know where there was a spring. He did not hear of the affair until some time afterward, and then the fellow had crossed the road toward Palmer Center, where he was seen at a distance running through an open field, but got into the deep woods before any one could get near him. There were large numbers of searchers from this village, Thorndike and Three Rivers; the duty call was rung on the fire alarm about 4 o'clock, and more men sent out, the roads in the vicinity of Palmer Center and Forest Lake being patrolled and the woods searched as thoroughly as it was possible to do until dark.

The fellow is described as about 38 years old, about 5 feet 7 inches tall, and weighing about 160 pounds; large eyes, round countenance, thick hair and small moustache; wore mixed old straw hat, light colored pants, dark coat with diagonal farmer's satin lining. The selectmen have offered a reward of $200 for the arrest and conviction of the fellow, and Mr. Lawrence offers $100. All the cities and towns about have been notified, and it is hoped the fellow will soon be caught. He had been hanging around the vicinity for several days, getting a meal at Palmer Center Tuesday morning and dinner at Mr. Foster's Tuesday noon, when he was accompanied by a white man, the couple paying for their meal by work in the hay field. He was also seen on South Main street in this village, and Wednesday forenoon appeared under the trees between the residences of Cyrus Knox and F. D. Barton on Highland avenue, where he lay for some time. Mr. Barton's boys and another lad were playing there and he asked for a drink of water. Mrs. Barton was away and he saw the boy take the key from a nail in the woodshed to get into the house. He then gave the other boy a quarter to go down street and buy him some apples, and offered the Barton boys five cents each to go and get them some candy, but they refused to leave and the fellow finally went off through the woods at the head of Pine street, His evident intention was robbery, and this was undoubtedly his motive for the assault upon Mr. Lawrence. When he went to the house and applied for work he saw no one but Mr. Lawrence, and did not know there were other persons in the house; he knew the other men were at work in the field, but on his visit the day before had not seen Johnson.

Mr. Lawrence's injuries consist of seven blows on the head, in the center at the back, on top of the skull, in the center of the forehead, on the left temple, one in the left eye which crushed the eyeball, on the left of the lower jaw, and one in the mouth which knocked out several teeth and crushed the roof of the mouth, besides another on the arm which he put up to ward off the blows. He is doing as well as could be expected, but is very weak and unable to sit up. There are some indications of erysipelas in the eye and mouth, but if these can be dissipated there are chances of the patient's recovery.

A telegram was received from Thompsonville, Ct., just before noon, stating that a colored man thought to be the one wanted had been arrested there on suspicion, and that the officers would have him at the police station in Springfield at noon. Deputy Sheriff Northrop and Charles Foster went in on the 1.17 train to identify the fellow.

A Monday Morning Burglary.

The store of S. H. Hellyar & Co., dealers in dry goods and clothing, was entered by burglars at an early hour Monday morning. The thieves gained entrance to the store by breaking out a pane of glass in the rear and crawling in through the opening. They then proceeded to array themselves in new outfits of clothing. The proprietor misses two suits of clothing and two shirts, which were taken from a line in the store. Others may have been taken from the piles of stock and their loss would not be so easily discovered. One old suit was left in the store. The safe in the office was unlocked and the door had been opened, but nothing was disturbed. About half past four in the morning Mrs. Tryon, who occupies a tenement over the store, saw two young fellows, who had on new suits of clothes and new straw hats, going down the street. Another party claims to have seen three together on another part of the street. There have been no traces of the thieves discovered.

The 8.05 train from Boston Wednesday morning was about an hour late, being delayed by a smash-up of three freight trains early in the morning between South Framingham and Ashland. About $20,000 damage was done to the rolling stock.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Palmer are contemplating an extended western trip, commencing about the last of August. They will visit the World's Fair, Denver, Col., and will probably visit California before their return. They will be gone two or three months.

At the regular meeting of Quaboag Council, Royal Arcanum, Tuesday evening, Judge Robinson gave a very entertaining account of his Western trip as a delegate to the supreme convention at Minneapolis, also an account of the work and growth of the order in the West and South.

A party from Mittineague picnicked at Forest Lake last Saturday, coming by special train. A party of ladies from Ware was also entertained there. Arrangements are being made for a social dance to be held soon. The Methodist Sunday school of West Warren will picnic on the grounds the 29th.

The Palmer and Monson Electric Co. has received four "Helios" 28 volt, 10 ampere, arc lamps for use in the union depot. They are to be run by the alternating current, which is the one used for house lighting. When these are put up the company will have to run but one machine in the station.

At the adjourned meeting of the Ladies' Society of the Congregational church Monday evening arrangements were made for paying the bills for the repairs on the parsonage. The thanks of the society were tendered to W. H. Hitchcock for the assistance rendered in the selection of the range for the parsonage, which was given by a Boston firm.

The pastor of the Congregational church invites all who wish to gain a better knowledge of the Bible and how to use it in Christian work to join his "Class for Learners and Workers." It will meet at the parsonage on Tuesday evenings, and will take for the basis of its work the Sunday school lesson for the following Sunday. All who attend should take Bibles.

J. W. Mundell has arranged with the Postal Telegraph Company to open an office in town, and is trying to procure suitable rooms on Main street. He has leased from the Palmer and Monson Electric Co. the right to run two lines of wires on their poles to the main New York and Boston line which passes through South Monson. This will give Palmer a most excellent service.

At the meeting of the Natural History society Monday evening Miss Pearl Lawton read an essay on the composite family. Next week Miss Bessie Royce will read an essay on the golden rod, and Miss Bertha Royce one on the daisies. Dr. W. H. Stowe offers as a prize to the members who will bring in and identify the most new, or at present unidentified flowers, a copy of Miss Dana's book, "Wild Flowers and How to Know Them."

There was a Sunday school conference in the Congregational church Tuesday evening. It was well attended and quite enthusiastic. It was decided to equip the school for thorough work, and to make a number of forward moves. A "Home Department" will be organized soon, and the attempt will be made to make a Sunday school as good as can be made, and then to secure the membership of every one in the parish in the regular or home department.

Canton Springfield, No. 23, Patriarchs Militant of Springfield, are arranging for a week's outing on the steamer City of Richmond, Capt. R. K. Minor, commencing a week from next Monday, July 31st. The trip will include Narragansett Pier, Newport, Rocky Point, Block Island and Watch Hill. The steamer will be at Newport Aug. 4th, and in a good position to witness the yacht races to pick an opponent for the foreign yacht Valkyrie. They will return Saturday night. Railroad and steamer fare, meals and all accommodations can be secured for only $20.

The Palmer base ball club suffered defeat at the hands of the Ware boys last Saturday on the agricultural grounds. The score was 11 to 6. Our boys lost the game principally through an unfriendly umpire who frequently "roasted" them, and through errors made at critical points in the game. The attendance was about 600. To-morrow they play the Holyokes. "Micky" Welch of last year's New York league team will pitch for the visitors, and Vigneux will catch. The Palmers will put the following team on the field: Lombard, Linnehan, Rooney, Ash, Chestnut, Dewey, Roach, Shugrue and McManamy.

The canvassing committee of the cemetery association is making the rounds of the village soliciting funds for the continuation of the work in the cemetery. The payment of one dollar makes the giver an honorary member for the space of one year, and a dollar from each one who can afford it will give a fund sufficient to keep the grounds in excellent shape. That a great improvement has been made since the association took the cemetery in charge is apparent, but it has no means of obtaining funds other than by contributions. Donations are not limited in amount, and if any one who wishes to give has been overlooked by the solicitors the donation may be left with the secretary, L. E. Chandler.

Rev. A. W. Weeks of this place has received and accepted a unanimous call to the pastorate of the Dewey Street Baptist church in Worcester. Mr. Weeks supplied the pulpit there for a while last winter, after closing his pastorate in this place, and an effort was made to engage him as a permanent supply for several months, but he declined. He will commence his labors next month, but will not move his family there until after the first of September. The church has a membership of nearly two hundred, and a good location for aggressive work which it can hardly fail of accomplishing under the judicious leadership of its new pastor. Mr. Weeks's former parishioners and the community in general will regret his departure, while wishing him a hearty God speed and abundant success in his new field.

District Court.

The adjourned case against Lewis Clark for illegal transportation of liquors was continued Saturday to the first Monday in August, owing to the absence of the town's lawyer, Mr. Leach. A Boy Stabbed.

A boy named Bechard was stabbed in the leg by another person by the name of Daniels one evening last week. It seems that Bechard was to blame and began an attack upon Daniels, who after warning him drew a knife and cut him. Both parties were before the district court at Palmer on account of the affair.

Death of an Aged Irish Resident.

Michael Dawson, 69 years of age, an old and respected resident of the town, died very suddenly at his home on Thursday morning from heart failure. Mr. Dawson appeared to be enjoying good health and was about as usual on Wednesday evening, and the news of his death came suddenly and unlooked for. Mr. Dawson was a true Irishman, and one of the old school, having been born in Limerick county, Ireland. He came to this country years ago and has lived in this town for over 28 years. He has always made many friends by his kind and courteous manner. A wife and two children survive him, John F. Dawson of this place and Mrs. Jeremiah Connor of Warren. He also leaves two brothers and a sister, Andrew Dawson of Newport, R. I., John Dawson and Mrs. William Ronan of Palmer, who have the sympathy of their many frienys in their deep sorrow. At this writing the day of the funeral has not been set, but in all probability it will be to-morrow.

When the 8.10 train north came in on the New London Northern road last evening the engineer reported that he had struck a man on the Burleigh bridge and knocked him into the water. About 40 from this village at once set out to search for the remains, and dragged the river for several hours, their efforts being finally rewarded by the discovery of the corpse, that of a large iron-gray dog. There was a collar about its neck, but no name attached.

On Tuesday evening what might have resulted in a serious fire started in Mr. Chicoine's home on Main street. It seems that a child was playing within reach of a lighted lamp and accidentally tipped it over, breaking the lamp and setting fire to the carpet. Fortunately Mr. Chicoine was at home and had presence of mind enough to throw some old clothing on the flames, which with prompt assistance from the neighbors averted serious damage.

Wednesday afternoon the rumor that a man was killed by a negro in Palmer caused quite a sensation in this place, and the excitement by no means subsided when a telephone came from Thorndike for Officer Lavine to raise a force of men and search Mount Dumplin for the desperado. Mr. Lavine quickly responded, and in ten minutes had a force of 42 persons marching toward the suspected hiding place of the fellow. The men skirted the mountain on every side until the darkness made further search that day unavailing. However, if the stories told by some of the party can be credited, it would seem that a remnant of the reptilian era had settled on the famous mount.

Almost a Fatality.

An Italian who has recently set up a fruit stand on Main street had an almost miraculous escape from death Wednesday afternoon He was driving toward the crossing of the New London Northern road, and, apparently absorbed in thought, did not see or gave no heed to the 3.30 freight, which was approaching at a rapid rate, and drove upon the track in front of the train. He finally seemed to realize his position and sprang from the wagon just in time to escape, while the horse and vehicle were dumped in a promiscuous pile in the street. The wagon and harness were badly demolished, but the horse seemed to escape without injury. As the fellow was driving from the bridge toward the Palmer mill it is a little singular that he did not take heed of the approaching train, as it was in plain sight, and the whistle was sounded and the bell rung. As it was he may thank his lucky star for the narrow escape.

A Valuable Invention.

During the past winter J. W. Cheney, assistant superintendent of the Palmer Mill, contrived an apparatus for adjusting the reed on looms which has proved to be a valuable invention. The device was patented by Mr. Cheney as soon as its utility was recognized, and the looms in the Palmer Mill were immediately fitted with it. The invention has since been sought after by several parties, and Mr. Cheney has finally sold his patent for $50,000 cash and $90,000 of the stock of a company which ten prominent business men who have purchased it have formed, the capital being $300,000. Among the distinguished manufacturing men who are interested in the concern are: Mr. Goodwin of Indian Orchard, Mr. Cumnock, agent for the Dwight Manufacturing Company of Chicopee, Mr. Pratt of Lewiston, Me., and Mr. Dunham of Holyoke, besides some of the wealthiest men in Springfield. The apparatus is now in operation in the following mills: Palmer Mill and the Otis Company's mills at Ware, the Dwight Mills in Chicopee, the York Manufacturing Company of Lewiston, Me., and is being tried in several other large establishments at present. The patent is secured in all the leading manufacturing nations of Europe, and the company which have been organized to manufacture the article is to be known as the Cheney Flexible Loom-Reed Company of Lewiston, Me. Mr. Cheney has resided in Three Rivers for about 18 years, and during that time has made many friends who cordially congratulate him on his remarkable success.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
HAMPDEN ss. June 28th, A. D. 1893.

By virtue of an execution which issued on a judgment recovered in the Superior Court at Springfield, within and for the county of Hampden, on the fifth day of June, A. D. 1893, in favor of Minnie A. Roberts of Manchester, county of Hillsborough, and state of New Hampshire, and against Mary Keith and Edwin E. Keith, both of Palmer, in said county of Hampden, I have this day taken all the right in equity that the said Mary Keith and Edwin E. Keith had on the second day of November, A. D. 1892, the day when the same was attached on mesne process in this action to redeem certain mortgaged real estate, with the buildings thereon, situate in said Palmer, and bounded and described as follows, to wit: Commencing on the highway at the southwest corner of the lot on the road leading from Hastings' bridge, so called, to Greenwich, 47 rods to a stone placed in the ground, thence 25 rods east to the Ware River, thence south on said river 31 rods to the highway and bridge, thence on the highway west 54 rods to the first mentioned bound, containing six acres, more or less, and being the same conveyed to the said Mary Keith by C. F. Smith, March 9th, 1889, and recorded in the Hampden County registry of deeds, book 457, page 207, and on Thursday, the third day of August next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, in front of the court house in said Palmer, I shall offer for sale by public auction to the highest bidder, said right in equity of redemption to satisfy said execution and all fees and charges of sale.

A town meeting will be held next Monday to decide the schoolhouse question. It is to be hoped that the town will accede to the wishes of the school committee, as they have looked into the matter carefully and have the interests of the town, and especially the children, at heart.

All cyclists in Monson are invited to picnic at Forest Lake Garden to-morrow, leaving Lincoln Square at 8 o'clock a. m. A carriage will be furnished to carry lunch to the lake. This invitation is extended to all who ride wheels, and it is hoped that at least 20 will go. If stormy the picnic will be postponed until further notice.

Considerable excitment was caused in the south part of the town yesterday when O. C. McCray's coal, team driven by Lewis Aldrich, with about two tons of coal in the wagon, backed over a stone wall about four feet high and fell into the garden beneath. They escaped without serious damage, one horse being only slightly scratched and the pole to the wagon broken.

Things come slow to Monson, but when they do come they are the best and stay with us. The town improves greatly from year to year, all the time growing richer and taxes less. We now have a good lot of sidewalks in town, and the selectmen deserve much credit for the manner in which they are laid out. In a few years none will have occasion to grumble as to poor walks.

The painters who have been at work on Central Block for the past week have furnished its occupants with vocal music to such an extent that music hath no more charms to them, and to make the matter still worse they were reënforced by a small boy with a hand organ, who incessantly ground out the same tune from 9 o'clock in the morning until 4 in the afternoon. It is dangerous to mention music in their hearing.

John Joyce, about 60 years of age, employed in Cushman's mill, left home last week Tuesday noon and has not since been heard from. His family are alarmed at his prolonged absence, and fear aberration of the mind. He was about 5 feet 5 inches tall, had on striped pants, black coat and black hat. No cause is known for his disappearance. Any information of his whereabouts will be thankfully received by Mrs. John Joyce.

Odd Fellows, neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Graves called on them at their home Monday evening to help celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage. Between thirty and forty were present, and all enjoyed the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Graves were remembered with gifts, which included a silver and cut glass berry dish and berry spoon from the Odd Fellows, and a willow rocker and hammock from friends and neighbors. H. Howe presented the gifts in behalf of the donors, and Mr. Graves responded, thanking all for their kindly remembrance and good will.

Luther B. Peck, 81, a life-long resident and highly respected citizen of Monson, died at his home on Main street about one o'clock Tuesday. He had been in his usual health until about a week ago, when he suffered a shock from which he never recovered. Mr. Peck spent his early life on a farm, beginning at 14 years of age in the employ of Joel Norcross. He with others helped to plant the trees on Main street which add so much to the beauty and comfort of the town. He had four children, three sons and one daughter. His daughter, Jennie, the wife of Dr. N. W. Rand, died about eight years ago. His wife and three sons, Lucius, who lives in Michigan, Ira G., cashier of the Second National Bank of Norwich, Ct., and Carlos L., bookkeeper at Heimann & Lichten's straw shop, survive him. The funeral was held at the house to-day at 2.30, Rev. F. S. Hatch officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Peck celebrated their golden wedding three years ago. Mr. Peck was a man of many sterling qualities, of good disposition, and a kind and thoughtful neighbor.

A Horrible Death.

William A. Cook of this place met with a horrible death last Friday about 11 in the forenoon. With a young colored man he was mowing a piece of grass about a mile west of the village, the mower being drawn by oxen, Mr. Cook driving and the helper riding on the machine. In some manner the animals became frightened, it is supposed at the raising of a parasol by a passer-by, and turned sharp around, knocking Mr. Cook down so that he lay right in front of the knives, which caught his right arm and cut and tore it from the shoulder, besides which he received severe gashes in his side, bleeding to death in a few moments. Physicians were summoned as soon as possible, but it is their opinion that nothing could have been done for him even had medical attendance been at hand at once. Mr. Cook was 45 years of age, and leaves a wife and one child.

BRIMFIELD.

Mr. Washburn returned to Brockton Monday.

Miss Fannie Warren of Worcester is in town.

The East Brookfields and Wares will play a game of ball on the Ware grounds tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Crowley and Shea will do the battery work for the Wares.

Rev. J. T. Sheehan, in company with Prof. Podgorski of Smith College, sailed on Wednesday for Europe. They will take a trip through Prussia, Switzerland and Austria, sailing for home August 26.

There was great excitement in town this morning, when it was reported that there had been an attempted burglary in Rohan Brother's store, as the safe door was discovered open at about 3 o'clock this morning and two fellows found by Policeman Rennison hiding behind a crockery crate near the back door, who on being discovered attempted to escape. Officer Rennison followed, firing his revolver once or twice, but without effect. They ran over South street and when near the residence of E. H. Baker the revolver was fired again, this time taking effect on the window of F. C. Blood's sleeping room, rousing him, who as soon as possible joined in the pursuit and the fellow was captured in the yard or barn of Dr. John Yale, and proved to be his son, William B. Yale of Enfield, who is wanted in that town, it is reported, for illegal liquor selling last Sunday. His brother was with him, but is not supposed to be implicated more than trying to assist in his escape from the officers of the law.

STORY OF GRATITUDE.

SIX PHYSICIANS, TWO CLAIRVOYANTS, AND ONE CHRISTIAN SCIENTIST

Fail to Help Mrs. N. E. Whitney, of Hillsboro Bridge, N. H.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE, N. H.—There is no better known nor more highly respected resident of this village than Mrs. N. E. Whitney. Her long and serious illness and her remarkable recovery of health through the aid of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, has made that medicine a necessity in every New Hampshire household.

Mrs. Whitney in speaking about her sickness, said "I had been gradually failing in health for a number of years, and was told by my physicians that I was in the last stages of Bright's Disease. I had been under the treatment at various times, of six physicians, two clairvoyants, and one Christian scientist, but received no benefit from any of them. I had given up all hope of ever being cured. I had no faith in the advertised medicines, and it seemed to me that every means of ever being cured had been tried except to use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which had been recommended. As a last resort I purchased a bottle; when I had used it I felt no better, but continued its use, and by the time I had used the second bottle I was greatly improved, and from that on I improved daily, and it was not long before I was able to be about the house, doing my regular household duties.

No tongue can tell how I suffered for the three years before I used Favorite Remedy. My age is 56, and I now weigh 35 pounds more than I ever did. Favorite Remedy restored me to health and strength, and if any one wishes to call upon or write me I will gladly tell them what this great medicine will do for them if afflicted as I was."

As a prominent physician recently said: "Any one suffering from kidney or urinary troubles, rheumatism, dyspepsia or any uric or lactic acid disease, it will cure them if their disease is within the reach of medicine."

Leon's Sarsaparilla.

Leon's Sarsaparilla Co., Belfast, Me.:

Gentlemen:—Last winter, like many others, I was attacked with the grip, from which I have never fully rallied. I lost my appetite and strength, felt weak in the legs, and was generally "used up." I tried various remedies, but received no benefit therefrom.

A short time since I was induced to try a bottle of Leon's Sarsaparilla, and its effect has been wonderful. I have no weakness in my legs, and my appetite is good, and my general health is improving as rapidly as I could hope for. My improvement has been so marked that my wife, who is troubled with a weak back, is now trying your medicine, feeling confident that it will help her. I take pleasure in recommending Leon's Sarsaparilla to all who are suffering from the grip.

The Ox Team.

I sit upon my ox team, calm,
Beneath the lazy sky,
And crawl contented through the land
And let the world go by.
The thoughtful ox has learned to wait
And nervous impulse smother,
And ponder long before he puts
One foot before the other.

And men with spanking teams pass by
And dash upon their way,
As if it were their hope to find
The world's end in a day.
And men dash by in palace cars,
On me dark frowns they cast,
As the lightning-driven Present frowns
Upon the slow old Past.

What do they chase, these men of steam,
Their smoke-flags wide unfurled,
Pulled by the rearing fire fiend
That shakes the reeling world?
What do you seek, ye men of steam,
So wild and mad you press?
Is this, is this the railroad line
That leads to happiness?

And when you've swept across the day
And dashed across the night,
Is there some station through the hills
Where men can find delight?
Ah, toward the Depot of Content
Where no red signals stream,
I go by ox-team just as quick
As you can go by steam.

—Sam Walter Foss, in Yankee Blade.

"I've just back from Washington, where I've been ever since election trying to get an appointment," said a member of the club last night, with a sigh. "Gave up hope, eh?" sympathizingly chimed in a friend. "Oh, no," was the prompt rejoinder. "I came home to hope. It's cheaper to hope here."—Chicago Despatch.

Mrs. Blinders—"James, you talk the most silly nonsense in your sleep." (Mr. Blinders (with fear and trembling)—"Er—do I? What do I say?" Mrs. Blinders—"Why, you kept calling out the whole night, 'Jackson, you're shy,' and 'You're shy again, Jackson;' and you know that George Jackson is one of the most impudent, self-conceited, forward of men and the most audacious flirt in town!"—Puck.

"I shall never believe there has been much romance in your life, Mr. Bond." "Well, there has. I proposed to an heiress by mail. She accepted me by telegram, which an error of transmission made a refusal. I went West. When I returned her father had failed and she had married a poor man. I recovered the amount of her dowry, with interest, from the telegraph company, but lost it all when she sued me for breach of promise."—Life.

"His was a sad end," said a gentleman in an uptown hotel recently, speaking of the death of a once wealthy person to some mutual acquaintances. Then he began philosophizing, and concluded his remarks with the not original expression: "I tell you, boys, it's hard, this dying in poverty." "But excuse me," said a cynical and not over prosperous member of the party, "to my mind it's living in poverty that comes hardest."—New York Herald.

The above articles will be distributed, by counties, among parties who chew SPEAR HEAD Plug Tobacco, and return to us the TIN TAGS taken therefrom.

We will distribute 226 of these prizes in this county as follows:

To THE PARTY sending us the greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS from this county we will give.....1 GOLD WATCH.

To the FIVE PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each, 1 OPERA GLASS.....5 OPERA GLASSES.

To the TWENTY PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 POCKET KNIFE.....20 POCKET KNIVES.

To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 ROLLED GOLD WATCH CHARM TOOTH PICK.....100 TOOTH PICKS.

To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 LARGE PICTURE IN ELEVEN COLORS.....100 PICTURES.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DON'T SEND ANY TAGS BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1894.

BESSIE'S SITUATION.

"Dear me!" said Mrs. Haughton, as she bent over a great kettle of simmering quinces, "I don't know what we are to do. I can't get such a girl as I want for any wages, and there is just everything to be done."

"Just like papa!" said Fannie, working away at mass of paste that was to appear later in the shape of pies. "I don't suppose he ever remembered we had no girl when he invited Mr. Austin and his cousin."

"Of course your papa forgot to mention that till just as he was starting for the city this morning, and they will all come with him this evening. I have sent Daisy to put the spare room in order, but you know how it will look."

"Mamma, here comes Bessie Turner. She'll have to come in here."

The visitor, advancing up the garden walk, did not wait for an invitation to the kitchen, but came directly to the half-open door. She was a small, pretty girl of about 22, with a marked air of refinement.

Two years before, she had driven to call upon Mrs. Haughton in her own carriage, but her father's sudden death had revealed the fact that he was deeply in debt, and had left no fortune for his only child. Since that time Bessie had been teaching in the Seminary at B——, but on the day when Fannie Haughton saw her from the kitchen window, it was certainly school hours.

"Mrs. Haughton," she said, after greetings had been exchanged, "I heard you wanted a girl."

"I do, indeed. Do you know of a good one?"

"Will you take me?"

"Bessie!" cried both ladies.

"I must do something for a living, and Dr. Willis says I must neither sew nor teach next winter, if I want to live. He assures me my only chance of recovering from the trouble in my lungs that I have had so long, is to give up teaching, and he positively forbids me to touch a needle."

"But, Bessie, you—a lady—" gasped Fannie.

"Are you any less a lady for making pies this morning, Fan—Miss Haughton, I mean? I suppose you will hardly care to have your servant girl call you Fannie."

"Don't be absurd, Bessie. The idea of your father's daughter being a servant girl!" said Mrs. Haughton.

But Bessie was in earnest, and her tone was very positive.

"I should be glad enough to have you if you really meant it."

"I really mean it. You can pay me just what you paid Sarah. I'm sorry," she said, gayly, "I have no recommendation from my last place."

"See what Daisy is doing, Fannie," said her mother; and Fanny went off.

As soon as she was gone, Mrs. Haughton taking Bessie's face in her motherly hands, kissed it softly.

"Darling," she said, "this must not be. I love you, Bessie, as one of my own girls, and you must come and let us nurse you well again. You shall be my guest this winter."

"You are very kind," the young girl replied, "but you must let me have my own way. I do not need nursing, only rest from the constant talking to pupils, and active exercise. I told Dr. Willis what I would do and he said it was the best medicine in the world for me."

Quite a long talk followed, but Mrs. Haughton was obliged to yield her point, and finally the new mistress was persuaded to give the order for her company dinner, and leave the kitchen to its new occupant.

But when the girl was really alone, she certainly acted very strangely, considering resolutions. Just as Mrs. Haughton left her she had said:

"We expect Mr. and Mrs. Austin, and their coasin, a Mr. Alexander Wight, lately returned for California."

Then she left the kitchen, and Bessie dashed into the buttery and sat down behind the door.

"Oh, why didn't I wait?" she said in a half whisper. "Alick Wight at home? coming here! What will he think, to see me a servant girl? Wait for what? I am only earning my bread. Alick Wight is nothing to me. Probably he has forgotten my existence."

But even as she spoke there arose in her memory a picture she would never forget. In a conservatory where tinkling fountains cooled the air for choice exotics, a lady stood beside a tall, fine looking man, who held her little gloved hand fast in his own.

"I will not bind you by any promise, Bessie, for you will be an heiress, while I have still my way to make. I sail for San Francisco soon, but I shall return. I shall hope you will not forget me."

Two weeks later he was gone and Bessie an orphan. Years of struggle for her had been years of success to him, for his uncle was dead, and had left him a large property and prosperous business.

"But this won't get my dinner," she said, suddenly. "If I must be a servant, at least I will be a good one."

The afternoon train brought the expected guests, and Bessie, peeping from her kitchen curtain, saw the pretty little lady who had been her hostess on the evening already mentioned, her gray-haired husband, and a tall, broad-shouldered, heavily bearded young man, who was introduced to his hostess and her pretty daughter as "My cousin, Mr. Wight."

It was not the easiest work in the world, after this, to wait at table, and Mrs. Haughton started at the demure little waitress whose perfectly cooked viands she was dispensing. But nobody noticed her, and dinner passed off very quietly, the new arrivals being full of city gossip for their country friends.

As the "girl" stood over her dish pan, in which two scalding tears had fallen, she thought:

"He did not even recognize her."

Mrs. Haughton came out to Bessie.

"Bessie, dear," she said, "leave the dishes and come into the parlor."

"I am too tired and hot," pleaded Bessie.

"It will rest you."

"But it is better not. I can't be servant and lady too, Mrs. Haughton. Don't think I am ungrateful, but it is better for me to keep in my place."

"I think so, too," said the lady, "but I do not think we quite agree as to which is your place. However, you shall have your own way to-night. Your dinner was splendid."

And the lady returned to her guests, while Bessie washed and wiped plates, cups and dishes and put all in order. The young girl threw off her apron, and went into the garden to throw off the feverish heat in her veins.

"I wonder, if I am strong enough to go through with it?" she thought as she seated herself in the summer house.

Just at that moment the odor of a cigar came floating in at the summer-house door, and before Bessie could escape a masculine cigar-holder followed the "Havana." She had started to her feet, and the moonlight shone full upon her face as Alick Wight sprang forward, crying:

"Bessie Turner, where have you come from?"

But the girl drew back from the rapturous greeting, saying in a cold, low voice:

"I am Mrs. Haughton's servant girl, Mr. Wight."

She was so hard and cold that he looked at her in amazement; but after a moment he saw her face quivering in the moonlight, and he forgot everything save that the woman he loved above all other women was poor, in sorrow and trouble.

"Bessie," he said, and his voice was full of keep feeling, "was it kind to keep all this from me, knowing I loved you? Is it kind to thrust me away now, when I have come all the way from California to find you? Have you ceased to love me, Bessie? Will you send me back alone, or,—"

"I am poor, sick—"

"Hush darling? You are mine; and I am not poor. You shall grow well again, my darling, when you have love and rest. Do not drive me away, Bessie."

And nestling down in his strong arms, Bessie gave him the promise he craved.

And Mrs. Haughton lost her girl the same day she engaged her.

CAUGHT A BALLOONER.

"I used to make balloon ascensions in connection with Warner's circus," said an old and retired aeronaut the other day, "and one day I went up from Pekin, Illinois. The balloon was new and light, and I got a much longer ride than what I expected. I finally descended in a farm-house yard about ten miles away, my anchor having caught in a cherry tree. The farmer was an old fellow, about sixty years of age, and he sat reading on his door step as I came down. He removed his glasses, put them in their case, put the case in his pocket and then came forward and carelessly observed:

"'That a balloon?'

"'Yes. Help me pull it down.'

"'Are you a balloonер?'

"'Yes. Pull hard.'

"We got the air ship down, and I wanted him to take me to town in his wagon. He had none, and I had hired a rig of a neighbor, and was about to depart when the old fellow stepped forward with:

"'I have a little bill here, sir.'

"'Bill! What for?'

"'Damage to cherry tree, 2 shillin's; skeerin' my poultry, 50 cents; skeerin' my old woman, the same, services of myself, $1. Total, $2.25, which is mighty cheap considerin' the time.'

"'But I won't pay it!' I protested.

"'Oh, you won't? Well, I'm a justice of the peace, and I'll issue a warrant. My naybur is constable, and he kin serve it. The old woman is out of her fit by this time, and I sort o' reckon I'll fine you about $25 for disturbin' of the peace and contempt of this court!'

"And I was made to realize that the best way out of it was to come down with the amount of his bill, and luckily I had it and a quarter to spare."

Merchants familiar with mixed paints that have been put upon the market during the past ten years, will tell you that many of the manufacturers of these paints seem to think that they could sell anything that was labeled paint, that the merchant cared little what was contained in these paints, and it made no difference to the consumer. The cheapness and convenience of mixed paints, however, counted much in their favor. But the demand for mixed paint that was actually paint, and not simply labbled paint, became apparent, and merchants received the Chilton Paints when they were introduced upon the market, with the greatest of favor, because they knew that they were made out of the best materials that could be bought, were full measure, and that none of the tricks used to cheapen the cost of production were resorted to. The merchant could recommend them. The standard of excellence has never been lowered. The same quality of paint is put up in pound cans as in large packages.

Ayer's Pills

Are better known and more generally used than any other cathartic. Sugar-coated, purely vegetable, and free from mercury or any other injurious drug, this is the ideal family medicine. Though prompt and energetic in their action, the use of these pills is attended with only the best results. Their effect is to strengthen and regulate the organic functions, being especially beneficial in the various derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ayer's Pills

are recommended by all the leading physicians and druggists, as the most prompt and effective remedy for billiousness, nausea, costiveness, indigestion, sluggishness of the liver, jaundice, drowsiness, pain in the side, and sick headache; also, to relieve colds, fever, neuralgia, and rheumatism. They are taken with great benefit in chills and diseases peculiar to the South. For travelers, whether by land or sea, are the best and should never be omitted in the outfit. To preserve their medicinal integrity in all climates, they are put up in bottles as well as boxes.

Ayer's Pills

"I have used Ayer's Pills in my Family for several years, and always found them to be a mild and excellent purgative, having a good effect on the liver. It is the best pill used."—FRANK SPILLMAN, Sulphur, Ky. *

Love's Voyage.

We are going with the wind, love,
Blowing fair and free,
Somehow the breeze is always good
That blows for you and me.

Behind us lies the dear old land,
Before us dreams the new,
Beneath us swells the joyous sea,
Above us bends the blue.

What is there that can hinder love,
Or make our hearts afraid?
The ocean deep can never fail,
The sky can never fade.

You are my universe, and I,
Oh, I am yours, my sweet;
Then how can any cloud arise,
Or any tempest beat?

We are going with the wind, love,
Blowing fair and free,
Somehow the breeze is always good
That blows for you and me.

If we go down, the sea is love,
And holds us evermore;
Our tide, whatever way it move,
Will reach a golden shore.

AN AMERICAN ANCESTOR.

Two or three years ago I was making a pedestrian tour through the White Mountains. I had "flocked all alone by myself," glad of a solitary jaunt which should take me away from the intense strain of business affairs after a long legal struggle had resulted in making me a millionaire. I had chosen the solitary clamber of the great hills on my own legs by advice of a prominent physician, who declared I needed physical exercise and mental rest. I enjoyed every moment. The weather had been cool and fine. Advancing from Concord, which I made my point of departure, I had gradually followed the railroad course from town to town, stopping at night wherever I happened to find shelter which seemed promising, and I have always looked back to the hospitality extended to me in two or three of the farmhouses with a pleasant wonder, for within them dwelt such peace, purity, kindness and consideration as one may often seek for in vain among the mansions of cities. I had progressed far beyond the sparkling Lake Winnipisseogee, which gems the lower ranges of approach to the great hills, had spent one day in historic Plymouth, had visited the black pool and cascade of Livermore Falls and had even passed the well-known sign-board of Sanborn's hotel at Campton—famous once for its mountain of a landlord and mole-hill of a landlady—each genuine characters, so mellow, amiable and jolly, so bright, keen and quaint, that their faces have ever since been imprinted on my pleased memory; and I was now making my way toward the Grafton House at Thornton, once so bright with "the boarders" from Boston and elsewhere—now a dilapidated ruin, forgetful of its old lively traditions.

The railway which now cuts the road into unpleasant sandbanks was in those old days a hoped-for improvement, but had not become materialized in even so much as the first rail; and that delicious valley, in which all the sylphs, imps and fairies must have disported themselves in the moonlight every midsummer festival, lay so quiet, so peaceful, so exquisitely contrasted with the superb heights which rose towering above, had often so charmed me that my soul was lifted in thanksgiving to God for such a manifestation of His eternal freshness and beauty.

On this day the Flume, the Notch, the Profile House, lay before me as the end of my 20-mile tramp, and my spirit was glad to have so beautiful a goal. I confess I was singing a hymn,—that one which seems so appropriate:—

Rivers to the ocean run,
Nor stay in all their course;
Fires ascending seek the sun,
Each speeds them to their source!
So a soul that's born of God
Pants to view His glorious face;
Upward tends to His abode,
To rest in His embrace.

I had just finished the last line when I saw a boy about 13 or 14 years old, sitting upon a stone, crying as if his heart would break. He was singularly handsome. His curly brown head was noble in form, he was fair in complexion, his features were almost classic. His feet were bare, red and swollen and scratched, but the insteps were slender, the nails delicate and the ankles not those of a country-bred lad. In a moment I noticed that his clothing was fine, and although simple, elegant in cut and make, while his stockings and shoes were equally good. He was dusty and badly burned, his hands red and sore with constant exposure to the sun. His appearance astonished me, and I said to him:—

"A rather jolly morning to be weeping like that, seems to me!"

He started and looked up through a pair of deep brown eyes so strangely melancholy that for a moment he seemed like an old man. He ceased crying, but sat still, not answering a word. Something within him, something within me, was at that moment touched to instantaneous life. I felt that I loved the lad. I have often wondered what it was that made me suddenly sit down beside him, put my arm around him and pat his head. I was long past 40, I was a bachelor, I hadn't very many friends, for I had not been rich until a week before. My life had been a long, hard struggle, a serious, earnest work toward a grave end, and into my existence had crept but few flowers of affection and but one root of love.

"I guess," said I, Yankee fashion, "that you and I are a pretty lonesome pair of fellows, somehow."

He looked me in the eyes a moment and then impulsively hid his face in my breast, while one arm stole around my neck.

"I am," said he; "I've been lonesome ever since I was born."

Well, so had I. Maybe that was the link that joined us. I had had no home; no father, no mother. I was a self-made man, what there was of me, until that fortune had come. So I said the truth simply. "So have I."

"Have you?" he cried eagerly. "Then you will understand! You will know all about it! You will not blame me. You will tell me what to do."

"Why should I blame you, my boy? What have you done?"

"I have run away—more than a hundred miles."

He looked at me doubtfully, wistfully, to see how I would take it. I took it coolly. "Boys often do that," I answered.

He looked a little crestfallen,—not so much of a hero. But in a moment, trying to justify himself, he asked: "What makes 'em?"

"Usually a harsh, unkind father; too much whipping; too much work, too little play; or else cheap story papers."

"Are they never lonesome — lonesome enough to die? Don't that make 'em, ever?"

"I never heard so. Did it you? Come, you had better tell me all about it. You see, I've been about so myself."

He wiped his bonny face, sat down on an old log and said: "My trouble is our family. You see we are real folks. My great-great-grandfather was somebody awfully grand and rich. He was father's side, you know. Then his mother was an Endicott. I've heard about her and her father and his mother being a Howard and her father being awful rich and grand ever since I was in my crib. Then mother. She is a straight descendant of the Devereaux of Hammerstead. They had earls and barons and dukes all back to William. They call him William the Conqueror, but I call him old Bill. I hate him! And mother's folks were linked in, somehow, with the 'old Squire Leith' family. Oh, I guess I shan't forget the names. I've heard 'em nine thousand seven hundred and forty times. So if you can make out who I am, I can't, for I am so many boys in one that I feel just like a plum-pudding. The raisins are the Endicotts and the currants are the Devereaux, and the citron the Leiths, and the spice the dukes and things, and the flour the rest of 'em, and they are all rolled into me. And I'm the last of the whole lot, and I'm lonesome."

I think I should have laughed till I burst my buttons if I had not perceived that he was very much in earnest. I just said simply, in a sympathetic tone, resuming the vocabulary of my boyhood, "That is tough."

"Isn't it?" said he. "Now I'll tell you the rest of it. Seeing that all our people were so rich and grand, some time ago, you know—say a few hundred years—father's a clerk in a store now and mother dress-makes—she has to—we are not very well off—I haven't been common enough to go to school with the other boys. I've had to have lessons with a Miss Madison. She is an old maid, and she teaches a few girls, and me, because we are very tony children."

He snuggled up to me a little more confidentially. "I was the only boy in that school. Wouldn't you be lonesome? And both mother and father have just worked their heads off to dress me up so I could go to that girl-baby school! You can see, sir, yourself, if I'm not a straight descendant of the Devereaux! Just look at this!"

He pulled the front of his jacket open, and within I could see a delicate silk shirt, on which was embroidered an elaborate monogram. "There!" he exclaimed, "do you suppose any decent boy would play with such a fool-rigged fellow as that? If I stripped off my jacket I'd get laughed at till I'd never play again. This mean old shirt has kept me out of more fun than a little. And that's the way with every single thing. I can't bathe for fear the heir of some old stuffy ancestor that's been just like John Brown's body, moldering in the ground for years, will get drowned with Tommy Striker in the same duck-hole! And I can't row and fish, because all the boys will go too. And our folks ain't rich enough to have me ride in a carriage and really go with other heirs to old grand and rich people, so I'm just cut out of every bit of fun in this world, and the boys laugh at me and the girls pity me, and I am miserable—so lonesome I don't know what to do."

"But you had been standing this sort of thing a good while,—what made you start up and run away?"

"Little Lord Fauntleroy," he answered, with pefect scorn.

"What?" I ejaculated in amazement.

"Yes, Little Lord Fauntleroy and my curls. Here they are!" and he pulled a roll of paper out of his trousers pocket, from which he drew a dozen or 15 beautiful brown curls. They were evidently cut off with a pair of dull scissors.

"I cut 'em off the night I ran away," he went on, half triumphantly, half ruefully, "Think of curls on a boy over 13!"

"But you were small for your age," said I soothingly.

"Yes, that was some comfort! But I'll tell you. Mother never would let me cut 'em off. I teased and teased as soon as I was 10, to go to the barber and be shingled like other boys, but she never would. I had a birthday about two weeks ago, and mother bought me a present. She don't often have time to read books, but this one was about an earl's grandson, called Little Lord Fauntleroy, and as soon as she looked at the pictures she wanted to read it. Then what must she do but get me up a suit just like this! She is a dressmaker, you know, and she can make almost anything she likes. She didn't try it on to me, for I guess she knew I wouldn't like it, but last Sunday she made me put it on and put me to church. I believe I never was so mad. I cried. I hate to cry, but I was so mad I couldn't help it. I looked exactly like the earl's grandson, and I suppose mother was proud; but look here, sir! I expect to be an ancestor myself one of these days, and I don't want to be a duke ancestor or an earl ancestor! I want to be an American ancestor and make my own money and be like other men! I'm an American boy, and ain't going to wear velvet suits and long curls!"

His oratory was punctuated with tears and flushes of anger, and his rough cropped head bobbed with vehemence. I confess I sympathized with him with all my heart.

"Go on," said I, "tell the rest."

"In church it wasn't quite so bad, but in Sunday school all the whole school laughed. The boys in my class were just tickled to death. They knew they had it on me good, and Monday they could call me anything they pleased. But I was bound they shouldn't. All the afternoon I sat and thought it over, and I determined to run away and earn my own living and cut off my curls and never go back till I could show 'em I could get rich and grand myself, just being my own self, and nobody's great-great-grandson at all."

"Was that last Sunday?" said I.

"Yes, and I've walked and walked. I rode in the cars a great ways, until I thought I had gone far enough. I wore my old clothes and I cut off my hair before I got on the train. I guess nobody can find me now."

"What do you mean to do to earn your living?" said I.

"Oh, work in a farm-house, I guess, at first. I've asked along quite often, if they wouldn't like a chore boy, but nobody seemed to."

"And if you don't get a chance?" I questioned a little anxiously.

"That was what I was crying about!" he said, his face looking very blue indeed.

"Don't you suppose your father and mother are distracted by this time?"

"Oh, no. I wrote and told 'em I was sick and tired of being a girl-baby boy and I was going to start out and be a man."

"I am afraid that will not console them for your loss," I remarked gravely. But I added—"I have something to tell you which I fear will make you dislike me very much. I am astonished at myself, and I don't know as I ought to acknowledge it without apologizing, but the fact is, I have been studying up the Endicott, Howard, Devereaux and Leith families you spoke of, and I am pretty sure your father's name is Edmund Howard, while your mother's name was Henrietta Devereaux. Your name is Endicott Howard, nd mine is—"

He looked as if thunderstruck. Then he said in a very soft voice, "Are you one of the family, sir?"

"I feel obliged to own that I am, much as I know it will prejudice you against me. I am cousin to your mother, and, just like you, I am one of those descendants of grand rich people who have to be so, whether they lik it or not, for I was born a Devereaux."

He mused over this information for some time, then with eyes glowing with hope, he exclaimed: "But you are a self-made man, ain't you? An American man?"

"Whatever I am was self-made, my boy, but there is one thing yet that I must own up. I hope you won't think it very bad indeed. I am rich, very rich, and it is all due to that lot of old ancestors of ours, who came over with 'Old Bill.'"

Ednicott Howard looked at me askance and with proper disgust. But after a little he brightened up and leaning very close to me uttered in a loving voice, "I don't care! You a regular brick, anyhow, and I'm glad I've met you."

It is needless to say that after this we became great friends. I invited him to join me on my tramp, but soon seeing the little fellow was very tired I hired a farmer to take us on to the Profile house, and from there, after due persuasion, dispatched an explanatory letter to his parent, which enlightened them as to our relationship and the fact that with their permission I would take charge of their son for the term of his school vacation and then return him safely to their abode. Having given them the address of my banker, and being myself somewhat well known in their city, I was happy to receive two tearful and characteristic letters, giving me full powers to take Endicott "around the mountains." We went, seeing everything that was to be seen and enjoying each other's companionship until I may safely say we loved each other very dearly.

Our arrival at my cousin's was certainly full of interest. I had tried by frequent letters to hint and suggest that the boy was very manly in his ideas if he was small in person, and that the patriotic loyalty and independence manifested at every turn should be fostered instead of repressed. In fact, before the end of our journey I had determined to make him my heir, or at least I concluded that as the last of our family he was most entitled to its "grandeur and riches," but I heartily approved of allowing him to become "a self-made man"—"An American gentleman"—in his own stout, brave way. The public school was good enough for him, and association with other boys of good record seemed to me to be the proper thing.

Slowly, and one by one, I had delicately put these ideas into two rather shallow heads (if I may be permitted to call them so) and I was not quite prepared for the kind of reception we received.

Being, as I was, the head of the Devereaux family, and having come into possession of the family fortune, I am sorry to say I was counted by Endicott's mother and father as almost too great and good for human nature's daily food. The dinner was a banquet, served on china with the family monogram in gilt and colors. The room was decorated with six large family coats-of-arms; the chair I sat in had an earl's coronet embroidered on the tidy; and—alas for such extravagance!—a footman in livery and a butler in evening suit had been hired for the occasion. The conversation was constantly led to the historic glories of our ancestors, and both my cousin and her husband seemed to have reached the apex of earthly pride when I formally announced my desire to educate their son with a view to his future prospects. Great was the abashment, however, when I declared that his fortunes would depend upon their common sense; and his exclamation as he stood waving his hand about the room,—"You will have to cut all this!" nearly reduced his mother to tears.

But in time better counsels prevailed, and to-day I have just made up a party to do the mountains once more. This time my cousin and her husband, with their son, will be my guests. Endicott is now "going on" 17. He is tall, lithe, athletic and manly. He can play baseball, swim, row, play tennis, ride a "safety" and "study like a house afire." He takes 10-mile walks with me and talks of hard work at some good trade, which he declares is the best standby a boy can have in life. He has won the regard and admiration of the boys in his town, and the girls certainly no longer pity him, while my bachelor heart, with its feeling of loneliness, seems full of a new cheerfulness, too, which always seems to come flooding in when I hear the boy's merry laugh.

I keep the curls. They are treasured by me in a small carved ivory box. Why? Well, Endicott's Aunt Edith, his father's sister, was that root of love which has grown with my growth and branched into every fiber of my being. She went away in her beauty when only 18—and her curls—her curls were exactly like his. I know, for I have worn one next to my heart for all these years.—Cora Linn Daniels in Sunday Republican.

NOTES FROM THE WORLD'S FAIR.

CHICAGO—HOTEL ENDEAVOR.

Dear Journal:—I did not think when you said to me, "Write a letter," that I would have either the time or the inclination to do so; but the Palmer party to the Fair have had such a pleasant trip and there are so many I would like to tell it to, and there might be some who would consider it only a bore, so I have thought I would write a brief letter of some of the pleasantest points, so those who care may read and those who will think it a bore can skip it.

We left Palmer on the 5.28 p. m. train, went direct to Westfield and waited for the Mass. Central train. While waiting got a good supper, and boarded the train in good spirits. Early the next morning, for the train lost time continually, we had a fine view of the town of Poughkeepsie and the great bridge above the Hudson. Then followed some rugged scenery and the ride to South Bethlehem, and on to Philadelphia and Washington passed quickly and pleasantly. The train, however, was late and missed connections in Washington, and those who had limited tickets and wished the Potomac scenery were much displeased in not being able to leave before 6 p. m. This did not trouble us, as we desired to stop in Washington, and so we were pleasantly located in the "National" on Penn. Avenue. After dinner we took a Georgetown car, wisely ignoring the suggestion that the best way to get to Arlington was by a carriage. At Georgetown a 'bus carried us to the nation's cemetery, the former home of Gen. Robert E. Lee, whose old mansion with its great pillars overlooks the Potomac and furnishes headquarters for the officials.

As we rode into the cemetery the driver told us that the officers' graves were on the left of the road and the private soldiers on the right. As we looked at the long rows of little square marble stones, under each one of which some one has said "A soldier lies sleeping," we felt that a great company of the nation's martyrs were there. Directly in front of the Lee mansion, in the place of honor, is an elegant granite monument, and as we walked around to the front we found there a bust, with the familiar face of Sheridan.

On leaving the grounds we heard a bugle, and by a little haste were in time to see a cavalry drill. There are four squads of cavalry stationed near the grounds, and the drill made for us a very pretty closing of the day.

The next morning we went to Mount Vernon, and in the afternoon went through the horticultural gardens, the Smithsonian Institute and the National Museum.

Friday morning we took a horse car up Connecticut Avenue and were fortunate enough to find a driver sufficiently polite and courteous to tell us all the names of the churches and other public buildings, and the names of the owners of the finest residences along the way. On our return we rested a while in Lafayette Park, studied the statue of the patriot and noticed at the east end of the park an unpretentious brick house and remembered that in that house on the night of President Lincoln's assassination his secretary of state, Seward, was terribly stabbed. Here also for several years before his death resided Secretary Blaine. Here his children died and here he resided when he lost the nomination for the presidency a year ago. Many are superstitious enough to believe that some evil genius presides over the fortunes of the house.

At 10 o'clock we called at the White House, were shown through the East room and the parlors, then we strolled about the grounds, went into the treasury building and several other of the buildings, and some went up the monument.

Saturday morning we went to the Ford's Theater, as it is called, and found the brick house opposite on which is a marble tablet noting the death of President Lincoln there. At a few minutes before noon we left the Baltimore and Ohio depot. Excepting for the weather, which was intensely hot, our stay in Washington was as pleasant and profitable as it could be.

Then followed the pleasantest part of our trip. The scenery of the Potomac valley and over the Blue Ridge and Alleghanies is both beautiful and grand. We pass Harper's Ferry, and as the train climbs the sides of Maryland hills the weather, which had been so hot and uncomfortable, gradually becomes cooler, and we have enjoyed every minute of the ride, except the tunnels, and at dark we rode into Pittsburg. During the night we were sidetracked an hour or two because a freight car was off the track, and so lost time; but I half expect this was a blessing and saved some of us a little carsickness.

Our Sunday morning ride through the oil region of Ohio was very pleasant, and we are now very comfortably quartered at the Hotel Endeavor, on the beach about six blocks south of the Fair grounds. A heavy storm has passed and the breeze now coming from the lake is cool and delicious, and not the least of our enjoyment is the roar of the breakers as they lap the beach but a few rods from our windows.

Tuesday morning, and we have had one day only at the Fair, so that we can give only first impressions. The first is its extent. Without doubt it is a "big thing." We took the ride on the elevated first, and then spent the remainder of our strength for the day in visiting the state buildings, all of which are beautiful; some homelike, as the Massachusetts building, others gorgeous, as for instance the New York building. We get the impression from the New York building that the commission from that state had more money than it knew what to do with. The Florida building is modeled after the old fort at St. Augustine, and except that the weather has been too cold and killed many of its tropical plants, makes a very interesting place to visit. Another very interesting building is that of Idaho, which is built very attractively of cedar and fir logs. The Western states' exhibits are largely agricultural, and to an Eastern born their decorations in grain are something wonderful. There are pictures of horses and cattle as accurate as paint and brush could do it. Illinois has a drop curtain with a farm scene in grains as distinct and beautiful as can be; California a large black horse of prunes, and the visitor goes from one beautiful scene to another amazed at the beauty and grandeur of the display.

There is no extortion of any account as far as we have seen. We had a good dinner yesterday at the Kentucky state building for 75 cents, as good as the United States Hotel gives, except perhaps in variety, but it is not necessary to pay even that. Others of our party got a sufficient lunch for about half that sum, and in the future we will profit by their experience.

We have seen the Fair; that is, we have seen a little of it and walked around the remainder. This, I doubt not

PALMER NEWS.

MR. LAWRENCE'S ASSAILANT CAUGHT.

He Practically Gives Himself Up at Gilbertville.—Says He Did It in Self-Defense.

The mulatto who so brutally pounded S. W. Lawrence on Wednesday o last week was taken into custody at Gilbertville last Saturday night about 9 o'clock. He had gone into the shoe store of George C. Stevenson to buy a pair of shoes, and Mr. Stevenson thought from his appearance that he was the man wanted here and sent his son out for an officer. He soon returned with Officer F. E. Crawford, who laid his hand on the fellow's shoulder and said "I guess you're the man I want." He then looked at the fellow's left leg and finding a number of shot marks told him he would have to go along, to which he willingly agreed. The officer called another man to his assistance, and it was well that he did so, for in taking the fellow through the street he raised one arm a little and attempted to take something from his pocket with the other hand. That something proved to be a large stone in a stocking, the same kind of a weapon with which he attacked Mr. Lawrence. The officer was too quick for him, however. On his person was found about $15 in money and a deed for a piece of real estate in Tacoma, Washington, made out to Charles G. Fields, which the fellow says is his name, he having made the purchase last fall out of his savings. He is about 5 feet 4 inches tall, and will weigh about 130 pounds. He says he is a cook by trade, and has worked for some years on the Pacific coast. He was brought to Palmer Sunday morning and placed in the lockup, where large crowds gathered to see and talk to him, which could be done through the window of the corridor from the outside. He appeared perfectly willing to talk except with members of Mr. Foster's family, at whose house the assault was committed, and willingly sat for his photograph for the newspapers.

The court room was crowded Monday morning when his case was heard, many women being present. There were a number of drunks to be disposed of first, and it was about 10.30 when Fields was brought in. The long wait did not thin out the crowd, but added more to it, and when the supply of seats gave out some of the women considered the settee usually reserved for the prisoners good enough for them, and as it was partly filled with the drunks awaiting sentence a stranger in the room might naturally have wondered what they were charged with. Fields was charged with assault with intent to kill and pleaded not guilty. He said he preferred to have the matter go before the higher court, and was accordingly bound over to the September term of the superior court in the sum of $1600, which he could not furnish and was accordingly committed. He said he would like to make a statement of how the affair occurred, but the court thought he could do that later, as the case was continued at his request. He then sat down and commenced to make an explanation to the women who sat near him, and they all crowded about to hear what he had to say. About a dozen commenced to ask him questions at once, but Sheriff Brainerd took him back to his cell before he had time to answer them all or give his story of the assault.

Fields's story is that he struck Mr. Lawrence in self-defense. When arrested he told Officer Crawford that he was attacked by Mr. Lawrence and to defend himself struck one blow, which knocked him down. He then started for the house to tell "the boss," as he called the owner of the place, Mr. Foster, what had been done, but just as he had almost reached the door young Johnson appeared and without any warning shot him. To a JOURNAL reporter Sunday Fields said that he had relatives in New York, and was on his way to see them and try to get a place as cook on some vessel. His clothes were in poor condition from his long tramp, and he wanted to get some which looked respectable, as it would be of no use to try for a place as cook unless he appeared well. Accordingly he went to Mr. Foster's house, where he had worked the day before, and asked for work. Mr. Lawrence came to the door and told him that he would give him employment if he understood the work, and showed him what to do. After a time his employer began to find fault with the way in which the work was done, and Fields finally suggested that perhaps Mr. Lawrence didn't know as much about the work as he claimed to, whereupon Mr. Lawrence ordered him to clear out and be quick about it, at the same time picking up a pitchfork and coming toward him. In running around the wagon he struck his foot against a stone and picked it up, pretending to throw it, and when Mr. Lawrence dodged then he got a chance to hit him with it. Those who know Mr. Lawrence give no credence whatever to the story.

The 30 shot which young Johnson fired into his leg as he was running away bothered him a good deal, and he would have given himself up that afternoon he says, and told how the affair happened, only that he heard guns fired at different times, and feared that he might be shot if he did, as in Virginia where he was born and on the Pacific coast where he had lately been "niggers didn't count for much," and he didn't know how it might be here. He could hear the searching parties Wednesday, and several times he saw those who were looking for him. He slept out nights, and found the mosquitoes, frogs and other "varmints" pretty thick. One day a man with a gun stood within a few feet of him, and he thought he was done for, but the man finally went off without discovering him. Saturday he applied at the Makepeace farm for some breakfast, and was chased by two young men with guns, but they did not dare shoot him for fear that they might get into trouble. He applied at another place for supper, and after getting some returned and stole a kitten which he saw playing about, taking it into the woods with him. He gave as a reason that he always liked cats. He talks in a rather low voice and does not get excited. He moralizes a good deal on every man having what is right and justly due him, and there are some indications that he is not exactly right mentally. He knew that the officers were looking for him, and as his leg was getting pretty painful concluded to give himself up. He accordingly went into the shoe store, and says he knew when the proprietor sent out for an officer.

Fields is the fellow who on the morning of the assault on Mr. Lawrence tried to coax the boys away from a house on Highland avenue, his evident intention being robbery.

PALMER MILLS TO SHUT DOWN.

An Enforced Vacation for About 2000 Operatives.

Palmer is to have a taste of the financial depression which has made its appearance in the West and is working east. This taste, which it is to be hoped will develop into nothing more, will consist of the shutting down of all the mills in Three Rivers, Thorndike and Bondsville to-morrow for periods ranging from two to four weeks. This will withdraw a large amount of money from circulation, and the town will very naturally feel the effects. The shut-down is necessitated by the poor state of business throughout the country and the consequent lack of a market for the goods, for which there is not only no demand but no sale. Several years ago one of the mills, having an extra large stock of goods on hand, put them into the auction houses and sold them for what they would bring. Now there is no sale for the goods even in this manner. Of course it would be foolish for the mills to go on producing goods when their storehouses are full and no market in sight, even for what is already manufactured.

At the mills of the Boston Duck Co. in Bondsville some 325 hands will be thrown out of work for two weeks, the pay roll being about $2400 a week. The bleachery and dye works will be run as usual. No rent will be charged the idle employes who occupy the company's tenements. There has been no previous shut-down at this mill, but in 1890 it ran four days a week for a month.

At Three Rivers the entire works will be closed for four weeks, throwing 800 hands out of employment and withdrawing from $5200 to $5500 a week from circulation. There is a large quantity of goods on hand. This mill has never before had a shut-down, but in 1884 ran only 4 days a week during February, and at other times has been kept running when the goods did not sell for the cost of material and manufacture.

At Thorndike 550 hands will be laid off and $4000 a week for four weeks will make quite a difference with the merchants of that village. No rent will be charged those who occupy the company's tenements during the shut-down. The mills have not experienced a shut-down since the war, but in 1884 ran on half time for a month.

The withdrawal of about $12,000 a week from the money to be spent in town naturally makes the merchants feel rather blue, especially in the other villages, where the most of their custom comes from the mill employes, and in Three Rivers and Thorndike there is talk of taking off the meat carts and order teams from their routes and letting the consumers go to the stores for what they want. In Bondsville the amount of money to be withdrawn is not so large, and nothing of this kind is being considered. The lack of money to spend will be felt in this village not a little, for nearly every grocer runs a team to one or more of the villages, and the markets also have more or less trade in these sections, while every store in the place has customers among those who will have little money to spend during the next month. No great exodus of people from the town is expected. It is the season of the year when many would like to have a vacation, August being the worst month in the mills, and they will take advantage of the shut-down to visit relatives in other sections or do work about their places which they cannot find time to do out of working hours. When the mills start up again about all of the old employes will be found back in their places once more.

Base Ball.

The Palmers contended with an aggregation of players under the name of the Holyokes last Saturday. Among them were "Mickey" Welch of the New Yorks, O'Neil of the St. Louis Browns and Yale Law Schools, a player from the Dovers, and others. The home team was a little afraid of the combination when it went to bat the first thing, and allowed the visitors five runs as a starter when they should have been shut out. After that the boys steadied down and played good ball, the game being worth seeing. The Holyokes got three more runs in the fourth and one in the sixth, mostly on errors, while the Palmers scored two in the seventh and one in the eighth, pounding out three in the ninth. The Palmers lost another run by poor coaching on third early in the game. The best playing was done by Roach, Lombard and Rafferty in the field, while Sullivan of Bondsville played an excellent game behind the bat. The score was 9 to 6 The Palmers will play the Westfields at Westfield to-morrow and the Westfields will play here next week Saturday, Aug. 5. The Southbridge club will play here Aug. 12. Aug. 19th there will be a game for $100 a side and gate receipts between the Bondsvilles and Palmers. Each has won a game in the series, and an exciting contest is looked for. Sedgwick, the Yale pitcher, will probably play with the Bondsvilles. The Wares will play here Saturday, Sept. 2. Manager Conroy has signed Rafferty, shortstop of last year's Milwaukees, for the remainder of the season. He commences playing with the team in to-morrow's game.

Fred Huntley has returned from a visit to Fitchburg.

L. H. Brigham and Miss Brigham have returned from the World's Fair.

Fred O. Munger is officiating at the organ in St. Paul's Universalist church during the absence of the organist, Mrs. H. M. Auger.

A bicycling party from Chicopee, consisting of two gentlemen and four ladies, passed through town Monday on their way to Boston.

The floor in a shed attached to Dr. W. H. Stowe's barn gave away Tuesday evening, badly damaging two carriages, one of which was nearly new.

William Keith, of G. A. Bills' market, has been laid up part of the week as the result of injuries received by being thrown from a carriage Sunday.

A piece of land containing about six acres, with the buildings thereon, near the Hastings bridge, will be sold at auction on the premises next Thursday at 10 o'clock a. m.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will meet next Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the store of O. P. Allen to perfect arrangements for the September fair.

Persons going out of town for a vacation should remember that they can have the JOURNAL sent them wherever they may be, and the address changed as often as may be desired.

The water in the pipes of the Palmer Water Company was shut off for a short time Sunday on account of a break in one of the old lead pipes which were not replaced by cement ones.

Mary J. Plympton and William M. Brigham have filed petitions for a jury to assess damages done their land by the change of grades of the highway and railroad at Blanchardville.

Miss Anna Fisherdick, who has occupied a position as teacher at Chadron, Neb., has been engaged as assistant at the high school, to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Miss Helen Cobb.

Commencing next Tuesday the Boston and Albany road will sell round trip tickets to Springfield, on account of the Advent campmeeting, for 55 cents. Tickets good any time before Aug. 12th.

Miss Ferry of Silver street is riding a ladies' New Mail bicycle, purchased through the agency of E. A. Buck & Co. They have also this week sold a Juno bicycle to Miss Lizzie McAuliffe of Monson.

At St. Paul's Universalist church next Sunday morning Rev. H. F. Moulton will preach on "St. Paul's Conception of God." The church will be closed for the next two Sundays or more, as the pastor is to be away on his vacation.

Five parcels of land belonging to the estate of the late David Knox will be sold at auction next Tuesday at 2 o'clock p.m. Included in the above is the homestead on West Main street, besides several desirable building lots, and land across the river in Monson.

A party of about thirty young people, chaperoned by Mrs. E. C. Sexton, enjoyed a ride to Forest Lake last Friday afternoon. They left town about 3 o'clock and at the lake refreshments were served and the time spent in dancing and boating. They returned about 11 p. m.

Rev. S. T. Frost returned Tuesday from New York and will occupy his pulpit in the Baptist church next Sunday morning, his subject being "The Cry of a Penitent." At the evening service, which is at 7, the subject will be "Our Need of the Power of the Holy Spirit."

Rev. H. F. Moulton closed last Sunday evening in the lecture room of St. Paul's Universalist church his series of talks in exposition of the Beatitudes. They have been interesting and helpful, as the increasing attendance has proven, the largest number being present last evening.

A. E. Fitch went to New York yesterday to say good bye to his sister, Mrs. W. F. Gates, who sails to-morrow with her husband for Guatemala City, Central America, to take up mission work under the auspices of the Presbyterian Board. Mr. Fitch will spend Sunday at Watch Hill, returning home the next day.

D. J. Marsh, the auditor in the matter of changing the grade of the highway and the railroad at Blanchardville and Tenneyville, has filed his report and finds that the cost of the changes was $30,050, of which the Boston and Albany Company must pay $19,533, the commonwealth $7512, while the town of Palmer pays $3005.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Leach, Misses May Robinson, Ida Smith and Mabel Smith of this place and Miss Bessie Sutcliffe of Monson have returned from their trip to the World's Fair. Mr. and Mrs. James O. Hamilton of Thorndike, who went with them, will visit friends in Waukeska, Wis., before they return home.

The marriage of Rev. H. F. Moulton, pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church, and Miss Effie G. Smith will take place in the church next Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and will be public. After the ceremony at the church there will be a reception to relatives at the residence of the bride's mother on Thorndike street.

There will be an excursion to Coney Island a week from to-morrow night. Tickets will be on sale at all the stations on the Boston and Albany road between Springfield and Spencer, also along the New London Northern road. A special train will leave Palmer at 9 p. m., returning reach here at 6 a. m. Monday. Fare from Palmer, $2.25.

Operations have commenced this week at the Blanchardville station of the Palmer and Monson Electric Co. They are furnishing the service in Monson from this point, and it consists of the street lighting and what stores and houses are ready. R. A. Moffatt is running the station at present. The lighting service in this town is still supplied from the old station.

S. Blodgett, the florist, is building a new connection on the west end of his greenhouses. Heretofore he has had to put up a board fence on this end of the houses each winter to break the force of the wind, so he is now putting up an addition with glazed sides and roof, which will enable him to pass from one house to another at either end without going out of doors.

The New London Northern road announces an excursion to Mystic Island, Watch Hill and Block Island next Thursday. A special train will be run from Brattleboro. The fare for the round trip will be only $1.50, and the tickets will be good to return on the next day. An excursion will be run to-morrow from Westfield, Springfield, Indian Orchard and North Wilbraham to the same places.

There was a meeting of three quite old gentlemen at J. A. Palmer's one day this week. Nehemiah Conkey, aged 87, of Hardwick, has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Palmer; Porter Cross, aged 86, of Springfield, father of Dr. C. W. Cross, was at Mr. Palmer's a part of the week, and John Foster, aged 83, a neighbor, happened to call, thus making up the party. Their combined ages was 256 years.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening Miss Bessie Royce read an essay on the golden-rods, and Miss Bertha Royce one on the daisies. Dr. Stowe brought in specimens of the calla palustris, the only calla native to North America, and which is quite a rare find. It came from a swamp near Bondsville. At the next meeting O. P. Allen will have an essay on the mints, and Miss Grace Huntley will read about the milkweeds.

The pastor of the Congregational church will preach next Sunday morning on "Backslidden Orthodoxy," and in the evening on "Man's Fourth Need—Forgiveness." The "Class for Learners and Workers" will meet next Tuesday evening in the church parlors, as it proves too large for the rooms at the parsonage. The meeting will open with a brief discussion of the question "What is the work of a Sunday school teacher?" The Bible lesson will be Paul at Miletus. Everybody invited.

W. H. Hitchcock's horse, which was hitched to a fence in the rear of C. B. Fiske's residence Wednesday afternoon, was attacked by a family of wasps which had made their home in the ground at the bottom of the post to which the animal was tied and resented the interference in their household affairs. The animal was stung several times and made nearly frantic before the trouble was discovered by a neighbor and the horse taken away. When it reached the barn it was trembling like a leaf.

The greenhouse of S. Blodgett was struck by lightning in the shower about 7 o'clock Wednesday evening. The bolt evidently came along a wire fence which is fastened to one corner of the house, and jumped off the wire through the boarding to the heating pipes insides, by means of which it reached the ground. Mr. Blodgett saw the bolt when it came down and remarked that it must have struck somewhere near. About ten minutes later, on looking out, he saw the smoke and flames coming up over the greenhouse. The fire was put out with a few pails of water, and the damage is not very heavy.

The need of more lockup room was demonstrated last Saturday night, when all the four cells which are usable were filled, and in some of them there were two prisoners. There are two other cells for which the town has been paying rent for years, but which have been unavailable for the reason that the corridor on which they are has been used as a storage room for liquors which have been seized and declared forfeited to the commonwealth. Some of these liquors have been there until their age would delight a connoisseur in that line, and the selectmen will make an effort to have them sent away to Boston and the cells made available once more.

There was a magnificent sunset Wednesday evening, and those who did not see it missed something fine. A thunder storm came up from the west about 7, accompanied by considerable wind, which rolled the heavy masses of low-flying clouds about in all directions. The storm seemed to divide, the heaviest part going north of the village, while behind it the sky was clear once more. The clear sky in the west, with the smoke-colored clouds overhead, the edges tinted by the sun and constantly changing in hue, while to the east the clouds were of that intense steel-blue black which looks so particularly angry and threatening, produced an effect which needed to be seen to be appreciated, and which would make the fortune of an artist who could reproduce it.

The assessors have completed their work on the valuation of the town and are preparing the tax book for the collector. The following figures give the valuation of the town this year as compared with 1892:

| | 1893. | 1892. |
|---|---|---|
| Personal | $ 828,286.38 | $ 805,810.18 |
| Real Estate | 1,894,149.85 | 1,869,153.85 |
| Total | $2,722,436.23 | $2,674,964.03 |
| No. Residents assessed | 706 | 757 |
| Non-residents " | 97 | 100 |
| Polls | 1716 | 1692 |
| Horses | 533 | 497 |
| Cows | 718 | 740 |
| Sheep | 120 | 143 |
| Neat Cattle | 317 | 302 |
| Swine | 103 | 86 |
| Dwelling Houses | 882 | 895 |
| Acres of Land | 17,195 | 17,253 |
| Fowls | 6,496 | 5,751 |

This shows a net increase in valuation of $47,872.20. The appropriations are considerably larger this year than last, but the tax rate is only 50 cents on $1000 greater than last year, or $13.80.

There was a very pleasant party given by Miss Maud G. Kenerson at the residence of her father on Park street Wednesday evening. Arrangements had been made for holding a garden party on the lawn, but the rain early in the evening prevented the outdoor festivities, and the gathering took place indoors. There were nearly a hundred young people present, and all passed a very enjoyable evening. Misses Grace Huntley, Pearl Lawton, Bessie Royce, Eloise Stone and Flora Studley received with Miss Kenerson. In the search for peanuts, which were secreted around the rooms, Miss Annie Fish secured the greatest number and was awarded the first prize, a Palmer souvenir spoon, and the prize for the least number was given to Edwin C. Brooks. After refreshments, consisting of ice cream, cake, etc., had been served, the party adjourned to the opera house, the use of which was kindly given by Mr. Holden, and the rest of the evening was spent in dancing.

State Primary School Notes.

The schools close to-day for two weeks.

Miss Hancock visited the school yesterday.

The Ladies' Aid Society gave a supper and lawn party at Charles Shumway's Wednesday evening. There was a very good attendance in spite of the the threatening weather.

The mill will be shut down Saturday for two weeks. The reason given is business depression. Those occupying the company's tenements will not be charged rent during the shut-down.

A party comprising Charles Armstrong and family, Miss Mabel Ryther, Olin Parent, Mr. and Mrs. Hale and Miss Lulu Shumway leave to-morrow for Sachem's Head, Ct., for a two-week's stay.

The ball game here Saturday between the Knowles Pump Works team of Warren and the Bondsvilles resulted in favor of the Warren team by a score of 5 to 2. It was without doubt the best game ever seen in the place. Sedgwick, who has just returned from Chicago, where he pitched for Yale, played with the local team and deserves the credit for holding the Warren team down. The game was started with Shea in the box, but the Warrens took kindly to his delivery and batted out five runs in two innings and a half. Then Sedgwick went in, and after that only man saw second and four first. If the boys could have batted they would have won the game as it was, but they could not touch Cunningham. Several hits were made, but he kept them scattered. Slate caught a fine game, only two men stealing second. Sedgwick pitched a magnificent game, striking out ten men. This was the first chance in two years which the local admirers have had to see him.

THREE RIVERS.

Mr. Desaulnier is spending a vacation in Montreal.

S. P. Barnes is spending his vacation at Money Island.

Mrs. Moore has returned from Lowell after a week's vacation.

John Hancock, who accidently received an ugly gash on the head while working on the electric light line between here and Bondsville, is recovering rapidly under the care of Dr. Bouley.

The series of ball games which had been arranged between the Three Rivers boys and those of Palmer is postponed on account of the shutting down of the mills, which has caused a great many of the athletes to leave town.

Mrs. Mitchell and child, of Slatersville, R. I., are spending a vacation with Mrs. Mitchell's mother, Mrs. Manning. They came here in order to avoid the measles, which are prevalent at their home, but the baby was taken with them the next day after arriving here.

The revival meetings which have been held here for about three weeks ended Monday, having gathered 22 into the fold. Mr. Anderson has gone to New York in order to devote some time to evangelical work in that city, and Mr. and Mrs. Paquette have gone to Northfield to sing at Mr. Moody's meetings in that place.

Master Raymond Russell was run over by a bicyclist one evening this week and received quite severe injuries, his head being cut and several bruises inflicted on him. It has been the opinion of many persons lately who have observed how recklessly some of the wheelmen whirl along the sidewalks in the darkness that serious accidents might take place.

Mr. Trudeau had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday morning as he was starting out with his meat cart on the usual morning route. As he got on his cart in front of the hotel the horse suddenly started and broke one of the traces. The animal is one that has arrived here lately from the west, is somewhat skittish and became frightened, kicking viciously at the vehicle and greatly imperiling Mr. Trudeau, who was on the seat. However, before much damage was done a number of men hurried to the place and assisted in liberating the animal from the wagon. The only harm done was a number of cuts on the horse's legs, and a few repairs necessary on the harness.

THORNDIKE.

Charles Page, employed by A. M. Bond, was hurt Wednesday by a fall while at work, but is about with the aid of a crutch.

Edward Taylor and William Bert Whistle of Slatersville, R. I., have been the guests of William McKenzie during the past week.

Matthew Coffee and wife, who have been enjoying the sea breezes at Newport, R. I., for a week, are expected home this week.

Mr. and Mrs. James McKelligett, who have been visiting friends here for a few days, returned to their home in Warren on Monday.

Charles Bangle of Indian Orchard, who it was reported would go into business here, has given up the idea and will locate in Three Rivers instead.

Several persons are complaining of unknown parties coming into their yards and stealing flowers and doing other lawless acts. If they are caught they will no doubt be taught a lesson.

Rev. E. B. Blanchard will take his vacation the first three Sundays in August, and there will be no preaching service during that time. The social meetings of the church will be continued as usual.

There is talk among the merchants of not running their delivery wagons during the shut-down. Agent Hobbs is reported as saying that the mills will positively start again in four weeks, and if the goods now on hand are selling will continue.

A party numbering twelve or fifteen from this place and about seven from Monson and Palmer are to take a trip to Chicago about the middle of August to visit the World's Fair, and before their return will visit other cities, including Washington, D. C.

Death of Mrs. Edward Flynn.

Mrs. Edward Flynn, an old and respected resident of this place, died at her home on Church street Wednesday afternoon after a long illness. Her funeral took place from St. Mary's Catholic church this morning with a high requiem mass. Mr. Mulvaney of Ware, Misses Clifford, Leary and Quirk of Bondsville assisting the choir. A husband and three children survive her, and have the sympathy of a large number of friends in their deep sorrow.

Closing The Mills.

The announcement that the mills were to shut down carried much surprise to some, and on the other hand it was nothing but what was expected from the present condition of affairs. The mills will close to-morrow for four weeks. There is on hand in store about 2500 cases of manufactured goods without a market. About 575 or 600 hands will be out of employment. The weekly pay roll amounted to $4000. Matters will be much benefited, it is hoped, by a reduction in stock, and that when business picks up again it will start with a boom. There are some poor people who will feel the effects of this move badly, while others welcome an opportunity to rest and take their vacations.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Bennett—Moore.

A very pretty wedding occurred at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Moore, in North Hatfield, July 20th, the contracting parties being Miss Jennie E., daughter of H. T. Moore, and Arthur H. Bennett of Monson. The bride was charming in white brocade silk and pearls. She carried bride roses. The maid of honor, Miss Nellie S. Jones, cousin of the bride, was dressed in pink silk and carried pink sweet peas. Gilbert Morton acted as best man. The bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Harrington. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. M. Woods under an arch of green surmounted by a lover's knot of white flowers. The house was profusely decorated with flowers. About 150 guests were present from Ansonia and Milford, Ct., Boston, Fitchburg, Springfield, Hampden, Easthampton, Northampton, Worthington, Whately, South Deerfield and Sunderland. After the ceremony refreshments were served. The bridal party left amid a shower of rice for a short trip, after which they will reside in Monson. The bride is a beautiful lady and a great favorite with all. The presents were numerous and valuable, among them being: From the groom, a horse and carriage; grandfather of the bride, A. Snow, silver service; father and mother of the bride, china tea set; family of the groom, a chamber suit of antique oak; Mr. and Mrs. C. A. and Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Jones, a full set of china.

Sudden Death of a Monson Boy.

The sad death of Fred Clough at Somersville, Ct., Saturday, was a great shock to all who knew him. He was employed at Warren, and had ridden from there on his wheel Friday and seemed as well as usual. In company with two other young men he went out in a boat and in bathing. They had been in twice when Fred complained of being cold, but said he would go in once more. In some way the boat capsized and all went into the water, but Fred never rose, although he did not sink, the body remaining only about two feet under the surface. All efforts to get him ashore were futile, as he could not help himself in the least. In about fifteen minutes others were summoned, but life was extinct, and the general opinion is that he had a chill, and the physician summoned said that if the body had been taken from the water in five minutes it would have done no good. The funeral was held at Monson Tuesday, Rev. F. S. Hatch officiating. The floral offerings were many and very beautiful. The Monson Odd Fellows, of which order C. F. Clough, Sr., is a member, sent a harp, the Warren Bicycle Club a broken wheel, Mrs. Horace Squier a wreath, and Mrs. Everett Robbins cut flowers.

Miss Grace Cushman is quite ill.

Miss Mary J. Gage is visiting at Warren.

Mrs. Rufus Leach of Somerville is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Day.

C. L. Stiles of Providence, R. I., formerly station agent here, spent Sunday at his home in town.

E. D. Cushman has returned from his trip to the West, taking in the World's Fair on his return.

Rufus Fay and family leave for Maine next week, where they will remain about three weeks.

St. Patrick's congregation is to have its annual excursion soon, but plans are not yet fully developed.

The bicyclists' picnic at Forest Lake last Saturday was very much enjoyed. About twenty attended.

George Peck of Waltham is spending the week with his father, Levi Peck, in the south part of the town.

Miss Luther Clark, who has been spending a few weeks with friends at Cleveland, Ohio, returned Friday.

Frank Williams has returned from his vacation, and resumed his duties at R. M. Reynolds's straw works.

Mrs. John Hitchcock of Springfield is spending a few weeks with Mrs. Edson Walker on East Hill.

R. M. & T. Reynolds will not start up the carding, spinning and weaving in their old mill until August 8th.

F. W. King, formerly of Monson, is now proprietor of the Huyett Music Co., on Dearborn street in Chicago.

Ralph Towne of Springfield spent a few days the fore part of the week with L. N. Chaffee on Green street.

W. N. Flynt has put in a new cement walk leading to the park, thus making the approach much more easy.

H. H. Wood is painting the exterior of Gage Bros.' store, also the residence of Miss Nichols on Green street.

Miss Mattie Manion of Port Chester, N. Y., who has been the guest of John J. Sullivan, has returned to her home.

Miss Lizzie Lull, who spending three weeks at Willimantic and other places, has returned home.

Mrs. Henry A. King of Springfield has been the guest this week of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Flynt.

Frank and Charlie McGuire of North Monson expect to leave soon for Nantasket Beach, for a week's outing.

Charles Shaw has rented one of the tenements in the bank block and expects to move in about the first of August.

Misses Gertrude Bennett and Mabel Watson have gone to the Atlantic House at Watch Hill for the summer.

A concrete walk is to be laid south of the Methodist church to join the one in front of S. F. Cushman & Son's office.

The work of putting in electric lights at St. Patrick's church and the parochial residence will be completed to-morrow.

Fred Williams of South Monson has gone to Nova Scotia, where he will join his wife, who is spending the summer there.

Alexander Murphy, boss dyer for the Heimann & Lichten straw works, has gone to Novia Scotia for a month's vacation.

The W. N. Flynt Granite Co. is furnishing stone for the foundation of John Keefe's new house near F. L. Bliss's blacksmith shop.

"Who gave the item to the reporter as to the time for holding the town meeting last Monday?" is the question asked by many.

Prof. Joseph Hartzell, who has been spending a few months as the guest of Miss Helen Thresher, has returned to his home in Ohio.

F. L. Bliss, bookkeeper for the Heimann & Lichten straw works, has returned to his home in Norwich, Ct., for a few weeks' vacation.

The concrete walk has been laid in front of Charles Merrick's and Mrs. Sarah Fay's residences, also in front of the cemetery on Main street.

Those within easy access of the south straw shop who desire to take boarders the coming season will please leave their names at the office.

About 200 ladies attended the lecture on cooking in Memorial Hall Tuesday afternoon given by Miss Charlotte Wil's of the Boston Cooking School.

E. P. Haynes, clerk at W. N. Flynt & Sons' store, is taking a week's vacation. E. B. Potter has taken his place on the order team during his absence.

James Barry, Frank and Charles Maguire, George and Henry and George Darling, Jr., start Saturday for Nantasket, where they will camp out for a week.

During the thunder shower Saturday evening a number of the electric lights in the south part of the town were burned out. They were repaired Tuesday.

Miss Julia and Maggie Leary, who have been in Denver, Colorado, for three years, are home on a visit. They spent some time at the World's Fair on their way home.

This has been a week of picnics—The bicyclists at Forest Lake Saturday, the Methodists at Evergreen Park Wednesday, and the Croquet Club at the same place Thursday.

The annual basket picnic of the Methodist Sunday school was held at Evergreen Park Wednesday. The day was fair, and about 150 availed themselves of the day's outing.

A. H. Bennett, clerk at W. N. Flynt & Son's store, returned Tuesday from his vacation, accompanied by his bride. They will board at the Cushman House for the present.

Dr. G. E. Fuller has sold to W. N. Flynt two valuable lots of wood land, one containing 60 acres of heavy wooded timber, situated west of Mr. Flynt's park, the other 30 acres, west of the quarry. The reported price is $2000.

John Joyce, who was announced as missing last week, was discovered Saturday to have been at work on the farm of Judge Robinson, east of Palmer, being employed at haying. He had neglected to notify his family of his whereabouts, and they naturally felt alarmed.

The new electric light plant at Blanchardville started up last Saturday. The connections, however, were imperfect, and only a few places were lighted. W. N. Flynt & Sons' store, J. Pendergast's market and ice cream rooms, R. P. Cushman's and A. D. Norcross' residences are now connected.

The Monsons again tried to play ball on Flynt's Park Saturday, having arranged a game with the East Longmeadows, which resulted as usual in a victory for the visitors. The score was as follows:

| Innings, | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| East Longmeadows, | 0 | 1 | 0 | 4 | 3 | 1 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0—10 |

Flynt Park has received several contributions this week which all will be glad to see. Engineer Keuerson of the Boston and Albany Railroad at Palmer gave a tame fox; Frank Beach of Monson a pair of black breasted game bantams; Judge Newton of Monson, parts of the skeleton of an 80-foot whale.

In the opinion of the committee, building the schoolhouse on the town lot will not accommodate more than a dozen children, owing to the necessity of arranging them with regard to grade. Then many object to the lot on account of the proximity of the saw mill on one side and a polluted stream on the other.

A bank wall is to be put in on Main street, running south from Rogers' store to a point north of the bridge, which will admit of a driveway to Hampden avenue. The walk, which is to be of concrete, will be raised about three feet. Joel H. Thompson has the contract to furnish stone for the wall, and has already commenced work.

Prof. Arthur Newell Burke, who has been in town for the past three weeks arranging for next year's work at the Academy, returned Saturday to Norwich, Ct., after which he will spend a few weeks at the World's Fair. Miss Ada Wing of Palmer, who taught in the Academy the past year, has been secured for the coming year.

The following is taken from the Hartford Daily Courant of July 27: "The Keeney Bros. are to be congratulated on having a small stable that can carry off two first moneys, one each day, and leave a possible third for to-day; and their driver, Mr. Frank Templeton, is a most gentlemanly driver and expert reinsman." The Keeney Bros. formery lived in Monson, and have many friends here, as also has Mr. Templeton, all of whom are glad of their success.

All but one of the merchants, and all but one of the manufacturers of the town have signed an agreement to close their stores one day and take a trip to some seaside resort. G. L. Keeney has his store in the same room with the post office and so cannot close, and D. W. Ellis & Son have too many orders on hand to make shutting down advisable. Arrangements have been completed and the excursion will take place next Wednesday, the place being Watch Hill and the fare for the round trip being $1. A special train will leave Monson at 7.15 a. m. and will make no stops. A shore dinner will be served at Watch Hill for 50 cents per plate. Those who wish to take the sail to Block Island can do so by paying 25 cents more on the boat.

The vacancies in the faculty of the Academy have been filled, and it is now composed of Prof. Arthur Newell Burke, acting principal, W. E. Morse, Miss Harriet R. Pease of Somers, Ct., preceptress, and Miss Maud E. Strong of Northampton. Mr. Morse is a graduate of Wesleyan and formerly taught the Portland high school. He will have charge of the classical studies taught by Mr. Dustan. Miss Strong graduated at Smith College this year. Miss Pease is a former teacher at the Academy, and was well liked, both by the scholars and the public at large. She has taught one year at Wichita, Kan., and studied one year at the Boston University since she left Monson. The committee feels quite fortunate in again securing her services. Miss Ada Smith has been secured as librarian. Concrete walks are being laid around the Academy, which adds much to the beauty and comfort of the grounds, the old walks having been badly washed out.

The adjourned town meeting was held in Memorial Hall Monday afternoon, to consider the schoolhouse question. Considerable feeling existed among the voters, and there was a good attendance. S. F. Howard was moderator. Geo. H. Newton, chairman of the committee appointed to look up suitable grounds upon which to build a schoolhouse, reported that of the many sites looked at three had been selected as the most desirable: The lot opposite W. Needham's house in the north part of the town; the lot opposite C. F. Orcutt's new laundry; and the lot owned by the town opposite R. Murphy's on State street. It was voted to build a two-room schoolhouse on the town lot on State street, and a committee of three, composed of Horace Squier, A. A. Gage and Dr. C. W. Jackson, was appointed with full power to go ahead, the building to be ready if possible by the time the schools open in the fall. The sum of $4000 was appropriated for the work. In regards to the schoolhouse in district No. 5, it was voted to buy a new lot and move the building, the town appropriating $700 for that purpose.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Palmer of Toledo and friend are guests of Miss Mary Beebe.

Miss Lilla Phelps has been spending a week with Miss Emily Phelps.

Dr. Charles Merrick of the Worcester high school is home on his vacation.

The Young People's Agricultural Club held a picnic at Foskit's glen Wednesday.

Luther Brewer, principal of the high school at Milford, is spending his vacation at home.

Mrs. Houghton of Springfield has been spending a few days with friends in town the past week.

Irving Wetherbee, who has been at the World's Fair the past three months, returned home Saturday.

Mrs. Mapes of Texas, with her son, from Mt. Hermon, have been the guests of Mrs. Wells Phelps recently.

Fred Starkweather and sister, Miss Emma, of Northampton, were the guests of Prof. Fred Merrick and family over Sunday.

WARREN.

The Knowles pump works discharged a number of men this week.

Miss Emery of Springfield has been spending a few days at Mrs. Strickland's.

Mr. Whiting and mother of Worcester have been the guests of Rev. Harris Hale this week.

The shower Wednesday night was very welcome, as it was the only rain to do much good which we have had for many weeks.

The Warren Cotton Mills will shut down to-morrow noon for four weeks, and 600 hands will be thrown out of employment.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fairbanks and daughter and Wilson Fairbanks and wife start for the Adirondacks about the first of August.

A number of young men who were associates of Fred Clough, who was drowned, attended the funeral at Monson. He had made many friends during his residence in town.

The Wardrobe Club left Tuesday night for Providence, for its annual fishing trip. The long duster and stovepipe hat were, as in the past, conspicuous, the hats bearing a ribbon on which were the letters "Wardrobe Club, No. 11½." Each man was equipped with a fish horn, no two sounding alike. The list of those who went is: C. B. Blair, T. H. Jones, W. A. Putnam, Fred Allen, W. H. Hitchcock, W. L. Curtis, F. A. Keith, W. H. Bishop, W. E. Patrick, W. B. Ramsdell, George E. Tarbell, H. H. Blair; N. R. Moore, J. A. Hitchcock, M. Burroughs, T. E. Gould, William Shaw.

John Haskell Powers, one of Warren's oldest inhabitants, being 84 years, 11 months and 24 days, died at his home early Sunday morning. He had been in feeble health for several years, but was ill only a few days previous to his death. He was always identified with the best interests of the town, and was greatly esteemed by its citizens. For a number of years he manufactured woolen goods at the place now occupied by Sayles & Jenks. He was an ardent abolitionist, giving his time and money as he could to the support of the cause; a man of strict integrity, honest and truthful. He leaves a widow and one son, Capt. A. W. Powers of Green Bay, Wis.

WALES.

Harry Needham of Brooklyn, N. Y., has arrived for the summer.

Misses Edith Lilly and Perley Arnold of Stafford are spending a few days in town.

Merchant A. A. Corbett has returned from the World's Fair and tells of wonderful sights. He witnessed the burning of the cold storage building.

The will of the late Mary L. Shaw gives to Jane D. Wright $1500, and the remainder of her property to Nancy Johnson. Both are sisters of the deceased.

E. H. Coburn was thrown from the second story of the Excelsior mill last Friday and was severely injured by falling onto the team wagon below. He was pulling up machinery and the tackle block gave way, letting him out headlong. Dr. Chamberlain attended him and he is doing well.

Rev. Mr. Brown of North Carolina is spending a few days here. He is soliciting funds for a new school building for the colored people. He preached in the Baptist vestry last Sunday evening, and with the three colored people now living here sang several plantation songs. Mr. Brown is pastor of five colored churches in North Carolina, and has charge of a large school. He is a colored gentleman, and was educated at Shaw University, Raleigh.

A petition is said to have been circulated for the release of F. S. Gardner from jail, where he is working out a $300 fine for illegal liquor selling. No doubt the county commissioners will see the folly of towns raising money to shut up such holes and then sign petitions for the release of the offenders when caught. No wonder the laws are violated. It gives an officer a good heart to go on and prosecute and when convicted have the fathers of the town sign petitions for the criminals' release.

The Hegan mill has shut down for two or three weeks. The people last fall wanted a change, and are having it all around. Wonder how they like it. Will our Democratic orators next fall go on the stump and tell the fellows it has turned out just as they said it would if the Democrats get the power—good times, plenty of money, roast beef all around, short hours of labor, big wages, etc. It looks as if some of them would have to eat the roosters they displayed on their banners or go short. Probably they will tell them it comes of the poor management of the old administration, and their followers will swallow it and make an X wherever they see the word Democrat on their ballot.

WARE.

The work on the gingham mill at Ware Center has been suspended for three months.

Frank Fox gave the negro, who assaulted Mr. Lawrence at Palmer, a ride from Barre Plains to Ware a few days before the assault.

The Ware driving park is about ready for use, and season tickets are being sold at $5 each, giving the usual privileges of a trotting park. Henry M. Clark and F. A. Spencer have them for sale.

The Otis Company's Mills to Shut Down.

The calamity or blessing, according as one looks at it, has come to Ware at last, and is no less than the closing of the Otis Company's mills, the shut-down being to-morrow at noon, to continue one month. Most look upon it as a calamity; there are some, however, who are glad of a vacation that they would not be likely to take unless forced to. Merchants and business men have long faces, as the spending of something like $2000 per day or not having it to spend must make a great difference in business. There will be about 1750 hands thrown out of employment, with but little if any prospect of getting work elsewhere if they were to try. There has not been a shut-down of this magnitude for many years, if ever. In 1873 there was a dull time, and at the same time low water prevented running full time. E. H. Baker, agent for the company in Ware, says there is no reason to suppose that the shut-down will continue for more than the month of August. The company's mills at Three Rivers, Thorndike, Bondsville and Warren are to stop for the same time as the mills at Ware. The immediate cause for the shut-down is the great accumulation of goods, with no market for them.

CARD.—To the Monson Odd Fellows, the neighbors and friends, for their kind remembrance, aid and sympathy extended to us in our recent bereavement, we would express our gratitude and sincere and heartfelt thanks.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Dr. Thayer of Boston says Ayer's Hygienic Coffee is an admirable beverage, possessing none of the pernicious effects of coffee.

To prevent the hardening of the subcutaneous tissues of the scalp and the obliteration of the hair follicles, which cause baldness, use Hall's Hair Renewer.

The value of a good name was well exemplified the other day, when a man asked one of our druggists for a bottle of Sarsaparilla. "Whose?" inquired the clerk. "Whose? why, Ayer's of course. Ye don't suppose I'm going to run any risks with Hannah, do ye?"

A lady, whose hair came out with every combing, was induced to give Ayer's Hair Vigor a faithful trial. She did so, and not only was the loss of hair checked, but a new and vigorous growth soon succeeded that which had gone.

In these days of adulteration and fraud, in all branches of business and pursuits, it is pleasing to know that there is one medicine prepared which is strictly pure. Such a medicine is Sulphur Bitters in curing scrofula; you can depend on them every time. W. B. EVERTS, A. M., Charleston, S. C.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

No more tempting book has appeared in a long while than that just issued by Forbes & Wallace, "Books for Summer Reading." It will help hundreds of people to "stock up" for vacation week at small expense.

The Republican says:

People who want help in the selection of summer reading will be interested in the little pamphlet issued by Forbes & Wallace. It gives a list of the best books at remarkably low prices.

The Union says:

No one need fail of something to do in the lounging hours at mountain and shore, if they but consult the pretty brochure issued by Forbes & Wallace. It contains a list of novels by all of the leading authors, as well as the latest fiction of the day.

We say:

STORY OF GRATITUDE.

SIX PHYSICIANS, TWO CLAIRVOYANTS, AND ONE CHRISTIAN SCIENTIST

Fail to Help Mrs. N. E. Whitney, of Hillsboro Bridge, N. H.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE, N. H.—There is no better known nor more highly respected resident of this village than Mrs. N. E. Whitney. Her long and serious illness and her remarkable recovery of health through the aid of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, has made that medicine a necessity in every New Hampshire household.

Mrs. Whitney in speaking about her sickness, said "I had been gradually failing in health for a number of years, and was told by my physicians that I was in the last stages of Bright's Disease. I had been under the treatment at various times, of six physicians, two clairvoyants, and one Christian scientist, but received no benefit from any of them. I had given up all hope of ever being cured. I had no faith in the advertised medicines, and it seemed to me that every means of ever being cured had been tried except to use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which had been recommended. As a last resort I purchased a bottle; when I had used it I felt no better, but continued its use, and by the time I had used the second bottle I was greatly improved, and from that on I improved daily, and it was not long before I was able to be about the house, doing my regular household duties.

No tongue can tell how I suffered for the three years before I used Favorite Remedy. My age is 56, and I now weigh 135 pounds more than I ever did. Favorite Remedy restored me to health and strength, and if any one wishes to call upon or write me I will gladly tell them what this great medicine will do for them if afflicted as I was."

As a prominent physician recently said: "Any one suffering from kidney or urinary troubles, rheumatism, dyspepsia or any uric or lactic acid disease, it will cure them if their disease is within the reach of medicine."

LEON'S SARSAPARILLA

WILL CURE IT.

Before this Court Adjourns we want the Jury to hear the Testimony of Mr. Moses Morse.

The Kind that Never Fails

For 20 years I have had Rheumatism. During the time I have found it almost impossible to do my farm work, and have been confined to my room for weeks at a time, and I have hardly seen a day without pain. I had tried doctors and medicines almost without number, and I concluded I would give up trying to get better, but one of my neighbors who had been cured, advised me to take Leon's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and before long I began to get straightened out. My pain left me, and I became comfort I am now able to work with I was once, but not so young as I was, I rode the mowing machine in summer I forenoon and the horserake in the afternoon, and the boys said I was a pretty good man in haying yet. I know Leon's Sarsaparilla is a good medicine.

Respectfully, MOSES MORSE.

tures are as bleak and barren as those of Italy and Spain are elegant and voluptuous. So of other nations, the characteristics of each are very apparent with but little study.

Well, we have enjoyed the "Fair," and as someone of our party has said, the most interesting study of all is the people. Most apparently well-to-do and well-behaved, the Yankee, or perhaps the time has come to say American, type prevails, and all seem bound to see the most possible and get the most for their money. Thousands of well-to-do people bring their lunches into the grounds and eat them on the piazzas of the state buildings, steps of buildings, and grounds generally, wherever they happen to be at the lunch hour. The cause for this may not be wholly financial, for the prices on the grounds are not exorbitant, and a good lunch can be procured so reasonably that I think there must be other reasons. Our party found the smoke and beer of the cafes very offensive. The Wellington Catering Company, which runs most of the restaurants, has notices posted that smoking is permitted in all their cafes. There are restaurants in which there is but little smoking. I do not remember any notice forbidding it, but they are so few and usually distant that visitors cannot afford the walk necessary to reach them, and so perhaps do the next best thing, carry a lunch with them.

This afternoon we expect to leave for home. We have enjoyed our stay here and have enjoyed the Hotel Endeavor, and are glad to recommend it to all who intend to visit the Fair and desire a good quiet place amid the best surroundings. W. W. L.

Chicago, July 24, 1893.

A WORLD'S FAIR OUTFIT.

I want to tell you about the wardrobe with which one young lady is fitting herself to stay two weeks in Chicago in the early part of the season. She has a plain, braid bound, tailor made suit of navy blue broadcloth, with jacket to match, made double breasted, with a watteau plait in the back, full sleeves and fastened with large buttons. She will provide herself with a fine, small straw hat, with ribbon to match, and tan chamois gloves, and a pair of common sense shoes, worn two months before she leaves home, will insure her feet comfort and ease. She is going to make a black alapaca skirt, as it will not soil and dust can be easily shaken from it.

But it is her underwear in which there is a triumph of forethought. She expected to get two suits of gauze—not the combinations—wearing the one and putting the other in her satchel. These are quickly washed in a bowl if need be, and are easily dried and can be worn without ironing.

She is going to have a dark silk blouse to wear if the days are warm enough to make the cloth bodice uncomfortable, and with changes of black silk hose and some white silk handkerchiefs, which are so quickly made clean, her outfit is complete. Of course she will take a pair of light rubbers, an umbrella and all the toilet articles which a young woman may need; but all these, with a night dress, she can easily get into a grip of such modest size that she need not part company with it on the journey, thus saving herself the vexation of having her luggage checked, with all its accompanying annoyances.—Cor. Housekeepers' Weekly.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

A CAPTAIN'S BRAVERY.

In the latter part of the winter of 1864 Lee's army of northern Virginia was in cantonment along the Rapidan river, while the Union forces, under Gen. Meade, occupied the country about Culpeper Court House, facing the Confederates.

The winter had been so severe that military operations of any magnitude in Virginia were not deemed practicable, though throughout the winter the cavalry were kept employed on the Union side at least, in watching an extended line and from time to time making reconnoissances to develop the enemy, with a view to ascertaining if any considerable part of his force had been detached to other fields of operation farther south.

On one of the reconnoissances the event occured which I am about to relate.

It must be premised, to an understanding of what follows, that when the object of one army is to find out or develop facts as to the other, then this last thwarts attempts of the kind as far as possible in order to keep the adversary in ignorance. Thus if Gen. Meade desired to ascertain if the Confederate army in his front had been reduced by sending regiments elsewhere, Gen. Lee equally desired that this information should not be obtained by Meade.

On a stormy morning in February, 1864, my division of cavalry marched from its camps in front of Culpeper Court House, Va., with instructions to reconnoitre the left of the enemy's line on the Rapidan river, and develop the force in that direction without bringing on a general engagement.

To reach the desired position it was necessary to march a considerable distance to the south and cross the Robinson river, a tributary of the Rapidan.

The division consisted of three brigades of cavalry, each of the brigades being accompanied by a battery of light, or horse, artillery. A force of Confederate cavalry which was on picket duty on Robinson river was easily driven in, and on the evening of the day we started we found ourselves face to face with the enemy, with the Rapidan river between us.

The work of discovering the enemy's strength was, owing to the lateness of the hour, put off till the following morning. After placing our pickets to insure against surprise, we made ourselves as comfortable for the night as the weather of an unusually raw Virginia February would permit.

Early the following morning the cavalry and artillery moved toward the river in our front, and a lively skirmish with small arms accompanied by artillery, commenced and was well sustained on both sides.

The result was far from satisfactory. Do what we would, the enemy persistently declined to show force beyond what was necessary to engage our skirmish lines; and he uncovered but a gun or two at intervals along his lines to reply to our artillery.

We could plainly make out long and formidable breastworks on the farther bank of the river; but whether these were occupied by many or few soldiers, our best efforts and most ingenious plans failed to discover. The entire morning was spent in these vain attempts.

It will be understood that loss of life on the picket line and to a less degree on reconnoissance is not directly decisive of a war; hence we speak of lives "thrown away" in these duties. However, in order to gather information, it may be neccessary to expose soldiers to danger, wounds and even death, and we were now facing that necessity.

It was finally decided that the only way to make the enemy show his force was to cross, or try to cross, the ford in our front. If this succeeded, the enemy was to be driven out of his works if possible; if not, he would drive us back across the stream with possibly severe loss to our troops.

Reluctantly, under these circumstances, the division was organized for the work.

Leading the advance guard, consisting of a squadron of cavalry, was Capt. Ash—destined to be the hero of the occasion. Following this advance at a proper distance were the cavalry and artillery of the division, properly formed for effecting a lodgement on the farther side of the river. This stream was not more than thirty yards across in its broadest part, and at this season was easily fordable.

The instructions to Capt. Ash contemplated the possible crossing of not more than his advance guard, and not all of that if what we desired to discover could be effected before all had crossed. In this event the command was to be held so as to cover his retreat and protect him from pursuit by the enemy.

Ash advanced with his squadron amid the stillness of death. The skirmish firing and booming of large guns which had attended our attempts of the morning were hushed, and the silence which prevailed showed that the enemy was intent on keeping us in ignorance of their numbers, and determined to make us pay heavily for information.

The anxiety was intense. We knew when the enemy opened fire at short range that the loss would be great, and all felt that the advance guard must be the first and greatest suffers.

Ash with his small command moved on. The works in front, gloomy and silent, denuded and stained by a winter of thawing and freezing, seemed deserted. Now the few mounted men thrown to the front of the advance guard were entering the ford.

"Trot, march!" was the command, as Ash hurried his squadron forward to share the shock with his leading men.

Many a strong man in our command prayed at that moment for Ash and his men. He had now gained a vantage position where, because of a turn in the river above, he commanded a view of the interior of the Confederate breastworks. What he saw no one could tell.

But just then the enemy opened with a few scattering shots, and a withering volley followed. By a motion rather than a command, Ash intimated to his squadron to seek cover, while he, bending forward on his horse's neck, turned to the right and rode at a rapid gallop along the river bank parallel to the enemy's works, followed as he came opposite each new part of the breastworks with volley after volley.

There seemed no hope for him, and we watched with intense anxiety, expecting every moment to see horse and rider go down. Yet both kept on amid the storm of lead apparently unhurt. That something must be done to help him now was, I doubt not, the thought in every one's mind.

Suddenly, as Ash reached another part of his route, where his view of the Confederate lines was still more extended, he raised his hat and waved it over his head. It was a signal of triumph.

Then occurred a scene which has not been witnessed since the times of the "joyous passages of arms" in the age of chivalry. To our amazement, the Confederates, moved by admiration for his gallantry, ceased to fire on the intrepid horseman. Instead, they mounted on their breastworks as thick as they could stand, and, throwing thier hats in the air, cheered him again and again, making the valley echo with their shouts.

At this, Ash, taking in the situation at once, reined up his horse, and turning toward the Confederates raised his hat and acknowledged their cheers with a graceful salute repeated several times. Then he turned and rode leisurely into our own lines, amid the cheers and applause of his comrades—reechoed by the Confederates.

He had accomplished the work without the loss of a man, and had seen himself, and displayed to every one else, a full force of infantry manning the Confederate works.

The whole affair took less time than it takes to read this hasty and imperfect sketch; but I thought, and still think, that it was the bravest deed on the part of an individual that I ever witnessed.

Capt. Ash, in reporting to me afterward, stated that his scheme of developing the enemy's force had not occurred to him until he had reached the brink of the river, and found that the enemy held their works in force.

To go on meant certain death to many of his command. To retreat in the line of the direct fire would be equally disastrous; and the inspiration to do what he did, ride rapidly across their line of aim, and gradually oblique out of range, suddenly seized him.

His risk was great and he knew it; but it was better than any other course that presented itself to his mind. Men accomplish in seconds under such circumstances the thought of hours, with conclusions not less correct than those attending more deliberation.

True, no one could have foreseen that the excitement and rapid fire of the enemy would so far disturb their aim as to insure that the Union officer should escape unhurt; and still less could the effect of his intrepid conduct on the enemy have been foretold.

Now, after the lapse of years, the story of this heroic deed appears almost fabulous. Then it seemed very real and all natural enough.

I need scarcely add that as we united with the Confederates in cheering the bold rider, our hearts went out to the generous foe who so well appreciated a gallant act and so chivalrously acknowledged it. We were then impressed—and who has not been?—with the fact that, whether wearing the gray or the blue, the true American soldier is a worthy descendant of the men who made glorious the history of chivalry.—Gen. Wesley Merritt, in Youth's Companion.

PATRIOTISM.—"Yes," said young Mrs. Milder, "Charley was out rather late last night, but I didn't have the heart to scold him. He was engaged in a patriotic celebration."

"How do you know?" asked the woman whose husband was out with Charley.

"Because he came home with a lot of red, white and blue pieces of ivory. I don't know just what they are for, but the colors show they have something to do with patriotism."—Washington Star.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY!

A Great Mistake.

A recent discovery is that headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion of the mind, etc., are due to derangement of the nerve centers which supply the brain with nerve force; that indigestion, dyspepsia, neuralgia, wind in stomach, etc., arise from the derangement of the nerve centers supplying these organs with nerve fluid or force. This is likewise true of many diseases of the heart and lungs. The nerve system is like a telegraph system, as will be seen by the accompanying cut. The little white lines are the nerves which convey the nerve force from the nerve centers to every part of the body, just as the electric current is conveyed along the telegraph wires to every station, large or small. Ordinary physicians fail to regard this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorders arising therefrom they treat the part affected.

Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., the highly celebrated specialist and student of nervous diseases, and author of many noted treatises on the latter subject, long since realized the truth of the first statement, and his Restorative Nervine is prepared on that principle. Its success in curing all diseases arising from derangement of the nervous system is wonderful, as the thousands of unsolicited testimonials in possession of the company manufacturing the remedy amply prove.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or send direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs.

My Boy.

WRITTEN ON THE DEATH OF FRED CLOUGH.

I cannot think him dead,
His lustrous auburn head
Is ever bounding round my easy chair.
Yet when, my eyes grown dim
With tears, I turn to him
The vision vanishes—he is not there.

I walk my parlor floor,
And through the open door
I hear a foot-fall on the chamber stair.
I'm turning toward the hall
To give the boy a call,
And then bethink me that—he is not there.

I know his face is hid
Behind the coffin lid;
Closed are his eyes; cold is his forehead fair.
My hand that marble felt,
O'er it in prayer I knelt,
Yet my heart whispers that—he is not there.

I cannot think him dead
When passing by the bed
So long watched over with parental care.
My spirit and my eye
Seek him inquiringly
Before the tho't comes that—he is not there.

And when at even's close,
Before we seek repose,
I'm with his father offering up our prayer,
Whate'er I may be saying
I am in spirit praying
For our boy's spirit, though—he is not there.

Not there! Where then is he?
The form I loved to see
Was but the raiment that he used to wear.
The grave that now doth press
Upon that cast-off dress
Is but the wardrobe locked—he is not there.

He lives! In all the past
He lives; nor to the last
Of seeing him again will I despair.
In dreams I see him now,
And, on his angel brow
I see it written—"Thou shalt see him there."

Yes, he is safe with God;
Father, thy chastening rod
So help us, thine afflicted ones, to bear
That in the spirit land,
Meeting at Thy right hand,
'Twill be our heaven to find that—he is there.

THE PRODIGAL'S RETURN.

When I moved away from the old home where I had passed my childhood and early youth, I left John Drake well nigh as poor as the poorest, yet free from debt, and able to support his growing family respectably. He was a blacksmith by trade; a steady, sober, industrious man, with a heart, as the old saying is, "as big as an ox." I think I never met a man with keener, quicker sympathies, or with a stronger disposition to help his fellows. Moreover, his sympathies were substantial, and his disposition to help active. He worked hard, and earned little, but he made what he earned support him; and, with the help of one of the best wives that ever blessed a husband, he contrived to put by something for a "rainy day." Probably what he saved in a year would not pay for a gentleman banker's oyster supper; but it was a great thing for him. It was something; and that, too, on the right side of his account.

On the very day that I left M—— I dropped in at the Savings Bank. It was a primitive affair; with an old-fashioned, cumbersome safe, accompanied by an enormous key, kept in the same store with the post office. I dropped in on business with the postmaster, who was also treasurer of the bank, and, by the merest accident, my eye fell upon John Drake's account, which had been running between four and five years; and he had an even four hundred dollars to his credit.

Well, I left the old town, having made arrangements for moving to a distant state. On my way to the railway station Dolly Bidwell came up and offered to carry my carpet-bag. My other baggage had gone on several days before. Alas! poor Dolly! I knew he wanted the wherewith to procure a glass of spirits. His was a sad case. His parents had once been comparatively wealthy, and he had received a liberal education. Not a college education, but as good as a first-class New England Academy can give. His mother had died first, when he was seventeen, leaving him without a trade or calling of any kind, and penniless. Yes, penniless, for when Nathan (that was his father's name) Bidwell's affairs came to be overhauled, after his death, all the property he had left would not suffice to pay a moiety of his debts.

Dolly (Oliver his name was, but he was known everywhere by everybody by the nickname that had been given him in his childhood, and which had stuck to him ever since) was an only child. For a few months after his father's death he was suffered to remain in the old home, and live on what he could pick up on the premises; but at length he was cast out upon the world, and told that he must work for his living, as others did. At first he seemed hardly to realize the necessities of the situation. He thought to visit and subsist with old friends of his family. But a series of very broad hints—a few of them amounting to almost kicks—ere long satisfied him that they would not answer.

His first real effort was an attempt to learn the carpenter's trade; but the work was too hard, and he left it. But never mind his various shifts, his efforts and his failures. He had learned to drink wine at the table of his parents. In his orphanage he came to love stronger drinks; and now, at the age of four-and-twenty, he was well nigh a wreck. His last effort at work had been at the forge of John Drake; and John had striven with all his might to save him; but it was of no use. The work was too hard and too dirty,—it soiled and hardened his hands, and left dirt in his curly hair.

Poor Dolly! I gave him my burden, I could not refuse; and he carried it cheerfully and even manfully; but he did not offer to walk by my side. At the station I took my bag, and offered him a quarter of a dollar. I knew he would spend most of it for rum, but I had not the heart to repulse him. And his was the last face I saw as I took my place in the car. We had been schoolmates in other years—though I was a few years the oldest,—and he waited on the platform to see me off.

"Poor Dolly!" I said to myself, as I saw the last of really handsome face,—"May you see better days,—"May you see better days!" And in my heart I felt that he deserved them; for he was not all to blame. For the appetite that had been born in him, and fostered in his childhood and early youth, surely he was not responsible.

I did not see the old town again for little more than twenty years, not until after the war. A house with which I held business relations had occasion to purchase a steam engine. They had seen a magnificent affair—so it appeared to them—manufactured by Drake & Bidwell of M——, and I was instructed to proceed forthwith to that place, and ascertain what could be obtained, and on what terms.

M—— was my old town. But who were Drake & Bidwell? I remembered that John (Jack, we used to call him) Drake had been a first-class blacksmith; and, I supposed, might be a good machinist; but it could not be; for this firm was one of the heaviest and wealthiest in their state.

However, I went as directed, arriving at the station in M—— at noon. I found the old place greatly altered. There were many old landmarks, familiar, in the center of the village; but the village had spread—grown —wonderfully. Where the comfortable old tavern used to stand I found a large new hotel; and there I engaged quarters. On approaching the station, at a point where the railroad came near the river—a small stream, the waters of which were salt at flood tide—I had observed, occupying a broad territory that had been marsh and pasture land in my youthful days, close upon the stream, an extensive manufacturing establishment—a foundry, a forge, and several large buildings wherein was much machinery, heavy shafting, and I was sure I heard the clang of monster trip-hammers. I asked mine host what it was.

"That is Drake & Bidwell's place, sir!" And he spoke proudly, as though the manufactory lent dignity and importance to his own establishment. "Ah! Here comes Mr. Drake, now!"

A moment later a stout, well-dressed man, past the middle age, entered the office of the hotel, and was upon the point of speaking to the landlord, when his eyes chanced to fall upon me. He recognized me on the instant, and our greeting, and the embrace that followed, were hearty and sincere.

I told him that I had come on business with his house, whereupon he captured me at once; and when he had done his errand to the host, marched me off to his own home, whither he was then on his way to dinner.

A short distance out from the thickly settled portion of the village, on a gentle eminence which had in other years been a part of my father's farm, I found his dwelling—a large, handsome house, gothic in style, with numerous outbuildings, and surroundings of rare taste and beauty, the whole bespeaking wealth, opulence. And the inside of the dwelling I found to correspond in every respect with the outside. In construction, in finish, and in furnishing, it was the home of a man of independent means.

Mary Drake, now a portly, noble-looking matron, was as kindly and home-like as ever, and she very soon made me forget the lapse of years and the wonderful change of circumstances.

Dinner was served in one of the prettiest and cosiest dining-rooms I ever saw. The furnishing of the table was rich and costly, and the viands were of the best and choicest. And there the color of wealth stopped. A single servant — a female — waited on the table; and she was only present when called by the foot-bell within madam's easy reach. Mary herself served us with what was on the table, and the meal was simply enjoyable—in every way like home.

After dinner my host led the way to a cozy smoking-room, and when our cigars were alight, he said, with a laugh:

"My dear old friend and playmate, I know you are curious to know how it is that you find me a wealthy man. You left me a score of years ago about as poor as a man could be who was not in debt. I owned not a dollar of property, not a stick nor a stone towards a house, and I had not more than four or five hundred dollars laid up to show for all the years of my hard work. Now I am wealthy. If you care to know how it came to pass, I will tell you because of our old friendship and old love."

I need not state what answer I made. Settling himself easily in his chair, and finding a fair rest for his feet, he went on and told to me the story.

"You remember Dolly Bidwell. Ah! I need not ask you," he said, with a light laugh, "for Dolly told me of the quarter you gave him for carrying your valise to the depot. Suppose I should tell you that that piece of silver which you gave him he spent for rum, and that he has not drank a drop from that day to this, what should you think?

"Ah! I don't wonder you are puzzled for an answer; but such is the fact. Why the poor fellow should have been so affected by your going away I cannot tell, nor can he. We only know it was so. After you had gone, and he had drank up the money you gave him, the words you spoke came back to him. Can you remember what they were?" I told him I could not, but I thought they were of blessing.

"At all events," said I, "I know I murmured a blessing upon him after I had seen the last of him."

"Well," pursued my host,—"you blessed him then. He remarked to that the sum was more than he had earned. You answered, with a smile, 'Never mind, Dolly, may the odd change bring you luck. God bless you, in any event.' That was what you said. After the money was gone—and it went that very day—he asked himself, where was the odd change? For two or three days he dwelt on that one subject. He felt that you had given him a small sum for luck, and he had drank it up. It fairly worried him; and finally he put his foot down, and simply said to himself that he would drink no more. He took no oath, but he said in his heart that he would commence by forming a good resolution and sticking to it.

"And then he tried to get work. But who would hire him? He said he would drink no more; but who would believe him. At length he came to me. I was the man whom he had most abused, whose kindness he had trampled on, and whose confidence he betrayed. He came to me as a last resort, completely broken and crushed. I pitied him. I shed tears before he had been with me ten minutes. At length he made the proposition that he had come to make—a proposition that had filled his whole being and possessed his every thought and feeling. And what do you suppose it was? You will not wonder that it astonished me—that it literally took my breath away.

"Said he: 'John Drake, how much money have you got in the Savings Bank?' Knowing that he could not rob me, I told him—between four and five hundred dollars (I had made a deposit that very day). Then he said: 'Give me half of it and I will go to California. I will work, I will do my level best, and I will not touch a drop of liquor while I am gone. In five years I will come back, and do the same by you that you now do by me. I will divide evenly with you; give you one-half of all I have in the world, be it much or little.'

"That was his proposition. I will not tell you how he argued, how he pleaded, how he got down on his knees and implored. I had called Mary in, at his request, and she heard it all. Her heart melted, and she said, 'Try him.' She felt, as she expressed it, that if we should refuse him, and he should go to the bad—to utter ruin—she should always feel that we might have saved him and would not. 'Dear old Jack!' he cried, 'just cast your bred upon the waters this once and try it. Try me!'

"Well, to make the story short, I will only say further, in this place, we resolved to try him. He went into no ecstasies when we told him. He was, on the contrary, solemn and reserved; but the tears ran; and the grasp he gave us spoke volumes. I had in the bank four hundred and sixty dollars. I gave him two hundred and thirty of it. He gave me no note, but before he went away he went to a good lawyer—an old schoolmate, and made his will. In case of his death everything of which he died possessed was to be mine. I was his sole heir. And this will, duly witnessed and acknowledged, he sealed up, and left with me. And then he left us. He had obtained an opportunity to work his way to California, around Cape Horn. He would go to no needless expense.

"Naturally, after he had gone, the story leaked out. I shall leave you to judge how people laughed at me; and I don't know that they were much less hopeful than I was; but Mary never regretted; nor, for that matter, did I, yet there were times when I would have been happier could I have been assured of ever seeing my money again.

"The five years passed away. During the last of those years we had much sickness in the family, and our funds ran low. I was forced to draw upon my bank account. Strangely enough, I had not added to it since Dolly went away. A fourth child had been born to us; and I had myself been sick. Towards the close of that fifth year I drew a sum from the bank that reduced my store to one hundred dollars. My heart ached; and had it not been for Mary's cheerful words and hopeful smiles I think I should have fainted outright.

"Dolly had left us September the tenth. Five years and a day had passed, and we had not heard from him a word. We thought him dead. At all events, all hopes of our money had been gone a long time. It was on the evening of the eleventh of September that Dolly Bidwell entered our poor sitting-room—our one living-room—with a cheery, hearty greeting. We knew him, of course; but how he had changed! He had grown stout—full twice as heavy as when he went away; his face was plump and the picture of robust health; but— What a fright he was in his personal appearance! His beard was full and shaggy, reaching to his breast, his hair was long and unkempt, and his clothes were really ragged and patched at that.

"We were just sitting down to supper as he came in. Of course, we asked him to sit with us; and my wife got one of my dressing-gowns for him to put on. She told him she did this on account of the children. During the meal he talked but little, but gave us to understand that he should be able to pay back the amount we had given him, and, as he hoped, a little interest. 'Never mind the interest,' said I. 'I didn't lend you the money on speculation.' 'Jack, old fellow,' said he, just before we arose from the table, 'suppose I couldn't make up a dollar of it without emptying my belt of its last ounce, aye, its very last dollar, what would you say?

"In the fullness of my heart I said, and I meant it: 'If you have kept your pledge, Dolly, and done the best you could, I'll say —God bless you, anyhow, and always!' He grasped my hand, but did not speak,

"After Mary had done up her work, and had come to sit with me, Dolly burst. He couldn't hold in any longer. At first I thought him crazy, or trifling with us. He began to talk about his hundreds of thousands, and how he managed to gain it. The very first strike he had made was the purchasing of a lot of wild, mountainous land, away from the gold diggings of the time, and it had proved a bonanza. All he had done had been to care for that land, to develop mines, and sell them. The only gold he had himself gathered had been one nugget worth eighty thousand dollars.

"Well, sir, that night, when I retired—or I should say when my wife and I retired—we were worth six hundred and fifty thousand dollars, sure, with the prospect of more. We had it in certificates of deposit from the United States Treasury, at Philadelphia. Of course, Dolly had the same.

"With regard to our present business I'll tell you at some other time. For the present I will only say further, that Dolly did not leave us until he had found a wife, and that didn't happen until after we had entered upon our present business.

"So," added my host in conclusion, smiling serenely as he spoke, "I think I may properly regard my present wealth as the return, after many days, of the bread I once so confidingly cast upon the waters."

JERRY WAS "BLEEGED TER GO."

As I was seated one day in Mr. B's study, reading the morning papers while he was occupied with his correspondence, he was interrupted by the entrance of his coachman, and I overheard the following conversation:—

"Marsa John, is yo' dar?"

"Yes, Jerry; do you want me?"

"Well, yes, sah. Yo' see, Marsa John, I dun wanter ax yo sum'fun."

"Well, what is it, Jerry?"

"Marsa John, yo' see it's like dis, sah. I'se got a brudder as is ober ter Marsa Harrison's an' dere's gwanter be a wedin' ober dar nex' Chuesday, an' I'se 'bleeged ter go."

"But, Jerry, I do not see how I can spare you. Master Charles is coming home and is going to bring some friends with him. I am sorry, but I cannot let you go just now. I will send a wedding gift to your brother just to prove to him that I do not intend to be unkind; but I don't see how you can go."

"Marsa John, sah, I'se 'bleeged ter go."

"Jerry, I cannot let you go, as I said just now."

"But, Marsa John, I'se 'bleeged ter go; dere's no use 'sputin', I'se 'bleeged ter go. I doan' see how yo' doan' see how it is. Miss Clara she all fix fur it, an' her folks is fix fur it, an' de wedin'-cake dun made, an' de favors done gib out. Mr. Johnsing done promise ter stan', an' Miss Lilly, fum Marsa Pine's, she gwanter stan', too, an' I doan see how we can get on if I ain't dare. An' 'bout dat wedin' giff, Miss Clara's de one dat's gwanter git married; it ain't my brudder, but de wedin' is at he house. Now, doan' yo' see it?"

"Well, no, Jerry, I cannot say that I do see why you have to be there. Is this Miss Clara your sister?"

"No, sah!"

"Your niece?"

"No, sah!"

"Your cousin?"

"No, sah!"

"Then who is she?"

"Why, she's de bride, sah—de lady what's gwanter git married.

"But why in the world, if she's no relation to you, are you obliged to be there if she is not to marry your brother?"

"Why, bless yo' heart, Marsa John, ain't yo' dun study it out afore dis? I dun tink yo' a mighty smart man, fo' sho' I did. Why, Marsa John, I'se 'bleeged ter go, 'cause I's promise' ter marry Miss Clara, an' fur de lan' ob goodness, I doan' see how I gwanter git married if I ain't dar; does yo'?"

"Well, Jerry, I confess I do not see how you can manage to be in two places at once. I suppose I shall have to let you go. Here are $10 for you. Give Miss Clara my compliments. Remember, I shall certainly expect you back Friday morning, for I cannot spare you longer."

"T'ank yo', Marsa John; t'ank yo' kinely, sah. I jus' bin studyin' how I gwanter pay de wedin' fee. I always knowd yo' was a gen'lman, sah, an' was sho' as yo' could unnerstan' de case w'en yo' was tole; an' I knowed dat no gen'lman in de Souf was eber gwine fur ter disappint a lady on her wedin'-day by not lettin' the man git dar. I'se comin' back Friday mornin', sho',' an' we'd be mighty pleased ter see yo' an' Marsa Charles an' he fren's at de wedin'. It's gwanter take place at 6 in de eb'nin'. Miss Clara, she's de sister ob de lady dat my brudder dun marry, an' dat's how de wedin' is dar. He de coachman fo' Marsa Harrison, an' de wedin's in de coach-house. I t'ank yo' kinely fo' yo' good wishes. I know'd yo' had de smartness ter unnerstan' w'en yo' was talked to plain like dis."—New York Evening Post.

August Pictures.

Black and gold in the uplands—
Bevies of dusky birds
Sailing over a yellow sea
Of grain which the sumac girds;
And dazzling gleams in the gardens,
Where the regal sunflowers raise
Their coronals of rifted light
Through the sumptuous August days.

A child in the sunny meadow,
Close to the pasture bars,
Filling its arms with marigold
And purple aster stars;
A girl in the fragrant orchard,
Singing a happy song
Of love and trust, as dreamily
She twines the grasses, long.

A peaceful face in the doorway,
Watching the evening skies
Change into jasper, emerald and gold,
Vision to aged eyes
Of the glorious gate she is waiting
To pass between, and greet
The King in His strength and beauty,
With His smile of welcome, sweet!

THE GRAVE ON THE PLATTE.

On the north fork of the Platte River, with the blue mountains of Colorado in sight to the west, we made camp one afternoon at an earlier hour than usual. By and by, in our knocking around for firewood, one of the men brought in a piece of board which was rotted at one end, as if it had been in the ground.

"Whar'd ye git it?" queried Old Bill, who was by all odds the roughest, toughest and most uncouth man in the party, and whom no man had ever heard speak a kind word to any living thing.

"Over there," was the reply, as the man addressed pointed over his shoulder.

Some of us followed Old Bill to the spot. There was a grave there—the grave of a child. We found it only after the dead grass and weeds of a dozen winters, perhaps, had been cleared away. The board had stood at its head once—how long ago it was placed there no one could say. Some emigrant train had halted just here, and here some emigrant child had breathed its last. They had dug a grave for it in this desolate spot, heaped stones over the fresh earth that the wolves might not uncover the little form, and the grief-stricken father had marked the spot as best he could.

No knife had touched the board. The emigrant train would not wait for that. We looked it over and brushed away the stains and mildew, but there was neither date

AN AUGUST WEDDING.

Miss Effie E. Smith—Rev. Herbert F. Moulton.

St. Paul's Universalist church was filled to its utmost capacity at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, the hour set for the marriage of Miss Effie E., second daughter of Mrs. A. M. Smith, to Rev. Herbert F. Moulton, pastor of the church. The pulpit platform was tastefully trimmed with asparagus and golden-rod, an arch, from which was suspended a large bunch of pond lilies, occupying the place of the pulpit, while in the windows were nasturtiums and sweet peas. The ushers were C. W. Johnson, Henry Holbrook, Edwin Brooks and George Sumner. Mrs. Helen Warren Auger presided at the organ. A moment after the clock struck one the doors of the north entrance of the church swung open and the bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march. The officiating clergyman, Rev. Harry Blackford of Monson, was escorted up the right aisle by two of the ushers, while the bride and groom were conducted up the left aisle to meet him. The ceremony was with a ring, the organ meanwhile being played softly. The bride wore a dress of pearl Bengaline silk, cut en traine, with veil, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. As Mr. and Mrs. Moulton left the church the organist played Wagner's Tannhauser. A reception to relatives and invited guests was held at the residence of the bride's mother on Thorndike street, where refreshments were served by Barr of Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Moulton left on the 3.14 train east, and will be absent about five weeks, the most of the time at Scarboro, Me. Many handsome presents were received, among them being $135 in gold from the members of the parish, and numerous pieces of silverware. Among the out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Ross and Miss Ross of Newburyport, Miss Stevens of Portland, Me., Mrs. Fred Leach, Mrs. Gage and daughter, Mrs. Boyce of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. Sawin of Worcester, Mrs. Houston and Miss Houston of Thorndike.

GOOD PRICES REALIZED

At the Auction Sale of the Knox Property on Tuesday.

People who had been prophesying ruinously low prices for the real estate which was knocked off by Auctioneer Newton Tuesday afternoon had their eyes opened by the result, and it soon became evident, as the sale progressed, that property is not as flat in Palmer as the pessimists would have us believe. No fancy prices were realized, to be sure, and some of the lots went at a low figure, but taking into consideration the general business depression and uncertainty it must be admitted that the results were very satisfactory.

The homestead on Main street, running through to Highland avenue, was the first piece put up for sale, and without any delay the bidding started off with an offer of $4000, which was quickly run up to $5100, at which price it was taken by George E. Buck. The two building lots on Knox street, opposite W. H. Hitchcock's residence, were next in order. The first bid for choice in lots was $200, and it was knocked off to Mr. Hitchcock for $310, the other lot going to him also at $200, the only bid. The four Main street building lots, adjoining the Ware River railroad, were next in order. The first one, nearest the village, was started at $225, and was run up to $370, the next lot stopping at $290, at which prices they were sold to L. W. Caryl, for E. G. Hastings. Mr. Hastings in turn bought for A. T. Wing the next two lots for $290 and $270 respectively. The meadow between the railroad and river was put up in three parcels, two acres adjoining Marcy's lumber yard being bid off by F. F. Marcy for $250, the next six acres by C. W. Johnson for $220, and the remaining seven acres by J. F. Holbrook for $275, making a total of $755. It was then offered as a whole and was run up to $900, C. D. Holbrook being the purchaser. The remaining parcel, the 13 acres of meadow across the river, brought out the liveliest bidding of the afternoon, being run up from $200 to $425, at which price it was taken by C. W. Johnson for Geo. E. Buck. The total proceeds of the sale were $8155.

Changes at the Mill of the Grosvenor Woolen Company.

The works of the Grosvenor Woolen Company, manufacturers of shoddies, have been shut down since the 13th of July, and many changes and repairs have been made during that time, though all are not yet finished. The dam at the lower end of the pond, which had been leaking badly, has been rebuilt, and the canal which carries the water to the pond from the river has been deepened and made capable of carrying more water by raising the banks a foot or more, the earth for this purpose being obtained by removing a part of the hill at the side of the mill, thus giving an open space about the building. In the power room there are two lines of shafting, one running the picker and the other the main mill. Steam has been used to supplement the water wheel in times of low water, but heretofore there has been some difficulty about running the two sets of shafting with either power. By a change in the shafting either the engine or the water wheel, or both together, can be coupled to either line of shafting, or to both lines. A new speed governor is also to be put on the water wheel, and it is proposed to equip the mill with automatic sprinklers. A novel feature in this mill is the method of heating the feed water for the boiler. The exhaust steam is usually used for this purpose, but here the engine is some 75 feet from the boiler, and as, if a heater which utilized the exhaust of the engine were used, the exhaust pipe must be carried to the boiler, the idea of running the small water pipe inside the larger exhaust pipe was conceived and successfully done, and now when the water enters the boiler it is at a temperature of 212°, and the cost of the heater has been saved. The mill is now running ten cards, with a capacity of about 1200 pounds per day, but seven are old cards, which will gradually be replaced by new ones, built to order, and the product increased to 2400 pounds per day.

A Peculiar Combination in a Liquor Trial.

There was a large crowd at the district court Monday morning to hear the trial of the case of the Commonwealth against John Crowley of Thorndike for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors in Monson, where there is no license. Crowley made regular trips to that village with wagon loads of the stuff, and the selectmen seized two loads. J. B. Carroll of Springfield appeared for Crowley and S. S. Taft of Palmer for the prosecution, which went to show that Crowley had taken orders for liquor from Monson parties, gone to Thorndike and got the stuff, delivered it in Monson and was paid for it when delivered, which was claimed constituted an illegal sale. On the other hand it was claimed that Crowley was an expressman, that he received orders, which were on a printed blank, to procure at Lawton & Co's. in Thorndike the stuff which he delivered in Monson; that he was in no way interested in the matter beyond the fee which he received for the transportation of the packages, and that as a common carrier he had as much right to carry beer and whisky as coffee, flour and sugar. It was shown, however, that he did not go into the express business until after the first of May, the beginning of the license year, and that on his first two visits an employ of Lawton & Co. accompanied him and solicited the orders which he got; that he never did any other express business or made any attempt to secure any; and it was claimed that he was in reality an employe of the firm of Lawton & Co., engaged in selling liquor in Monson. The court reserved its decision until to-morrow.

The Court "Calls Down" the Officers.

The usual quiet tenor of affairs at the district court was slightly ruffled Wednesday morning, when Judge Robinson, in commenting upon a case of drunkenness which had come before him, took occasion to criticise the officers of the place for what he termed a neglect of duty. Deputy Sheriffs Brainerd and Northrop, and Special Officer Alexander were present. His Honor remarked that in his opinion drunkenness had been encouraged by the officers of the town because they had not arrested persons who had appeared on the streets in a state of intoxication. He stated that he had been informed by a citizen that he had seen a man walking along the street greatly under the influence of liquor, and a short distance behind him a deputy sheriff, who paid no attention to the man. This, in his opinion, was in violation of the officer's oath of office. So much was said that the officers present desired to know if any of them were alluded to, but the Judge was unable to state, as the name of the officer had not been given to him. All of the officers present denied the allegation, if it was intended for them. They say that there is no law requiring the arrest of a man simply for drunkenness. The law says that he may be arrested if he appears on the street intoxicated, not that he shall be, and they cannot see how they violate their oath of office by letting a man alone who is peaceable and endeavoring to go home. This is the custom in the large cities. Then, too, there is considerable criticism on the part of the higher officials, who claim that so many petty drunks are sent to the jails from the lower courts that there is scarcely room for them.

L. W. Parkhurst is out with a new milk wagon.

The Palmers play a game of base ball at Westfield this afternoon.

Miss Addie Rogers entertained a small party of friends Tuesday evening.

Rufus Flynt's children are driving a Russian pony, attached to a pretty dogcart.

Thomas Blanchard has sold his horse, "Moxie," to Dr. Carmichael of Springfield.

An attachment to recover $3000 has been filed by A. W. Lincoln of Warren against G. W. Ely of Palmer.

Mrs. Lulu Moulton's class of girls in the Baptist Sunday school picnicked at Flynt's Park in Monson Wednesday.

The Christian Endeavor meetings at St. Paul's Universalist church Sunday evenings will be continued as usual during the pastor's absence.

The young men had a dancing party at Holden's opera house Wednesday evening. About 25 couples were present, and all had a good time.

The switch engine in the yard of the Boston and Albany road broke a driving wheel Wednesday forenoon, delaying the work for some time.

The monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock.

Owing to the stormy weather the Palmer base ball nine did not play at Westfield last Saturday, as was expected. The Westfields will play here to-morrow.

The woolen mills at Bennington, Vt., operated by J. S. Holden, formerly of this place, have reduced their working time to eight hours a day for four days a week.

Mrs. Franklin Blanchard gave a little party at her home in Blanchardville yesterday afternoon in honor of her granddaughter, Miss Fannie Lawrence of North Brookfield.

At the Baptist church next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on "The True Foundation." The subject for the evening meeting will be "Fitness for Heaven Essential."

There seems to be a scarcity of one dollar bills in the country, and it is reported that one Palmer firm which wanted $1000 in $1 bills for its pay roll paid $10 premium on them the first of the week.

In making the changes at the mill of the Grosvenor Woolen Co. an excellent quality of clay has been struck in large quantities, which will be disposed of to any who may wish it at a merely nominal price.

The body of Miss Jane Butler of New Britain, Ct., was brought to this town for burial Tuesday. Miss Butler was formerly a resident of the town in the family of John Ward. The interment was in the Thorndike street cemetery.

W. F. Shaw, formerly employed in the freight office of the Boston and Albany road here, but recently with the New London Northern road at New London, has been appointed agent of the New York and New England road at Springfield.

The New London Northern road has taken off one of its night freight trains from New London to Brattleboro, as there was not enough business to make it profitable, and this has resulted in the reduction of the working force somewhat in a number of places.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening Dr. Allen gave a talk on the mint family. Next Monday night Rev. S. T. Frost will give a talk on the "Botanical Gardens of Dublin." All members of the society will do well to make an effort to be present.

The comic opera "Wanita," which was written by Easthampton parties and has had successful presentations in several places, will be given at the opera house the third week in October by local talent, assisted by the composers. The proceeds will be used to purchase new books for the library.

Deputy Sheriff Northrop sold at public auction, in front of the court house yesterday morning, a tract of land near Hastings's crossing, belonging to Edwin E. and Mary Keith, to satisfy an execution issued in favor of Minnie A. Roberts of Manchester, N. H. It was bid off at $200 by W. W. Leach for the plaintiff.

The wheelmen in the towns of Palmer, Monson, Warren, Ware and Ludlow are taking considerable interest in the bicycle races to be run here on Labor Day, and about 20 entries are promised thus early, although no entry blanks have been sent out yet. Several in this village are already training for the events.

An excursion was run yesterday over the Boston and Maine and New London Northern roads to Mystic Island, Watch Hill and Block Island from Northampton and Hadley. With those who came from stations between Brattleboro and Palmer there were about ten cars of excursionists. Fifty tickets were sold at this station.

An enjoyable birthday party was given Monday evening by Ralph LeGro at his father's residence on Converse avenue to about forty of his young friends. The grounds were brilliantly illuminated with Chinese lanterns. In a "pinning the tail on the donkey" contest Miss Hattie Coleman received the first prize for the ladies and Albert Shaw the first for the gentlemen. Ice cream, cake, etc., were served, and all passed a very pleasant evening.

Holden & Fuller have enough orders at their woolen mill to keep running a week or ten days more, and are in hopes to receive more before those they now have are filled, and not be compelled to shut down. Mr. Fuller went to New York last evening, and will try to bring some back with him. The firm makes on orders only, and will not make a yard for stock. Last week they turned out more goods than in any other like period of time since the mill was built—about 3500 yards.

"The Church of the Open Door" will be the subject of the sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning. In the evening the pastor will preach the last sermon of the series on "The Five Great Needs of Humanity," taking for his special subject "The Need of Deliverance for Evil." The class for learners and workers will disenss next Tuesday night, in the Congregational church parlors, the advisability of making a change in the Sunday school lessons, and will study for its Bible lesson Acts xxi:27-39, "Paul at Jerusalem."

A reference case was tried in the district court room yesterday in regard to charges to be paid for extras and omissions in a contract taken by Contractor Williams of Warren to build a house for Rev. D. O. Clark of the same place. The auditors were George W. Johnson of Brookfield, Contractor Cummings of Ware and A. H. Danforth of Monson. Charles L. Gardner appeared for Contractor Williams and Mr. Sawyer of Warren for Rev. Mr. Clark. After hearing the testimony they adjourned to meet at Warren next Thursday and inspect the house and render their decision.

The ice water tank in front of the post office is patronized very generously by all classes, and the ladies of the W. C. T. U. deserve the thanks of the thirsty public for their public spirit in erecting it. But some arrangement should be made for carrying off the waste water; and it must be conceded that as an attractive work of art the tank is not a "howling success." Our neighboring town of Monson has two very handsome stone fountains erected by generous citizens to furnish water for man and beast, and perhaps this effort of the ladies will spur some public-spirited citizen to do something of the kind for this place. We will all hope so at any rate.

In these times of financial depression and doubt, when fear is leading people to hoard their money, and savings banks in various parts of the state have had to require notice of 30 to 60 days from depositors in order to check the large withdrawals, it is pleasant to note that the trouble has not been felt locally. The Palmer Savings Bank has met every demand promptly, and confidence in its soundness is deservedly so well established that there has been only now and then a case where a depositor has drawn out his money through fear, only to replace it after a loss of three months' interest to pay for his foolishness. Massachusetts savings banks as a whole are among the safest and soundest institutions of the kind in the country, and the local institution ranks with the best of them.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society met in this place Tuesday afternoon and arranged as far as possible the various matters for the coming fair in September. A list of attractions is being considered, among which is the possibility of a drill by the military battalion of the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst, the prospects for securing which seem good. Three bicycle races have been arranged for, a half-mile for boys under 16, a mile and a five-mile handicap. The grounds are to be put in good shape, and the condition of the upper hall, which has been severely criticised, will be greatly improved, probably being sheathed and painted. The directors are determined to have a good exhibition this year, and are making extra exertions to give something attractive.

The Boston and Albany road announces one of its popular cheap excursions to Boston for next Friday, from Indian Orchard to Brookfield inclusive. The trip includes a sail to Nantasket Beach, Downer Landing, or Bass Point, Nahant, and will give a good opportunity for a breath of salt air and a day's rest from the worry and cares of life. The fare for the round trip is only $1.45, which includes everything, and tickets will be good only on the special train, which will leave North Wilbraham at 6.53 a. m., Palmer at 7.05, West Brimfield at 7.16, West Warren at 7.25 and Warren at 7.31. Returning the train will leave Boston at 7.20 p. m. Only a limited number of tickets will be sold, and those who neglect to procure them before the morning of the excursion are likely to find that none are left.

The officers of Palmer lodge of Odd Fellows for the next six months are: N. G., G. H. Magrath; V. G., C. A. Royce; R. S., G. H. Bray; treasurer, C. T. Brainerd; P. S., L. G. Parkhurst; W., J. V. Clark; C., E. C. Buffington; O. G., William H. Osborn; I. G., O. W. Marcy; R. S. N. G., R. B. Francis; L. S. N. G., E. E. Walker; R. S. V. G., L. W. Parkhurst; L. S. V. G., R. M. Beebe; R. S. S., H. R. Paine; L. S. S., G. H. Miller; chaplain, William J. Smith; P. G., G. H. Justin; trustees of funds, J. B. Shaw, R. B. Francis, E. E. Walker; finance committee, R. B. Francis, G. H. Justin, O. W. Marcy; visiting committee, L. G. Parkhurst, G. H. Bray, C. T. Brainerd, E. W. Wall, H. R. Paine, M. M. Thomas, R. Russell; committee on regalia, J. V. Clark, E. C. Buffington, E. E. Walker; committee on entertainment, C. T. Brainerd, G. H. Bray, E. E. Walker; committee on widows and orphans, G. H. Justin, C. T. Brainerd, J. V. Clark.

The work of putting in the pipe to connect the upper reservoir of the Palmer Water Company direct with the main is completed, and the reservoir is being filled. When this is accomplished the water in the lower reservoir will be drawn off and the strainer at the entrance to the main, which was broken by the ice last winter, will be repaired. A large amount of mud has been removed from the bottom of the upper reservoir, a stone wall built along the east side and the banks lined with clean sand, which is obtained from a bank near the reservoir. The ground through which the brook flows at the head of the reservoir is of a somewhat muddy nature, and a new canal is being dug to bring the water directly into the reservoir instead of having it wind through this mud, and when this is completed a stone wall is to be built across the upper end to keep the mud from washing into the reservoir. There is as yet no scarcity of water, but as there is only one reservoir to draw from now it has been thought best to be a little cautious so that in case of fire there should be an amply supply, and the amount of water for sprinkling the streets has been limited, and users of water are requested not to waste it. The use of lawn hose has been restricted to one hour per day, between 6 and 7 p. m.

District Court.

Saturday Frank E. Davis of Palmer was given three months in the house of correction for drunkenness. Mrs. Lucinda Hall of North Monson received two months for a like offense. A civil entry was made by James W. Calkins of Palmer against Mary Plimpton of Brimfield for commission to sell a wood lot. On Tuesday James J. Lynn of Ware for drunkenness was given two months in the house of correction. Jennie Cook received a two months' sentence for drunkenness. Her husband, Thomas Cook, was placed on probation for two months. Dennis Normandin, a baker with no particular abiding place, had a three months' residence at the house of correction given him: cause, being drunk. Jerry Brennan was up for a similar offense and had the case continued until Wednesday, when he was discharged after paying a fine of $15. Thomas W. Kenefick appeared as counsel for Brennan. George Colgrove of Monson paid a fine of $10 for drunkenness yesterday morning, and John H. Kelly of Warren was assessed $5 for a like offense.

Raoul La Cas has returned from Canada, where he has been on a vacation, and is at work in the Boston Duck Co's. office again.

There is some talk of organizing a bicycle club in the place. There are about twenty wheels, and if the owners would take hold of the matter it could be made a success.

The manager of the local ball team thinks that some one in Palmer is badly twisted. He says that he has arranged to play the Palmers on the 19th, but that there is no money up on the game. Sedgwick is not a Yale pitcher but Andover, although he played with Yale at Chicago.

The shut-down which went into effect in the mill Saturday has not been felt much as yet. The majority of the operatives welcome it, as it enables them to take a vacation. The dye house and bleachery are running as usual, and this makes it seem less strange, as the bell is heard four times a day as usual.

THREE RIVERS.

James Barber is spending this week in Springfield, among friends.

E. Shaw is spending a few days in New York this week, but is expected to return tomorrow evening.

Mrs. John F. Twiss and family have returned after an extended vacation on the Glen farm at Palmer.

Miss Mary Wilson left this week for a few weeks' stay in Canada, where she is to visit friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kendrick of Worcester spent Tuesday with Mr and Mrs. L. B. Kendrick in this place.

Will Haynes and son Perry of Springfield visited a number of their acquaintances in this place last Sunday.

Miss Rosa Blanchet intends to leave early next week for a vacation, to be spent in Springfield and other places.

Charles Ruggles spent this week in his wood lot in Belchertown, where he is getting out a large quantity of lumber.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen and family intend to leave to-morrow for Great Falls, N. H., where they will spend a few weeks.

Miss Della Gage has returned after an absence of two months, which she spent at the World's Fair and other places of interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Provost intend to leave here next Monday for Brattleboro, where there will remain about two weeks.

Miss Flora Green of Warren and Miss Grace Johnson of Amherst were the guests of Miss Carrie Johnson the latter part of last week.

Mrs. H. D. Geer and Miss Lucy Geer returned Friday after spending a three-weeks' vacation among relatives and friends in Centre Groton, Ct.

Rev. Mr. Brady of Newtonville preached in the Baptist church last Sunday, and is expected to occupy the pulpit next Sunday also. The society has decided to extend a call to Mr. Brady, and it is generally thought that he will accept.

F. A. Upham and family, F. W. Lavine and family, and James Tricket and family, enjoyed the privileges which the excursion on the New London Northern road offered to Block Island yesterday. The party staid at the Island until this evening.

One day this week as Miss Etta Ruggles was looking over her hen coops and collecting the eggs she found one which is quite a curiosity its measurements, being 7 by 8½ inches, and its weight 4½ ounces. This egg is larger than one of a similar nature found some weeks ago by N. K. Rogers.

A few evenings ago one of the esteemed citizens of this place thought he would recreate himself by going on a piscatorial expedition. He accordingly started out after supper with all the paraphernalia requisite for a night at the diversion, among the things being a heavy ulster, which he provided himself with in case the night should turn cold. But as he boarded his boat and was adjusting his tackle, before dipping oar, he unfortunately overbalanced and toppled into the water, and being attired in the heavy garment his recovery was not as rapid as might be, nor his walk home made with unusual celerity.

A class for the benefit of young women who desire to improve in reading and writing is receiving instructions in these branches from Mrs. Wilson of Andover, over the Company's office every morning, the session usually commencing at 9 and lasting till 10.30 or 11. Miss Wilson is an experienced teacher and is doing an excellent work among those who have not had the privileges of a school education. The average attendance thus far has been six, and these are showing their appreciation of the movement. Mrs. Wilson will continue to give the instruction during the time the mill is idle, and would be much pleased to have her class increased, and also to see those who can spare a few minutes to come in and see what an opportunity presents itself for doing good in this line of work.

Rev. F. S. Hatch left Monday for Nova Scotia to join his family, which has a cottage for the season. He will remain a month.

H. T. Chapin and Eugene Shaw have announced their intentions of entering the bicycle races to be held at Palmer Sept 4th.

Mrs. Rufus W. Leach of Somerville, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Day, has returned to her home.

Dogs got into Thomas Sutcliffe's sheep pasture recently, killing six sheep and so injuring another that the selectmen ordered it killed.

The marriage of Samuel Simmons, proprietor of the Monson Clothing House, and Miss Ray Trilling of New York, will take place Sunday.

The brick furnace room on the west side of the Heimann & Lichten shop has been torn down, and the press room is to be thoroughly overhauled.

The annual Farmers' Picnic will be held at Evergreen Park next Thursday. There will be dancing afternoon and evening, music furnished by Brown's Orchestra.

The new iron bridge on Bridge street—which by the way is the finest in town—is now passable, although the approaches will probably not be finished for several days.

A carriage of G. L. Cushman's was badly damaged the other day by the collapse of a wheel, and Hostler Kendall was dragged some distance before he was able to stop the horses.

Architect A. H. Danforth has completed plans for a $2500 house for Miss A. A. Peck of Wilbraham, and nearly finished plans for H. C. Norcross's house, which is to be built on Cushman street.

Frank Clark, 18, son of George Clark, a former resident of Monson, died Sunday of intermittent fever at his home in Highland, N. Y. The body was brought here for burial, the interment being in the Center cemetery.

William Gifford, superintendent at Heimann & Lichten's, has hired the house owned and occupied by Marble Bacon on Pleasant street. Mr. Bacon will move back to the house opposite where he formerly lived.

The following, from the Pomona, Cal., Progress, will interest those who were acquainted with Mrs. Sumner during her residence in Monson:

In the death of Mary L., wife of Rev. C. B. Sumner, of Claremont, this valley has lost one of its most highly esteemed and beloved women. She was an able assistant of her husband in the work of organizing the Congregational church of this place, and also of founding Pomona College, and has left the imprint of her zealous Christian character upon both of those institutions, as well as upon the hearts of her many friends. The deceased was for three years an uncomplaining sufferer from a cancer, during which time she underwent numerous difficult and painful surgical operations, both in this country and in Europe, which simply delayed the ultimate result. For two years she had been confined to her bed at her home in Claremont, where she died on Thursday night. The funeral was held Saturday, July 22d, Rev. L. H. Frary conducting the services. The interment took place in the cemetery at Claremont.

On a petition by Sherman Stebbins and others the selectmen have called a town meeting for next Friday at 3 p. m. to consider the following articles: To see if the town will reconsider the vote passed at a recent meeting whereby it voted to move the schoolhouse in school district No. 5 from its present location to a lot nearer the granite quarry; to see if the town will vote to build a schoolhouse at or near the present location of the schoolhouse in school district No. 5; to see what action the town will take with reference to maintaining a public school for the benefit of children living in the territory lying northerly or westerly from the present location of the schoolhouse in district No. 5; to see if the town will rescind its vote to build a new schoolhouse on State street.

The merchants' excursion to Watch Hill Wednesday was well attended. Nearly every place of business in the town was closed, thus giving the people an opportunity to enjoy a day at the seaside. About 650 availed themselves of the opportunity, leaving Monson looking as though it was entirely deserted. C. C. Keep, one of the excursionists, had a narrow escape from drowning while in bathing at Watch Hill. He had swam until he became exhausted, and had it not been for the timely aid of C. A. Orcutt and others of the party, who brought him ashore, he would surely have been drowned. Two physicians were immediately summoned, who after about twenty minutes' labor restored him to consciousness. He was taken by boat to Norwich, accompanied by Dr. N. W. Rand of Monson, where he remained over night, it being thought best not to attempt to bring him home until he had more fully recovered.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The post office squabble, which has been going on since early in June, was ended Monday by the new postmaster, J. W. Baldwin, taking possession of the business and opening up in Hollister's block. A protest was made when Mr. Baldwin first received his appointment because he wished to remove the office from Gates's store to his father's block. The post office department investigated the matter and suggested a compromise on Hollister's block. It is said the kick arose more from a desire to retain Mr. Gates, the Republican incumbent, than dissatisfaction with the new location.

LUDLOW.

James Haviland was appointed postmaster of this place Monday.

The assessors have completed their work and give the following figures: Tax rate, $13.60 on $1000; number of polls, 1164; number paying taxes on property, 704; the real estate is valued at $771,826; personal property, $264,882; tax on real estate, $10,497; on personal property, $3502. These people pay a tax of $100 or over: George D. Green, $128; Ludlow Manufacturing Co., $6333; Ludlow Cordage Co., $408; W. F. Miller, $102; Lucius Simonds, $160; M. D. L. Towne, $127; J. M. White, $229; Keefe Bros., $138.

HAMPDEN.

Secretary William R. Sessions of the State Board of Agriculture, whose home is in Hampden, will represent Massachusetts at the Agricultural Congress to be held at Chicago next fall. Some weeks ago Gov. Russell received a letter from Hon. Samuel Allerton, chairman of the World's Congress Committee on Farm Culture, requesting that he designate Massachusetts' representative at the congress. His Excellency forwarded the communication to Secretary Sessions, asking him, since he was skilled in agricultural affairs and experts, to make a nomination. Mr. Sessions consulted the officials of the various agricultural schools in quest of a worthy representative. President Goodell of the Agricultural College thought no man more fit or worthy to speak for Massachusetts than the Secretary himself, and wrote to Gov. Russell to this effect. Mr. Sessions, however, after much deliberation, recommended Hon. Daniel Needham of Groton to the governor. But the governor on Tuesday appointed Mr. Sessions. Mr. Sessions will prepare an address on the history of agriculture in Massachusetts, with special reference to cereals.

WEST WARREN.

Miss Kitty Nebert is visiting friends in Springfield.

Rev. Putnam Webber is away on a two-weeks' vacation.

Miss Jennie M. Barton of Millbury is visiting friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Clark are rejoicing in the birth of a son.

Mrs. J. S. Barrows of Brookfield spent Wednesday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Dr. O. W. Phelps and son are at the World's Fair.

Miss Hattie Fuller of Hartford, Ct., is visiting her grandaunt, Mrs. R. Baker.

Miss Rachel Shuttleworth of Amsterdam, N. Y., is visiting Thomas I. Shuttleworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Brooks are visiting their son, W. J. Brooks, at Philadelphia, Pa.

Oney St. Germain has gone to Montreal, Can., where he will spend the month of August.

Messrs. James Grant, Andrew Martin, Charles Tannebring and Napoleon Benway left Monday for the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. George Barton of Millbury made a flying visit to friends in town Wednesday, and from here they will go to New Hartford, Ct., to visit his son, Eugene Barton.

Preaching service at the Methodist church will be omitted for the next two Sundays, as the pastor, Rev. Putnam Webber, is away on his vacation. The Sunday school be held at 10.45 instead of 12 o'clock.

BRIMFIELD.

Charles G. Harrison left Tuesday for a trip to the World's Fair.

Dr. R. V. Sawin killed a large snake Monday afternoon at the lower end of the common, and a few days ago killed one in his dooryard.

The engagement of F. Edgar Brown of Brimfield to Miss Addie L. Dodge of Buckland, step-daughter of the late Dr. Josiah Trow, is announced.

Oscar F. Brown and James Noyes have applied to the assessors for a reduction of $500 each in the valuation of their property, which has been refused. The town last year refused to build a road to Warren past these farms, and the county commissioners, on being appealed to, declined to order it built. Messrs. Brown and Noyes claim that their places are depreciating in value, and accordingly ask for a reduction in their assessment.

There are several cases of scarlet fever in the village, and the chances are that there will be more before there are less. The disease was brought from Wales by a young girl who went there to work in a family where there were cases, and on her return to Brimfield she had the care of some of the children who now have it. Some of the children who had the disease lightly have been allowed to mingle with the other children sooner than was desirable, and other cases are almost sure to follow.

The talk past few days has of the town the been the breaking up of a family and the causing of a wife to leave her husband for another man. The gay Lothario, for this is not the first family in which he has caused trouble, has been boarding with the family, which lived in a house belonging to him, and paid so much attention to the wife that the husband remonstrated. Matters did not grow better, and finally the husband could stand it no longer and a few days ago left. In a day or two he went to the house and got his belongings, giving his wife an opportunity to go with him, but she turned her back and would have nothing to say to him. The "boys" were about ready to give the couple a call last Saturday night, but found that they had picked up what was left and gone to the home of his mother. What the end

BELCHERTOWN.

The annual fair and cattle-show will be held Sept. 29th.

Henry S. Hoag has the contract to build a house for Edwin White at Granby.

Miss May Hall of Pleasantville, N. Y., is visiting at Mrs. William Bridgman's.

The annual reunion of the 46th Mass. regiment will be held in this town Sept. 25th.

Miss Susie Hoeve of Boston is the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Parson.

Rev. F. F. Thayer starts on his vacation next Monday. He will be gone two weeks.

R. W. Lyman's residence on Main street has been brightened up by the application of a coat of paint.

Frank Shumway of Gardner and Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Woods of Springfield are visiting F. M. Dickenson this week.

Rev. C. H. Smith and family of Hartford, Ct., are visiting in town. Rev. Mr. Smith was a former resident of this place.

The Congregational Sunday school is planning for a picnic to be held at no distant date. Lake Pleasant is among the localities mentioned.

The ruins of the Highland House are being cleaned up. The old iron is to be removed from the cellar and the old bricks cleaned and disposed of.

Services are being held Sunday and Thursday evenings at the Barrett Mission home, conducted by members of the Cummings Mission of Springfield.

The North End market on Main street passed into the possession of C. M. Dunbar Tuesday. F. E. Bennett, who was employed by A. M. Baggs, the former proprietor, will remain with the new firm.

During the month of June 16,811 pounds of butter were made at the creamery, and 20,985 spaces of cream were sold. During the first six months of the year there have been 585,291 pounds of butter made, and the receipts being $27,291.

Haying is nearly completed. Very favorable reports are heard as to the quantity and quality of the crop. If the much-needed rains come there are good prospects for another crop. The indications are that fruit will be plenty, especially apples. Potatoes have been damaged by the continued dry weather, many fields being nearly ruined.

WALES.

The dry weather has nearly spoiled the potato crop.

Farmers will soon have to feed their cows or stop milking.

Mr. Harris, boss dyer at the Excelsior mill, has gone to the World's Fair.

Miss Anna Johnson has returned from the World's Fair and reports wonderful sights.

W. W. Mathew was badly kicked Sunday while caring for a sick horse, but is doing well.

Mrs. David Boyden and three children of Worcester are spending a few weeks at Geo. S. Rogers's.

Mrs. J. A. Leeds of Mansfield, with her two children, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. W. A. Lyon.

Mrs. Charles Moore and children have been spending a few days on the mountain farm of Orrin Moore in Brimfield.

Rev. Mr. Swafield and family, pastor of the Bethel at Boston, have arrived at the Lyon Mountain View House for a month's outing.

Mrs. Kline, who has been suffering from lameness in her feet, has concluded to take a rest and go to the World's Fair, and will make quite an extended tour in the West. Denver, Col., will be one of her stopping places; she will then go down through Texas and Mexico, and home through the Southern states. During her absence her daughter, Mrs. Rourke, will have charge of her boarding house.

The good people on the Wales road were startled from their slumbers about 11 o'clock Sunday night by cries of distress from a human being. The shouts could be heard for half a mile, and thoughts of all sorts of crimes, including murder, flashed through the minds of the hearers. Investigation however resulted in the finding of a Stafford man and his team several rods down the brook in the meadow below the old Wales pond. While the driver was asleep the horse had gone down into the driveway below the dam where people drive to water their horses, and instead of going through into the road again had wandered down the brook, which is from six to eight feet wide, and had gone several rods before the water got deep enough to enter the carriage and wake the occupant. The horse was under water with the exception of its head, but the driver had managed to get out among the bogs and stood up to his knees in the water shouting for help and not knowing where he was. About 20 of the inhabitants of the place went to his rescue, and after some work the horse was once more on dry land. The horse's breath smelled strongly of something besides brook water, and it may have been this odor which caused the driver to go to sleep during the trip; or it may have been that the driver's breath was what caused the horse to turn down the brook in an attempt to get rid of the taint, possibly feeling ashamed to take such a thing into Stafford.

WILBRAHAM.

Mr. and Mrs. Goff of New Haven are visiting in town.

Mrs. Atkins and daughter Grace are at Newport for an outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pease of Spencer are visiting relatives in town.

J. Weson Phelps is clerking for C. M. Pease during his vacation.

Miss Edith L. Corbin is home from Springfield for a two-weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Enos Calkins of Palmer are the guests of Mrs. John M. Merrick.

Mrs. John M. Merrick of Cambridge is spending a few days at her old home.

Frank L. Warner of Taylor's music store, Springfield, is home for a short vacation.

Mrs. Henry Dickinson of Champaign, Ill., is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. L. Wetherbee.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Warner of Springfield spent Sunday at Mrs. Warner's home on Maple st.

Mr. and Mrs. Myron Bradley of Somers, Ct., were the guests of Miss May Merrick Sunday.

Prof. L. M. Brewer started Monday on a western trip, and will visit the World's Fair before his return.

Miss Bessie M. Pease, of Gill's art store, Springfield, has been spending a few days at her home on South Main street.

Mrs. Butler of South Main street is visiting relatives in Colorado, and will visit the World's Fair on her return home.

Mr. and Mrs. Weishymer of Lansing, N. Y., are spending the summer at the home of Mrs. Weishymer's father, Monroe Pease.

Bert Lyman and his brother Frank of Hartford, Ct., with their brother George of Springfield, are visiting their mother, Mrs. William Lyman.

Mr. Lyman and Mrs. Cadle came into collision while riding their wheels Tuesday evening, demolishing both wheels and seriously injuring both parties.

Prof. William Warren of Boston University, and his sisters, Misses Annie and Winnie Warren of Cambridge, are spending a few weeks at their summer home.

Mrs. H. M. Bardwell of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Cambridge gave an interesting lecture on temperance in the Methodist church Monday afternoon.

The home of Jerome Pease on South Main street was the scene of a pleasant wedding Wednesday morning, when his daughter, M. Adelle, was united in marriage to Charles Hibbard of Somersville, Ct. The wedding was a quiet one, only immediate relatives being present. The bride was prettily attired in an olive-green cloth traveling suit. After a wedding breakfast the bridal couple started on a trip to the seashore. The bride has been a teacher in the public schools for many years, and active in all church work, having been president and corresponding secretary of the Christian Endeavor society a number of years, also assistant superintendent of the Sunday school at one time. She will be much missed in social circles.

WARREN.

Mrs. H. B. King is the guest of friends in Lynn.

H. H. Hitchcock left Monday for the World's Fair.

Dwight S. Ellis, a former resident, is visiting C. N. Shepherd.

Miss Ella L. Townsend of Winthrop is visiting J. H. Adams.

Dr. J. C. Cutter is home from a trip to the World's Fair and the west.

Mrs. E. B. Maynard of Springfield is the guest of friends on Coy's Hill.

Andrew Burbank is holding the reins over a handsome new driving horse.

Miss Mary C. Gage of Monson has been the guest of her brother, L. L. Gage.

Miss Lizzie Gibbs of Westfield is visiting her sister, Mrs. George K. Lincoln.

Mrs. W. U. Twitchell of Hartford, Ct., is visiting her mother, Mrs. William Lincoln, who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Holdsworth and son have left for a trip to the World's Fair and the West.

Martin Lynch has returned after a three months' absence in Ireland, where he has been looking up old acquaintances.

The whistle on the new Slater Engine Works was heard for the first time at 1 p. m. Monday. Mrs. Frank Slater, the proprietor's wife, had the honor of sounding it.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson H. Fairbanks left Monday to spend the season at the Adirondacks. They will be joined next week by Mrs. Edward Fairbanks and daughter.

Commencing last Monday the Knowles Steam Pump Works went onto an eight-hour day, five days in the week. It sounds strange to hear the whistle at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Henry Steins of Coy's Hill was before Judge Tyler Wednesday charged with an assault with a revolver on Frank Parriso. Steins, Parriso and another party were driving from Ware when the trouble occured. Steins was committed to Worcester jail in default of bail, to await the action of the grand jury at Fitchburg the second Monday in August.

The school committee held a meeting Monday to select a principal for the high school. Walter S. Weeks, a graduate of Bowdoin College, and for five years a teacher, two at Thomaston, Me., and three in this state, was chosen. He presented very satisfactory recommendations. There will be about the same teachers in the schools of this village this year as last. At West Warren there are several vacancies to be filled.

Victor J. Sherburne, who recently purchased the late Dea. Jennings place on Maple street, is making extensive improvements on the property. Two bay windows will be put on the front of the house, and an addition in the rear 39 by 28 feet is being built two stories high, and the old ell will be removed. This will make two good seven-room tenements, one of which will be occupied by Mr. Sherburne. He will also build a barn on the place.

WARE.

W. S. Dunham has bought a farm at South Monson, and is expecting to move there soon.

J. B. Sibley has had a week's outing with his wheel through Central Massachusetts, and reports an enjoyable trip.

Trinity Episcopal chuch will be closed during August, the pastor, Rev. E. J. V. Huigin, having gone on his vacation.

Thomas French, who has become known as a good workman, has opened a harness shop in Storrs's block, corner of North and Main streets.

From the large number of teams that line Main street these pleasant afternoons no one would for a moment think of hard times or that trade was dull.

O. M. Billings, well known here when he was overseer in the Otis Company's hosiery department, is now in business as manufacturer's agent at Memphis, Tenn.

Reduced rate tickets will be sold to the Advent campmeeting at Springfield, commencing to-day. Miss Lucy D. Harrington will be assistant at the bookstore, and will be pleased to see any from Ware.

A move in the right direction has been made by the selectmen in making arrangements for street signs. They have fixed upon their location, and have appointed William C. Eaton to see that the houses are correctly numbered.

Miss Emma V. Hall, teacher of the grammar school, will spend her vacation at a famous resort on the coast of Maine in company with Mrs. Bancroft, formerly Miss Susan C. Wood, at one time assistant teacher of the Ware high school.

From the assessors we learn the following: Persons assessed on property, 884; for poll tax only, 1261; total, 2145; total polls, 1778; number of horses, 580; cows, 752; sheep, 86; neat cattle other than cows, 236; swine, 115; dwelling houses, 865; acres of land, 16,570.

District Deputy Twogood of Three Rivers visited the Ware lodge of the A. O. U. W. at its last regular meeting, after which a banquet was served in the hall. Past Master Workman J. P. Pero of Ware lodge has recently organized lodges in Indian Orchard and North Brookfield.

It has been reported that the Ware Cornet Band was making arrangements to give two open air concerts per week during this month, but have given it up for want of a place suitable for the purpose, as Mr. Holden did not care to have his lawn cut up, and the beauty of the town hall lot could not be marred.

Town Clerk Richardson reports 73 deaths from Jan. 1 to Aug. 1, against 88 for the same period last year. The ages of the deceased were as follows: Under 1 year of age, 23; 1 to 5, 6; 5 to 10, 1; 10 to 20, 3; 20 to 30, 4; 30 to 40, 4; 40 to 50, 6; 50 to 60, 6; 60 to 70, 9; 70 to 80, 4; 80 to 90, 4; aged 99, 1; aged 95, 1; aged 91, 1. Last year in the month of August there were 25 deaths.

Rev. James Boyle, rector of All Saints' church, announced to his congregation Sunday that any member of the parish who wished to buy a stained glass window for the new church upstairs could do so up to Tuesday. All the windows in the sanctuary but one have already been provided with windows costing from $200 to $1000 each. The windows in the body of the church will cost $150 each.

There was a bit of a run on the Ware Savings Bank last week, but all demands were promptly paid and the scare was soon over. Those who took out their money were puzzled what to do with it, and in one case, after watching it over night the person brought it back in the morning, having had a sleepless night and being out of pocket about $11 by loss of interest, as the sum could not go on interest again until next October. Rev. James Boyle gave his people a talk on the subject on Sunday, telling them that the Ware savings bank was one of the best managed in the state, which we believe is conceded by everybody who knows anything about it.

Joe Brais, who has been employed in the Otis Co's. dye house, was arrested and locked up yesterday afternoon by Officers Fitzgerald and Ramsdell for assaulting Frank I. Bohmiller, a peaceable and respected farmer on the road to Gilbertville. Mr. Bohmiller found Brais in his corn field and asked him what he was there for, when he was knocked down and kicked about the face, several teeth being knocked out and his face badly cut and bruised. There were three other companions with Brais, but they were not connected with the assault. This morning he was fined $20 in the district court.

THE COLT STAKES.

Promise of Great Sport for Horsemen at the New England Fair.

With more than 70 entries for the colt races at the New England Fair at Worcester, Sept. 4th and 5th inclusive, there is every prospect of most exciting and interesting sports. Especially in the races for 3 and 4-years olds do the contests promise to be the warmest and most hair-splitting of any races ever held on the fair ground track. In both of these classes there is a chance for some good colt to go in and scoop first money in the first heat. The committee have shrewdly provided that any colt distancing the field in the first heat shall go to the stable and receive first money leaving the field to scrap for the rest of the money. Now there are plenty of owners in New England who imagine they have entered the colt that is correct'y built for such a feat. In the 5-years old stake there are 20 entries, and in the 4-years old 13. None of these colts are named as yet, but it is a well-known fact that only the best and most speedy ones are to be nominated for these entries. First money in either race will amount to $350 or more, and to win this in a single heat is what many of the youngsters will be sent to do when the word is given from the starter's stand. In the attempt to do this, there is also the possibility of danger to the faster colts, and if the object is not gained after a supreme effort, the chances of the slower but longer-winded ones is greatly enhanced. In either event the race will be for blood and the reddest blood, and will be one of the grand features of the grandest of grand fairs.

As an after-dinner pill, to strengthen the stomach, assist digestion, and correct any bilious tendencies, Ayer's Pills are considered the best. Being sugar-coated, they are as agreeable as any confection, and may be taken by the most delicate.

During the dog-day season the drain of nervous and vital energy may be counteracted by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In purifying the blood it acts as a superb corrective and tonic, and enables the system to defy malarial and other climatic influences.

Found Dead.

Last evening a person giving the name of G. R. Thompson registered at Hunt's Hotel, and desired to be called in season to take the 12 p. m. train for Chicago. Being unable to awaken him, the room was entered by means of the ventilator over the door, when the gentleman was found to be dead. He was advertising agent for Sulphur Bitters, which has an extensive sale. The coroner returned a verdict of death from heart disease. His body will be sent east immediately.—Cin. Commercial.

"HEALTH AND BEAUTY."

This is the title of a department in Fashions, conducted by Eleanor Rogers, M. D., a physician of many years practice and unusual success. It is devoted exclusively to the answering of enquireis in regard to every kind of hygiene—public, home and personal—as well as to the means and methods of improving the personal appearance by diet, exercise, and the legitimate use of cosmetics and all toilet appliances. It will also prescribe the use of medicines whenever expedient without a closer knowledge of the patient.

"GOOD FORM."

This department of Fashions is under the special care of one of the best known and most tasteful society women in this country, Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood, who makes it her special pleasure to answer such questions as pertain to social customs, etiquette, and the conduct of well-bred society.

"THE CORNER COUNSELLOR."

In this department of Fashions Octave Thanet, one of the wisest, wittiest and best-loved writers in this country, chats familiarly with women on all sorts of topics, grave and gay, and suggestive of home and social interest.

Fashions is a high-class magazine of fashion and literature. Its illustrations are artistic and graceful pictures, the work of the best engravers. Some of the best writers of the day are among the contributors to its literary pages.

Buy a gallon of common cheap paint, and cover any wood, iron and stone work you like. Then buy half a gallon of Chilton Paint, add a little linseed oil to it. You will find that the half gallon covers nearly as much surface as the gallon of "cheap paint." But the difference does not end here. The appearance of the work when done, is to the advantage of the Chilton Paint. It has a better gloss and a more solid look than the other. Why? Because it is made with pure linseed oil. Even here the difference does not end. Look at the work in a year or two afterward and see which paint was the most durable. The Chilton? Why certainly! It was made to wear—not merely to sell. It is seven times ground and has nothing but the best materials in it. Wherever once used, it is always used afterwards because it has never yet failed to give complete satisfaction when properly applied. Get a pound can of it and examine it. Ask of people who have used it.

Dyspepsia will Kill a Well Man

The Kind that Never Fails

Our Remedy will Kill Dyspepsia

Dyspepsia is a subtle disease which lurks along the highway of health, and steals on its victim by slow and stealthy advances. When the first treacherous blow has been given a horde of accomplices rush forward and rob life of every enjoyment.

About Leon's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. Granville E. Richards, of Scarsmont, Me., writes as follows:

Gentlemen:—I have been a sufferer from Dyspepsia for years. No one knows what I have suffered both in body and in mind. As my strength gradually failed I became nervous, despondent at times and completely discouraged. I have tried almost every remedy offered for my trouble, but nothing ever helped me, and life was still a burden until I took Leon's Sarsaparilla, which went directly to the spot, and I began immediately to gain in flesh, strength, and spirits. I am now a well man. Nothing I eat distresses me, and once more the future seems bright. Leon's Sarsaparilla cured my Dyspepsia.

Beaux Yeux.

Once Cupid was weeping in pain and dismay
And railing at cheating and theft,
For he'd lost both his bow and his arrows at play
And all of a quiver was left.

"What arms have I now," cried the child in despair,
"To kindle the heart into flame?
My power is vanished! Oh, ill shall I fare
In lands that are loveless and tame."

At the thought of this bitterest cup he must sup—
His tears into rivulets ran,
But they suddenly stopped, and a laugh bubbled up
To his lips, for he thought of a plan:

"How foolish, how foolish, this sorrow to show,
To fill all the air with my sighs!
For what is the need of my arrow and bow
When I can use Nellie's gray eyes?"

—Rowan Stevens in Kate Field's Washington.

UTILIZING AN ALLIGATOR.

A curious experience of a Florida camping party is narrated by one of the members in a letter to the New York Tribune. The camp was on one of the innumerable tributaries of the St. John river. At least twice a day some of the young people went over to camp in an old flat-bottomed boat, carrying articles which they supposed would be useful. The day before our outdoor life was to begin the old boat made a great many trips. On one occasion there were four of us going over, and we took tools, hammer and nails, ropes, canned meats, etc. As we were nearing the opposite shore a young woman in the party espied some beautiful wild flowers. There was a submerged log directly in front of the bank where they grew, but as our boat was strong, and she said she would be heartbroken unless she could have them, we rowed directly over the log, and one of us leaned out to pick the blossoms.

Suddenly our boat began to move in a most extraordinary manner, going neither forward nor backward, but straight up! "Alligator!" shrieked some one, and we instantly realized that the supposed log we had seen was in reality a living saurian. Three of us were almost paralyzed with fear, but the fourth and brightest of our party was equal to the emergency. In far less time than it takes to tell it, he had snatched up the hammer and nails and was using the first article to drive the second through the bottom of the boat. "You'll have to help me; we must be quick. Take off your shoes and use the heels as hammers!" he cried, and, realizing the necessity of blind obedience, we began driving nails, too. His intention dawned on us by the time it had become a finished action, and we complimented him on his idea of pinning the alligator to our boat with nails.

But our prisoner was not pleased, and began thrashing the water violently. Again our clever friend came to the rescue. "Does either of you girls wear black stockings?" said he. One of us did. "Then sit up in the end of the boat and dangle your feet in the water. No, don't put your shoes on! Now swing your feet to the right!" The young woman followed his directions, and, wonderful to relate, the boat slowly moved to the right. Oars were useless; the alligator bore us home on his back, and we showed our gratitude by putting him out of his misery as soon as we could.

"But how did you know he'd carry the boat, and why did he go where I steered? And above all, why were black stockings necessary?"

"Have you ever heard of tying a carrot to the end of a whip and dangling it in front of a balky horse to make him go? My idea was based on that. You swung your feet inthewater, and, seeing the black the 'gator,' fancied you were his favorite article of food—a nice, plump little darky. He followed where you led. The nails prevented his reaching you, though his hide was so tough they hurt him but little, and certainly didn't interfere with his powers of locomotion, as we've seen."

The end of the adventure came some months later in the shape of an alligator-skin pocketbook for each member of the party. The skin used was that of our captured foe, and in the upper corner of each purse was a tiny golden nail.

FISHING IN THE FOG.

Yes, Eddy was always a good story-teller, and for a truthful man, he had some pretty good stories to tell.

"Half a dozen of us commuters, who lived in the same suburb, leased a pond at one time of an old farmer, stocked it with trout fry, spent a good deal of money trying to keep poachers out of it, fished it ourselves in rotation in the early mornings with indifferent success, and amused ourselves on the train in and out of the city making each other jealous by the account of the catches we had made.

"All except Eddy—he never made any of us jealous, and we all knew in our hearts it was because he told the plain truth about his luck. None of us would acknowledge it, however, and Eddy passed from the stage of violent jealousy of all of us into moody despair at his own luck, which persistently remained about seventy-five per cent below our alleged article.

"It amused us a good deal that Eddy did not catch on to our lies, and we used to speculate how long it would take him to do so.

"One morning we all gathered at the station and Eddy's face was radiant. This surprised us, for the early hours before sunrise had been so exceedingly foggy that we thought no trout could see a fly, and as that was Eddy's morning to fish the pond we all expected to find him bluer than ever.

"'Boys, I had an amazing luck this morning," exclaimed Eddy, and there was a ring of exultant sincerity in his voice. 'It was frightfully foggy and I could not see my fly after I had cast it, so I did not expect anything, but the trout took it in a way I never heard of, much less saw before. It beat any of you fellows' catches all hollow. I kept pulling them in and pulling them in till I stopped out of sheer consideration for you.

"'This is downright murder!' I said to myself; 'the fish are crazy, and I won't clean out the entire pond and leave nothing for the other fellows!

"So I filled my basket out of the flopping pile I had collected on the bank, threw the remainder back into the pond and started home.

"Just then the wind sprung up, the sun came out, the fog rolled away in immense banks, and I found I had not been within a hundred yards of that blamed old pond at all.

"'I swear to you, boys, I had been catching those fish right out of the fog!'

"Eddy had caught on."—New York Herald.

"Confound it!" exclaimed Jackson, "what a stupid fellow that jeweller is!" "How so?" inquired his friend. "Why I told him the other day that I wanted engraved in the engagement ring the letters 'From A to Z'—from Arthur to Zenobia, you know—and the idiot went to work and put in the whole alphabet!"—Harper's Bazar.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A Perfect Cure

Elder J. H. Austin

Mr. Joel H. Austin is a man very highly esteemed by all who know him. He is now pension attorney at Goshen, Ind., and was for 20 years a Baptist missionary minister. He says: "I suffered years with swelling of my limbs, at times very painful, especially at night. I could not sleep. I have taken six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and for weeks there has not been any swelling of my feet and limbs. I have also suffered for years with catarrh in the head, which was working down into my lungs. Since trying Hood's Sarsaparilla the pain in my head has stopped and I am positive of a perfect cure." Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DON'T SEND ANY TAGS BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1894.

THE SEVEN BELLS.

"Every now and then in overhauling literature I see where the old gophers are still letting off loud howls which make me weary."

It was Mr. Tokens, the marine, who thus complained of the gophers and their conduct in literature as he stowed his timber leg under the mess table and brought his hairy fist down on the same with a thump that made the dishes dance. The old gentleman looked weary, a condition the skipper remarked and which cause Mr. Skate, A. B., to wish we were only half as tired.

The Seven Bells club was in executive session in the cabin of the Anchor chophouse, with Mr. Tokens in the chair. He had evidently been reading something which did not agree with him. It was seldom anything did meet his views, unless it were an invitation to drink, and then he only consented with apparent reluctance.

No one, not even the inquisitive lubber, Willie Bloke, ventured a query regarding the old gophers until after the skipper had ordered a bottle of red wine with which to raft the rib steaks home. Then the recognized head of the organization addressed Mr. Tokens:

"So the gophers are at it again?" he hazarded though he had not the remotest idea of what the marine was driving at.

"They are always at it, howling through the long and the dog watches and making all hands sick. If they didn't have the boots or the bug juice, why didn't they give an order on the nearest store and let us have peace?"

As Mr. Tokens delivered himself of this remarkable statement the club exchanged uneasy glances, and Willie Bloke grew pale.

"Give him some seltzer or something," he whispered to the skipper.

"May I ask you, sir, what kind of literature you have been overhauling?" the skipper gently inquired, paying no heed to the lubber's agitation.

"The early logs of different states—history, I believe they call it, which is full of old gophers who could have bought the lot where the courthouse now stands for a pair of boots, or got a quit claim deed to the after end of Kansas for a pint of whisky. But they didn't have the boots or the liquor, so they kept on howling."

"He's all right," whispered the skipper, greatly relieved. "I've heart these howls myself."

"They are driving express wagons now or loafing around in groceries," Mr. Tokens went on, "blowing their lungs out telling how rich they would be if things had been different. That's what makes me weary. It isn't the chances a man has in life, but the way he hooks on and uses his head and steering gear. You never heard me growling about the hard luck that left me stranded in my old age."

"Have you had some narrow escapes?" asked the lubber.

"Escapes from what?"

"Being wealthy."

"Well, I should say I have. Boots, moldly blankets and beverages are nowhere, but it wasn't my fault. A lunk headed, chuckle brained, tar tainted ignorant seaman blasted my hopes in life." And Mr. Tokens broke forth into a torrent of picturesque blasphemy that would have exhausted a pirate's repertory.

"These here remarks about ignorant able seamen is a swipe at me, I take it," said Mr. Skate, rising and waving his fists in the air.

"Don't get choppy," cautioned the skipper as he dragged Mr. Skate back into his chair. "Let the man spin. You ain't the only able seaman alive."

Apologies followed, and then the marine squared away on the course suggested by the old gophers in literature.

"A shipwreck that left me to starve on a desert island would have made my pile, but for this bull headed able seaman. He's dead now and out of the way, but my sailing days are over since I got this leg." Here Mr. Tokens pounded the leg on the floor and did a little more ornamental swearing.

"We were bound from Liverpool to Australia with general cargo when an equinoxial gale ripped the canvas off us and drove the ship ashore. The ship grounded in the night on Sydney island in the South sea, one of the Phoenix group, located in longitude 171 degrees 22 minutes west, latitude 25 degrees south, and all hands perished but me and one able seaman. When daylight came, we found ourselves on a desolate lagoon island lying low on the horizon and leagues away from the track of navigation. The hull of the vessel, which was an iron one, was piled up on the beach with bales, barrels and boxes of cargo that came ashore with the wreck.

"There was plenty to eat and drink, but the seaman wanted to lay right down and die. I kicked him a couple of times, but he still wanted to die, so I set off to explore the island. The ship's boats were all gone, and I knew we were doomed so far as rescue was concerned, but I never let on to the seaman. It didn't take me long to make the circuit of the island, and I found something that gave me an idea, and a good one too."

At this point Mr. Tokens was again overcome. He smote himself on the brow and cursed the memory of the able seaman who had blighted his life. A drink, however, restored him, and he started in again.

"Where was I at?" he asked.

"You had just made a discovery," replied the club deeply interested.

"About 100 yards from the wreck and close to the beach I stumbled on to a sperm whale aground on his stomach in a dry gull with his head out to sea. He was partly buried in the sand washed up by the gale."

"Was the whale dead?" Willie Bloke inquired.

"Of course he was. Do you suppose he would be cruising inland if he wasn't? He had a harpoon in his ribs, which I reckon killed him before the storm threw him up on the island. Going back to the seaman and giving him a few more kicks—rapid ones they were—I told him we were saved.

"'How so?' he says.

"'Ask no questions,' said I, 'but turn to and help.' He braced up, and we unshipped the main topgallant yard from the wreck. This was a hollow iron spar about 40 feet long with a woolen plug in each end. We pulled the plugs out and then went to overhauling the cargo. Luck was with me, and I soon found what I wanted. This was a lot of bales of loose cotton packing in long strands the size of a man's thumb. We stretched this out in the sun, and when it got dry me and the able seaman plaited a long wick to fit the iron spar. Then we rove it through, with about 10 fathoms to spare, and planted the spar in the whale's blowhole, with the extra wick floating around in the spermaceti inside of his head. I reckon the whale had about 20 barrels of fine oil in his brain locker. We guyed the spar with small wire cables, and then I made the seaman shin up and touch her off."

"Did it burn?" the skipper gravely inquired.

"You have seen a tar barrel afire, I reckon. Well, that is a tallow dip compared to my lighthouse. She loomed up like a torchlight procession on end. The able seaman said I should have been an admiral and wanted to kiss my hand, but I set him to work with a shovel burying the whale. It was hot weather, and I wanted to keep the oil cool. By working all night we got the whale under cover, caving in the soft sides of the gully and then banked the base of the spar with rocks.

"In the morning I concluded to douse the lamp because it was a big waste of oil and did no good in daylight. So I sent the seaman aloft with a tin pail to snuff the wick, but the blooming spar was so hot he couldn't get more than half way up. There was nothing to do but loaf around and let her burn.

"For nearly three weeks she blazed, lighting up the sea for miles around. The light attracted birds of all kinds, but no ships. It kept us busy daytimes dragging away the fowls that flew into the flame at night, and the smell of burning feathers nearly drove us off the island. At last a trading schooner raised our beacon light, put in, and we were saved. The captain was struck with my light house and wanted to know how I kept her going.

"Oh, that's an oil well we discovered," I said, giving the able seaman a kick.

"So," said the captain, "and who owns the island?"

"We do," I said, and so did the able seaman before I could kick him again.

"Do you want to sell out?" he asked.

"To be sure, if you've got the figure," I said.

"How much?"

"Forty thousand dollars in cash money."

"Done," said the captain. "Come aboard the schooner and get the money."

Once more Mr. Tokens filled up and was about to founder, but the skipper rescued him with a pull at the bottle. Then he fetched a sigh that sounded like the wind whistling through a cemetery as the wreck of ruined hopes floated out of the past.

"Dad bing his onery picture, but that able seaman was low and ignorant! He wasn't rigged for business, but got frothy all at once and said he wanted a plug of eating tobacco to boot on the $40,000 before he left the island. You see, he thought he was smart like me and wanted to sail a sharp bargain, but the captain was pretty close hauled on a deal himself. I kicked the seaman some more and promised him two plugs when we got to San Francisco, but he said he was no flying fish, and that wealth would make me proud and haughty.

"We backed and filled for two days with the deal hove to. Then the captain was about to split the difference with half a plug when the whale went dry, the wick fell in, and I was left on my beam ends. Holy smoke, but that captain got mad! He threatened to leave us on the island, but the idiot seaman begged so hard the old man calmed down again and allowed us to work our passage home. But we might have owned the schooner."

At this point in his narrative Mr. Tokens lurched heavily, his sail came down with a run, and he threatened to roll his spar deck under. But the skipper and Mr. Skate took charge of the derelick and made a rough passage home in a water front hack.—Charles Dryden in San Francisco Examiner.

A Prominent Business Man OF BOSTON, TELLS OF UNEXPECTED RELIEF

"I Recommend Dana's to All!"

Mr. Denon, whose statement follows, has been engaged in the Furniture and House Furnishing business at his place on Dover St. for over 30 years. Read his wonderful statement:

"For the last 3 or 4 years I have been obliged to take a vacation in the Spring. And last March I was feeling unusually miserable. I was so nervous I could not get to sleep some nights until six o'clock in the morning, and when I did sleep would have horrible dreams. A friend came in and recommended and PILLS. I did not have much faith in patent medicines, but I procured the Sarsaparilla and Pills. Before one bottle was gone I unexpectedly found I was receiving great benefit. My appetite became ravenous, could eat four square meals a day. I had taken four bottles and can sleep all night and get up as fresh as I did 20 years ago. I also had Varicose Veins on my left leg that were very bad, and they are almost well. I recommend DANA'S SARSAPARILLA and PILLS to all. A number of my friends have also been greatly benefited.

Yours very truly, P. M. DENON.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter has budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

It Tastes Good

One reason why Scott's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda has had such a large sale is because it is "Almost as palatable as milk;" but the best reason is that its curative properties are unequalled. It cures the cough, supplies the waste of tissues, produces flesh and builds up the entire system.

Scott's Emulsion cures Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, and all Anaemic and Wasting Diseases. Prevents wasting in children. Almost as palatable as milk. Get only the genuine. Prepared by Scott & Bowne, Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

A Friend

Wishes to speak through the Register of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of AYER'S PILLS. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills."—Boothbay (Me.) Register.

In Need

"Between the ages of five and fifteen I was troubled with a kind of salt rheum, or eruption, chiefly confined to the legs, and especially to the bend of the knee above the calf. Here running sores formed which would scab over, but would break immediately on moving the leg. My mother tried everything she could think of, but all was without avail. Although a child, I read in the papers about the beneficial effects of Ayer's Pills, and persuaded my mother to let me try them. With no great faith in the result, she procured and I began to use them, and soon noticed an improvement. Encouraged by this, I kept on till I took two boxes, when the sores disappeared and have never troubled me since."—H. Chipman, Real Estate Agent, Roanoke, Va.

Ayer's Pills

"I suffered for years from stomach and kidney troubles, causing very severe pains in various parts of the body. None of the remedies I tried afforded me any relief until I began taking Ayer's Pills, and was cured." —Wm. Goddard, Notary Public, Five Lakes, Mich.

Moon-Beauty.

Fair and bright with borrowed light
The moon in yonder skies,
As empress of this glorious night
Doth gladden many eyes.
Her seeming silver surface shows
No wrinkle, blotch or scar,
While o'er the floor of heaven she goes
As stainless as a star.

Ah! could we see her pits agape,
Her dead volcanoes view,
Would we admire the shining shape
That blinds the starry blue?
Her troubled face if we could trace,
Her sunken sides could see,
Her faded form no longer warm,
We'd disenchanted be.

Though well-apportioned she appear,
The showy, shining moon
Has shekels not enough, I fear,
To make a silver spoon.
And though she is this very night
Of heaven the bonnie belle,
On the side that we have not in sight
Doth darkness brood and dwell.

O, waning dame, who thinks no shame
At ball or dance to shine,
Made fair by art the while thy heart
'S a cinder warmed by wine;
Put off thy diamonds, nor disguise
Thyself as fairy elf;
Look at the moon in yonder skies
And then upon thyself.

O, maiden fair, whose golden hair
Like halo round thy head
Thy moon-face shows sweet as the rose
Before a leaf is shed;
Shine not my love by any light
But that which is thine own,
And shut thy window casement tight,
Nor make the moon to moan.

Beauty of form in maid or wife
May well our senses win,
While that which lasts beyond this life
Still cometh from within.
Not all that seemeth fair afar
In beauty's mould is cast;
To come in contact with a star
Might make us stand aghast.

MOSES TEGGART.

A JACQUEMINOT BUD.

Juliet sat on the broad arm of a large veranda-chair, slowly rocking back and forth and munching a slice of bread and butter, tiny bits of which dropped now and then on the spotless floor or melted in small dark stains on the cover of the new magazine she held in one hand. There was an expression of peaceful innocence on her small black face, quite at variance with her inner consciousness of wrong-doing; but then, Juliet did not trouble herself with fine distinctions in moral questions; her goodness was of the negative kind, and consisted largely of very bad deeds left undone.

As the last crumbs sifted through her fingers, she lifted the hem of her fresh pink gingham and wiped her lips, saying impatiently: "Thar, Julyet, you'se gwine an' done jus' what Mis' Cannon tole ye nebber to do—eat yo' lunch on the parlor veranda; you'se a bad girl, Julyet—disobejence is yo' wustest fault."

Her soliloquy was interrupted by her mother, whose slow drawling voice calling "Julyet, Julyet! whar is the chile?" elicited no reply from the self-condemned culprit, who was carelessly poking the tell-tale crumbs under a convenient newspaper with the toe of her slipper.

"Julyet, doan't yo' hear me, Julyet Cannon?"

At the last word, a smile crept over the little black face, and she turned it slowly toward her mother.

"Whenebber yo' disremembers to say Julyet Cannon, yo' needn't spec' no reply, Lizzie; I done tole yo' heaps o' times."

"Git right down offen Mr. Cannon's big cheer, and put Miss Mercedes' new mag'zine on dat table dis minit. Mammy got sumfun for yo' dat yo' won't taste wif you mouf, Julyet Cannon."

"I'se gwine to stay right here on dis v'randa, Lizzie, an' I doan't want no more words 'bout it. Miss Merc'des she say: "Julyet, yo' sit here and watch fer Mr. Robert Lee on his bicycle. I've got sumfun very partic'lar to say to him 'bout the masquerade pahty; now, doan't yo' let him go by.' T'ink I'll disremember dat, and dis'p'int Miss Merc'des? Yo' go straight inter de parlor an' 'ten yo' dustin', and tell ole mammy dat Julyet Cannon'll come when she gits ready."

The tall sad-faced woman made no further remonstrance, but went back to her work.

Mammy and Lizzie, the last of the family servants, came north with Mrs. Cannon at the time of her marriage. Lizzie herself had married several years later, but had remained in Mrs. Cannon's service, where Juliet had been born. A true negro in color and temperament, the child had inherited her mother's small and not too irregular features and soft sad eyes. She had been petted and spoiled from her babyhood; Lizzie had never been allowed to restrain or reprove her in any way; that privilege mammy reserved exclusively for herself. Mrs. Cannon and Mercedes delighted in her cunning ways, and suffered the unstinted adoration the child bestowed upon them to cover a multitude of willful deeds and a host of shortcomings peculiar to her race.

Having disposed of her mother and the crumbs, Juliet began to look around her for something to do. Placing the chairs and large wicker table at one side, she drew her short skirts about her, fastening them in a peculiarly constructed knot; then, closing the Venetian shutters that shaded the piazza, she threw her small slippered feet into the air and walked slowly across the floor on her hands. As she reached the steps, she caught a glimpse, through the tightly drawn braids that had fallen over her face, of Miss Mercedes coming slowly up the walk to the house. An instant sufficed to restore Juliet to a very demure little colored girl, with a heated face and a weary expression.

"Oh, Miss Merc'des!" she exclaimed, "I'se spent dis hull mornin' gwine up and down dis hot walk, a-lookin' fer Mr. Robert Lee, and jest about two minits ago he rode by on his new horse, with Miss Mabel Wentworth side o' him. An' I says to me: 'Now I reckon Miss Merc'des'll be mad.' "

"Your vivid imagination and ready tongue ought to make your fortune some day, you sinful little Juliet," laughingly returned Mercedes. "Mr. Lee is out of town this morning. I have been sitting with Miss Wentworth for an hour, and not once have those lazy feet of yours touched the walk between the house and the hedge. You must go to the kitchen and mammy now; I can't trust you again until you have had time to think upon your wickedness, you small black Jacqueminot."

"Oh, please, Miss Merc'des, please doan't send me roun' to that ole kitchen. I'll jest set right down heah at your feet, and fan you and Miss Wentworth every minit, an' keep all de flies 'way, an' I won't heah one word yo'se sayin'. I'll be jess as deef as a—as a ladder, I will—'deed, Miss Merc'des," pleaded Juliet.

The young lady took no further notice of the child, of whose presence she seemed unaware, as she and her friend discussed the costumes and characters to be represented at the party in the evening. In a small willow chair that Mrs. Cannon allowed her to call her own, and the right to which Juliet maintained most vigorously against the claims of the house cat and Miss Mercedes' pug, who shared with the little darky that young lady's affection, she sat with a dreamy far-away look in her large eyes, and an occasional nod, as if she were making an effort to keep herself awake, eagerly listening to the delightful description of dresses and dances, of flowers and favors, which, with all her hungry soul she longed to see and enjoy. At last, with a sudden lighting of her darkey face, she sprang from her chair, bounded down the steps, and disappeared in the shrubbery that separated the garden from the lawn.

"Oh, ho! is yo' comin' to look a'ter the message yo' sent ole mammy, or did yo' t'ink it's time fer yo' jam-tart and milk? I's been powerful worried 'bout yo' honey—feared yo' fainted 'way somewhars; yo' hain't had nuffin' to eat fer mor'n two hours, Miss Julyet Cannon."

Mammy stretched her fat arm to grasp the slender figure of the girl; but Juliet slipped under the hand she half distrusted, and perched upon the table, where the old woman had spread her luncheon.

"Julyet Cannon! umph! yo' favors de Cannons in yore compleeshun, cert'inly, ole mammy tinks; yore lips a little large, and yore hair curls hard fer a real Cannon. I'se ben 'quainted wif dis fambly mor'n fifty years, and yo'se der fust niggah dat wuz eber found in it," said mammy, whose anger outran her discretion in dealing with her refractory grandchild. Juliet started as though stung by the quick stroke of a lash, and, clutching mammy's bare arm, she set her small white teeth in its ebony flesh, only releasing it to shower on her tormentor the pent-up rage that knew no bounds when that odious epithet "nigger" was applied to herself.

"Mammy's own child, shore 'nuff," muttered the old woman, as she passed her hand slowly over the smarting wound on her arm. Then, in a coaxing, tender voice, she continued: "Nebber mind, honey; mammy's heap sorry she hu't ye. Dere's mo' tarts in de but'ry, and all de iced milk yo' can drink." And she turned to caress the tiny black idol of her faithful heart.

In a small dark room called the "tower-den," to which Juliet was sometimes banished when all other punishments failed to accomplish their work, the child lay stretched upon the floor for hours, her face buried in her hands, her slender frame trembling now and then with the hard dry sobs that were the only visible sign of her hidden agony. Once her mother cautiously tried the door, calling softly: "Poor baby, come to your mother; she's right down sorry fer yo'. Come see Miss Mercedes' beautiful dress a-layin' on de bed fer de pahty dis ebenin'."

The child made no reply, but, clinching her hands till the nails sank into the cold, quivering flesh, she waited until the sound of a closing door told her that her mother had gone down to the family rooms; then, lifting her drawn tense face, she looked angrily at the spot where her mother had stood, exclaiming: "Doan't yo' talk to me no mo' 'bout Miss Merc'des, Lizzie; I hate her! I hate her white face an' her yellow h'r. Yo'se allus a-sayin': 'Look at Miss Merc'des.' I won't look at her; she wouldn't be no prettier than me, if she was a black colored pussun. O! dear, dear!" And the tears began to fall in great shining drops; tears hot and burning enough to have washed the pitiful face white as ivory, if tears could only do such blessed work.

For a few moments Juliet sat with her hands clasped about her knees, upon which she rested her wet chin, slowly rocking to and fro, the embodiment of childish grief and despair; but the tide had turned. Nature heals so many hurts, when we are children, with these very tears, that we refuse to shed over the wounds in after years, and so, deprived of her sweet balm, they ache and smart to the bitter end.

"You'se wicked, Juylet, berry wicked; Miss Merc'des says so, and mammy, too. You'se disobejent; Mrs. Cannon say dat, and she knows. And Mr. Cannon he say: 'Yo' can't nebber make anythin' good outen dat chile Julyet; better gib it up.' I reckon dey's about right. I'll try not to disap'int dem. Dat pert little Merc'des, she ask one day: 'Why doan't yo' lib up to yore prib'liges, Juylet?' And now I jess gwine to do it dis berry night, see if I doan't," said the girl, throwing her head on one side and giving a merry gurgling laugh that brought all the sunshine and carelessness back to her face.

Lizzie was very sick that night; and mammy, with the care of dinner and anxiety for her suffering child, had neither time nor thought for Juliet.

Miss Mercedes had accepted the kindly proffered assistance of her friend's maid for her evening toilet, since Lizzie could do nothing to help her, and her mother would not return from the city, where she had spent the day, until a late hour that night.

Leaning over the balustrade on the floor above, Juliet saw the two friends pass through the hall, and heard Mercedes exclaim: "Look, Mabel, there is the box with my new gown for your lawn-party next week! Mamma has sent it down by an earlier train; how I wish we had time to take a peep at it before we dress for the masquerade."

"But we havn't cheric; Cecil has a double duty to-night, you know—so don't stop, there's a dear," coaxed Mable Wentworth.

Over the balustrade came a small dark figure, and once more the gurgling laugh announced a merry Juliet.

"Mussiful Proverdence! Merc'des new dress right heah in de house, an' me a-wantin' one for dis berry night; dat's what mammy'd call 'direc' interpersition.' "

A very few moments sufficed Juliet to carry the long box to Mercedes' dressing room, where, with locked doors and carefully screened windows, she began her hurried preparations for the party. The child sank upon the floor in an estacy of admiration when the soft paper wrappers had been removed and the contents of her box were suddenly revealed to her delighted eyes. One by one, she placed them on the bed, laughing softly or uttering low cries of joy. Miss Mercedes' toilet was an affair at which she had often assisted; there was no detail with which she was not familiar, and, in the wickedness of her heart, she had determined to sacrifice love, gratitude and confidence upon the altar of this night's enchantment.

One by one, she donned the dainty bits of silken underwear, so carefully folded in the drawers of the tall chiffonier. The exquisitely tinted hose, and high-heeled shoes to match, with their glittering bows, could not have been more perfectly fitted to the small ebony feet for which they were never intended. The lump in Juliet's throat, as she applied the scented rice-powder to her obnoxious skin, threatened to send the tears over her rapidly changing face.

"Lordy! I'se powerful 'fraid dere ain't 'nuff powder in dis hull worl' to whiten yore compleeshen, Juylet Cannon," she exclaimed, as the puff fell from her weary hand.

With trembling fingers, she fastened the soft pink surah gown, with its changing colors, its flower-draped skirts, and lace-trimmed bodice, about the figure Miss Mercedes had told her was very slender and graceful. Long and lovingly she contemplated the beautiful hat, with its drooping feathers, its delicate roses, and smart ribbon bows; the most bewitching piece in the whole costume, to Juliet's wild fancy. Its broad soft brim touched one shoulder, concealing the curling hair which she had knotted carefully under the pointed crown; but alas! too much remained to be seen where an artistic curve swept under one of the bending plumes. For an instant, the child surveyed herself in dismay; then, clasping her hands exultantly, she darted into Mrs. Connon's room, drew from a small jewel-box a key, with which she opened one of the dressing-case drawers.

"Oh! I dun'no what she'll say; reckon she'll scold awful, Juylet. Mrs. Cannon nebber 'lows eben Miss Mercedes to wear dis lubly white lace scarf; it d'scended to her, mammy says, and a thousand dollars wouldn't buy it, I suppose. But I'se got to hide dat ole ha'r and skin o' mine, or I can't go to de pahty," murmured the child, with a sob in her voice.

The skillful fingers of the last of a generation of turbaned heads wound the lace in graceful folds over the tell-tale hair and throat. Here and there, Juliet placed a gleaming jeweled pin, or one of the star-shaped diamond ornaments she had stolen from the carefully concealed cabinet, which only Mrs. Cannon herself had ever opened or closed.

From a box of masks that Mercedes had tossed into the corner of the room, Juliet selected one of the pale flesh-tints with a fall of lace, which she carefully adjusted under her hat and over the small black features, to their utter effacement. The long suede gloves required time and patience—jerking and pulling, Juliet knew quite well, would be disastrous; and, to calm her excited mind, she whispered softly: "Be very careful, Lizzie; smooth dis thumb a bit," as Miss Mercedes often did.

"I wonder if Mrs. Canon done forgot my fan! Hain't seen nuffiin' of it, shore."

Down upon her knees the child fell before the long box, where, under a mass of crumpled papers, she found a delicate gauze fan, covered with marvelous butterflies and tied with broad ribbon loops and bows, which she fastened at her side. There was time for only a hurried glance at the beautiful picture the swinging mirror revealed to the girl's admiring eyes; then, with a grateful "Bless yo' stars, Julyet, yo'se a white lady for once in yore life," she threw a dark silk wrap around her and ran lightly down the stairs.

"Patrick Henry, doan't turn into de drive; yo' done got to turn right roun' an' go back to de pahty. Miss Mercedes hab gone and left her fan, de mostest needful t'ing she'll need dis hot night. Lizzie tole me: 'Julyet, git right inter de kerridge when it comes back, and carry dat fan to yo' mistress.' "

"Howld yer tongue, yer small black imp! And, be jabers! I'll not turn about for yer or yer misthress this night, in the hate," retorted the coachman, reaching out with his whip and giving Juliet a light touch about the ankles.

"I reckon you'd like to know whar mammy keeps the small beer dat's jess beginning to pop'le corks, Master Patrick Henry O'Connor," suggested the girl, as she grasped the carriage door and swung herself in upon the cushions.

"Yez a burd, Julyet, and burds carry the news, I've been towld; make yersel' aisy now, me dear, while Pat takes ye to the party."

Juliet's heart throbbed painfully, and the lights danced before her half-covered eyes like a shower of falling stars, as she followed two or three young ladies who arrived just before her on the broad staircase and into dressing-room where a maid relieved her of her cloak, smoothed her rumpled laces, and whispered to her companion: "What a lovely costume! I wonder what she represents?"

Poor foolish Juliet! what was she to do? There was no kind chaperon to present her to the hostess, no friend to suggest a name; and the young ladies were already leaving the room, quite unmindful of the trembling bud in her stolen splendor. With a courage born of desperation, the girl followed slowly and discovered her opportunity as she descended the stairs. At one side of the hall, a door opened into a small reception room, and through this room Juliet could see the soft cool tints of the conservatory into which it led. In this delightful retreat, concealed by two large palms, and yet able herself to watch the dances and admire the dresses, the delicately shaded lights, and the ever shifting and whirling crowd that bewildered while it charmed her, Juliet forgot herself and reveled with an unaccusing conscience in the bliss of an ecstatic dream.

She was aroused to self-consciousness by a light touch upon her arm, and turning with a nervous shudder, beheld just behind her a magnificent Romeo in velvet and jewels, whose quiet gentle voice she recognized at once as that of Mr. Robert Lee.

"Why sit alone, sweet shepherdess?" he asked, surveying the little figure critically, but admiringly. "If not already promised, may I have the pleasure of the next waltz? My Juliet has proved unkind, and forbids me the honor of the last dance before we doff our masks."

Too terrified to speak, and overcome with joy at the thought of taking part in the mazy whirl, she suffered the young man to place her hand upon his arm and lead her into the midst of the enchanting scene.

Miss Mercedes had found the child an apt pupil, and the slender feet that had learned to imitate her mistress's graceful and intricate steps now glided over the polished floor with a bewitching lightness that was all their own.

For a few brief moments, Juliet was no more the despised little colored girl, the plaything or the culprit, petted or punished, as full of smiles and tears as an April day of sunshine and showers; but one of the fair, pale, envied beauties upon whom a strange providence had bestowed all that was denied her, mammy's wayward, willful idol.

It was over, all too soon, and the last notes of the orchestra fell faint and sweet on Juliet's ear as young Robert Lee bowed courteously over her gloved hand, saying: "Many thanks, Miss Dresden China; shall I take you to your friends?"

The girl peeped shyly through her satin mask; she was not quite sure she liked the tone of the laughing Romeo's voice, or the long and doubtful look that Miss Mercedes, who was close beside them, bestowed upon the pink gown and butterfly fan.

Once more the lights danced before her eyes; her quivering limbs threatened to refuse their support, and almost unconsciously she laid her hand softly on Mercedes' shoulder.

"Your pretty partner is faint, I fear, Mr. Lee; perhaps it would be best to raise her mask a trifle and give her more air," suggested Miss Cannon, as she put her arm around the girl and waved her fan over the covered face. The young man bent quickly, and, with a murmured "allow me," he lifted the bit of lace-trimmed satin, and Juliet's grotesque face fell over upon his arm. Miss Mercedes' low cry of dismay, and Mr. Lee's astonished exclamation as he stooped to recover the fallen hat and clinging mask, restored the girl to an overwhelming realization of her despicable condition. With wild staring eyes, she glanced here and there for some means of escape, and not in vain. The little group had paused at the entrance to the conservatory, and, by the way that had led to her triumph and her humiliation, she fled with the speed of a bird into the silence and darkness of the night.

On and on, through the quiet streets of the country town, the girl ran; her breath came only in short painful gas

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 11, 1893.

PALMER NEWS.

Why Not Take an Outing?

In these days of hot weather a day of rest and recreation at some desirable point will do much toward refreshing the system and making life pleasanter. There are many places where this result can be accomplished, and the railroads are just now offering special inducements to those who desire a day's, a week's or a month's outing, and one can travel very cheaply.

Next Friday the Boston and Albany road will run the last of its cheap excursions from this place to Boston and Nantasket Beach. If preferred, instead of a sail down the harbor the excursionist may attend the ball game between the Bostons and Pittsburgs. The special train will leave North Wilbraham at 6.53 a. m., Palmer at 7.05, West Brimfield at 7.16, West Warren at 7.25 and Warren at 7.31. Returning the special train leaves Boston at 7.20 p. m. The fare for the round trip, including the sail down the harbor or admission to the ball game, is only $1.45.

A week from to-morrow, Saturday, August 19th, the Willimantic Christian Endeavor Union will have an excursion to Watch Hill, and has invited the Eastern Hampden Union to join. A special train will leave Palmer at 7 a. m., and to avoid crowding on the boat it has been arranged that no other excursion shall be on the boat that day. The party will arrive at Watch Hill at 10.55, and leave at 3.30 p. m., giving four hours and a half at that resort. The return train will reach Palmer at 7.55 p. m., and the fare for the round trip is at the low figure of $1.25.

On Wednesday, Aug. 23d, opportunity will be given for a two-days' trip to Saratoga over the New London Northern road, the fare for the round trip being only $2. A special train will leave Palmer at 9.40 a. m., going by way of Miller's Falls and through the Hoosac tunnel, and reaching Saratoga at 3 p. m. The return start is to be made at 3 o'clock the next afternoon, giving 24 hours at this popular resort.

If you want to take a trip to Block Island the fare one way will cost you $2.61; you can go down and back the same day for $2.90; it costs $3 to go down Saturday morning and return Monday night, or for $3.75 you can purchase a ticket good for a round trip any time before the steamer stops running.

Another Burglary.

The house occupied by E. G. Buss and Samuel S. Nichols, near the state primary school, was entered by burglars about 6.30 Monday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Buss lost a ladies' gold watch and about $10 in money, and from Mr. Nichols a pair of pants, a pair of shoes and $4 were taken. Mr. Nichols is the head farmer at the school and Mr. Buss also works there. Both families take their meals at the institution, and the job was done while they were thus absent. Mrs. Buss returned to the house after breakfast, and finding things in a state of confusion gave an alarm which resulted in one of the thieves being captured by George Woods and Mr. Davis. When surrounded he drew a knife on his pursuers, but a blow on the head with a club prevented him from doing any damage. He gave his name as Isaac Newhall, aged 20, and said he was formerly an inmate of the institution. He was brought over to Palmer by Deputy Sheriff Northrop and lodged in the ecoler until Tuesday morning, when he pleaded guilty before the district court and was bound over to the September term of the superior court in $1000 bonds. The story he gives of the affair is that he and his companion, whose name is George Lee, came from Nashua, N. H., about a week ago and since have lived in a cave in the woods, subsisting on such food as they could steal from the institution and the various farm houses. From his story of Lee it would appear that he is an old offender, as he has served time in Trenton, N. J., and Sing Sing, N. Y. Lee's specialty seems to be house-breaking. He was discharged from Sing Sing July 3d, after having served a term of two years and four months. He was dressed in the suit furnished by the prison authorities on his release from custody, is thick set, has dark moustache, is about 5 feet 9 inches high. As none of the plunder was found on Newhall it is supposed that his partner, who escaped, had it in his possession.

The Bicycle Tournament.

The prizes have been arranged for the races at the bicycle meet on the Palmer driving park Labor Day. The first five races are one mile each, for riders from Monson, Palmer, Ware, Warren and Ludlow, there being a separate event for the riders from each town. The first prizes are gold medals and the seconds silver medals, each bearing the name of the town from which the riders come. The sixth event will be a ladies' race, prize, a handsome toilet case. The seventh is a half-mile race for boys under 17 years of age, the first prize being a silver medal. Then comes the ten-mile race for the championship of Monson, Palmer, Ware, Warren and Ludlow, and open only to riders from those towns. The last race is between the winners of the first five events for the championship banner. This banner is made of white silk, is lettered with gold and trimmed with gold fringe, and has a nickel standard for attaching to handle bars of bicycles. The medals and banner are now on exhibition in the window of F. D. Barton's jewelry store. The races will be run under the L. A. W. racing rules of 1893. Master Allen Atkins will give exhibitions of fancy and trick riding.

One more payment of $3 is to be made on each entry September 1st.

Sunday's Storm.

The weather department was quite liberal with its showers and exhibitions of celestial fireworks Sunday afternoon. Toward the middle of the afternoon mutterings were heard in the northwest, and about four o'clock the storm was in its full glory. The earth received alternate donations of rain and hail as from a liberal hand. At times the hail stones formed a coating nearly covering the ground. During the shower the artillery department was putting in its time to good advantage. The barn on the farm of Patrick Kinnevan, who lives on the road above the carpet mill, was struck, a cow and several hens being killed. Fortunately the barn was not set on fire, as it contained a quantity of hay. Several trees on Dr. Stowe's hill were struck, also some in other parts of the town. The hail storm was even more severe farther east than it was here. In Brookfield hail stones measuring four inches in circumference were found. After the storm two beautiful rainbows were visible for quite a while in the east.

The New Home of the Masons.

Thomas Lodge of Masons expects to be quartered in its own building before cold weather comes. The plans for its quarters, which were drawn by E. P. Ball of Palmer, have been accepted, and the contract for the work given to James Morgan of Wilbraham, who will commence as soon as the timber, which has been ordered, arrives. The quarters will be in the second story which is to be built on Hitchcock's block on Central street, recently purchased by the order. The entrance will be at the corner of the building nearest Main street, and the second floor will be reached by a flight of 18 easy steps, the rise being 8 inches and the tread 11. At the head of the stairs is a hall 12 by 22 feet, at the farther end of which is the reception room, 13 by 23 feet. A kitchen 11½ by 12½ feet is located at the front of the building over the entrance, with closets for dishes, etc. The banquet room, which is 20 by 30 feet, occupies the rest of the front. Between this and the lodge room there is an ante room 6 by 15 feet, a preparation room 6 by 10, and a closet. The lodge room occupies the northeast corner of the building, and is 30 by 40 feet. All the rooms are 14 feet high. Large double doors connect the lodge and banquet room, also the hall and banquet room and the hall and reception room. There are ample toilet and closet rooms. The lodge room is to be finished in cypress, the rest of the rooms in North Carolina pine. The side of the building next Thompson's market is to be covered with steel clapboards, and the windows are to have tinned shutters. The roof will also be of tin.

The Boston and Albany Road's Financial Condition.

The annual report of the directors of the Boston and Albany road has been issued, and shows the largest gross receipts for any year in the history of the road, the amount being $10,169,875.05; the outlay, amounting to $7,750,089.21, has been greater than any previous year. A large part of this has been expended in permanent improvements. The balance to the credit of profit and loss was $28,885.84, making a total credit of $151,-114.97. The road has bought or built and put into use thirteen locomotives, two passenger, two combination, one postal and 551 freight cars. Five stone stations have been erected or are in process of construction; engine houses and other buildings, and side tracks have been built at a cost of $190,404; 10,000 tons of 95-pound rails have been purchased, and will be laid this season. Four tracks are now laid from Springfield to Athol Junction, and from South Framingham to Riverside. Twelve grade crossings have been removed and seven are being taken out; five private crossings have been abolished; all at a cost of $284,481. Seventy-five per cent of the freight cars now have the automatic coupler and one-third the air brake. All the cost of changes and improvements has been charged to operating expenses. The number of stockholders June 10, 1893, was 8220. The improvement and Ware River funds have received during the year $115,009.49 dividends, interest and premiums from the securities held by the trustees, and they now stand charged with $1,908,842.

Boston and Albany Train Changes.

Commencing next Sunday drawing room cars will be run only on the following trains on the Boston and Albany road: Boston and Albany drawing room car on the train for the west stopping here at 10.59 a. m., and returning on the train stopping at 9.13 p. m., Sundays excepted; Boston and Chicago sleeper daily via the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern road on the train leaving Springfield for the west at 1.12 p. m., returning on the train arriving in Springfield at 12.44 p. m., which will stop here at 1.24 after next Sunday; Boston and Chicago sleeper daily via Michigan Central road on the train which leaves Springfield for the west at 4.44 p. m., returning on the train which arrives in Springfield at 1.55 p. m.; Boston and Cincinnati sleeper daily via the "Big Four" road on the train which stops here at 5.28 for the west, returning on the train which stops here at 6.08 p. m.; Boston and Chicago sleepers via either the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern or the Michigan Central road, on the train leaving Springfield at 10.15 p. m., returning on the train arriving in Springfield at 4.55 a. m. The train which leaves Boston at 4.20 p. m. and passes through here at 6.44 without stopping, will be discontinued; the train which has stopped here going east at 1.50 p. m. will also be laid off, and its stops will be made by the train which will leave Springfield at 1.19 and will reach Palmer at 1.46; the train going east which stops here at 9.13 p. m. will not run Sundays.

Our School Teachers.

At the last meeting of the school committee the following appointments of teachers were made for the coming year: High school, principal, H. B. Knox, assistants, Miss C. A. Marsh and Miss Anna Fisherdick. Grammar—Palmer, Mrs. Eva E. Cady; Thorndike, Harold M. Dean; Bondsville, H. E. Fuller; Three Rivers to be supplied. First intermediate—Palmer, Miss Abbie J. Wallis; Thorndike, Miss Marion R. Paine; Bondsville, Miss Nellie O'Brien; Three Rivers, Miss Addie L. Walker. Second intermediate—Palmer, Miss Helen Robinson; Thorndike, Miss Mary McFarlane; Bondsville, Miss Catherine A. Burns; Three Rivers to be supplied. First primary—Palmer, Mrs. Ellen E. Leach; Thorndike, Miss Lucy A. Talmadge and Miss S. Beulah Thayer; Three Rivers, Miss Cora B. Clark and Miss Catherine M. Twiss; Bondsville, Miss Maggie T. Shea. Second primary—Palmer, Miss Lizzie F. Brown; Thorndike, Miss Mary E. Murdock; Three Rivers, Miss Crane; Bondsville, Miss Harriet G. Martin. Ungraded—Wire Mill, Mrs. Minnie B. Lawson; Palmer Center, Miss Annie O'Connor; Blanchardville, Miss Bridget Dowd; Whiting, Miss S. Amy Graves; Shorley, Miss Effie W. Moffatt; Mason to be supplied. The schools will commence Sept. 5th.

The frame is up for E. H. Truesdell's new house on West Main street.

J. H. Kemerson has been confined to the house with rheumatism the greater part of the week.

Three bicyclists passed through town Tuesday afternoon on their way from New York to Boston.

J. H. Woodrich is having his house on Thorndike street connected with the mains of the Palmer Water Co.

The train due here from Boston at 10.59 was delayed about half an hour yesterday morning by a hot box on the baggage car.

Clarence Alexander has given up his position with Charles F. Grosvenor, and returned to his old place in Marcy's livery stable.

The New London Northern road is offering tickets to the camp meeting at Willimantic for $1.50 for the round trip. They are good until the 19th.

Next Tuesday is the day set apart for the Feast of the Assumption, and masses will be celebrated at St. Thomas' church at 5.30 and 8 o'clock in the morning.

J. H. Shaw and W. J. Smith report great luck on a fishing trip they made to Wilbraham last Saturday. They brought in over a hundred fish, pickerel, bullheads, etc.

W. A. Weld has bought W. R. Milligan's stock of boots and shoes. Account of stock will be taken next Monday, and Mr. Weld will take possession immediately thereafter.

W. W. Converse has received $100 from the Odd Fellows Accident Association of Westfield on account of his recent accident in Worcester, whereby he sprained his knee.

At the Baptist church Sabbath morning the pastor will preach. Subject, "Am I My Brother's Keeper." Evening service at 7. Subject, "The Wise Choice of Moses."

There was a pleasant gathering of about fifty people at Charles Merritt's, near Fosket's Mills, Wednesday evening. Dancing, games and a general good time served to pass away the evening.

Wednesday and Thursday were the banner days for heat this season, the mercury standing about 100° in the shade. The heat was so intense that many workmen out of doors gave up and left their jobs.

The house on Fox avenue which was occupied by Charles Saunders during his stay in town is to be sold at auction of the 22d, and affords an opportunity for some one to get a desirable residence at a low figure.

All singers in the village are requested to meet in the parlor of the Converse House next Tuesday evening at 7.30, to consider the matter of presenting the opera "Wanita," mentioned in last week's issue of this paper.

An excursion train, with sixteen car loads of people from Springfield bound for Boston and Nantasket Beach, passed through Palmer yesterday morning. To-day an excursion was run from the stations between Indian Orchard and Brookfield. From this station 139 tickets were sold.

Rev. Dr. W. W. Belden of Vermont, a former resident here, called at the JOURNAL office Saturday afternoon on his way to Monson to supply the pupit of the Congregational church there. Dr. Belden had not been in Palmer for many years, and found that there were few of his former acquaintances now living here.

Rev. C. T. Foster, who was for some years superintendent at the state primary school, but left here about 20 years ago, was in town to-day for a few hours, looking in upon old friends. He is on his return from a vacation trip in Maine to his home at Chester, Pa., where he has been superintendent of schools for the past 16 years.

The tax collector, W. A. Weld, has commenced collecting the taxes, on which a discount of 6 per cent is allowed if they are paid before September 1st. To all taxes which remain unpaid after August 31st interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum will be added. The office of the collector is at his residence on Park street.

Francis Barton, son of F. D. Barton, seriously injured his right arm, Tuesday. He was trying to get down from a limb of a tree on to a post, which is used to support one end of a hammock, when he fell and a hook on the post caught in the fleshy part of his arm above the elbow, holding him suspended in the air. His arm was dressed by Dr. Wilkins.

The Sunday morning subject at the Congregational church will be "Where Deeds are Registered and Treasures are Stored." In the evening the pastor will give the first of three special addresses on the following subjects: "Strong Muscles," "Good Investments," "Poor Wages." Everyone is invited, but a special invitation is given to the men of Palmer.

Recent visitors from Palmer to the World's Fair report that they readily found the copies of the JOURNAL, which is sent to the Massachusetts building each week, and that it gave them a history of happenings at home which they were glad to get. The paper reaches its destination on Monday, thus giving people from this vicinity the news before it grows stale.

The Grand Army post and the Woman's Relief Corps have received and accepted an invitation from the Springfield post and corps to attend a union picnic at Laurel Park, Northampton, next Wednesday. All members of the corps who intend going are requested to leave their names with Mrs. A. J. Lawton, and members of the post their names with H. H. Paine.

An effort is to be made by the directors of the Hampden Park Association of Springfield to secure Budd Doble to give an exhibition of the speed of his famous mare, "Nancy Hanks," at the races of the association on August 24th. They have made him a liberal offer, and as "Nancy Hanks" is announced to trot at Mystic Park the 26th, are hoping she can appear at Springfield.

A suit was entered in the court at Springfield Monday by Felix Masson, Jr., of Three Rivers against the Otis Company, which operates the Palmer Mill, for $6000 damages, the cause not stated. George F. Hewitt & Co. of Worcester also entered a suit against Samuel F. Ferry of Palmer to recover $137, the amount of a bill of liquors and cigars furnished Ferry in 1889.

The hot and dry weather of the past few weeks has not proved all that could be desired for the crops, and many fields are suffering badly for the want of moisture. Many gardens have dried up entirely, and in others one or two kinds of vegetables have been kept alive by watering. Among the farmers the potato crop is the one which is suffering the most; the tubers are drying up badly, and in many fields will not pay for the digging.

The directors of the Agricultural society were disappointed in their efforts to secure the attendance of the Amherst Agricultural College batallion, but have arranged for other attractions, among which will be a balloon ascension one day, and a thrilling performance on a high wire the other. A band of music will probably be in attendance both afternoons. Among the attractions in the hall it is hoped to have an exhibit of goods by the merchants of the place.

The public library has been presented this week, by Representative H. E. W. Clark, with a copy of "A Legislative Souvenir" of the Legislature of 1892, by A. M. Bridgman. The book contains fine half-tone portraits of the state officers, Massachusetts members in Congress, and every member of the state legislature, the members of each committee being grouped on a page. The personality of the men is given, their biography, and a facsimile of the autograph of each, a concise and attractive work of 136 pages.

L. L. Merrick Post of the Grand Army has received an invitation to attend the annual encampment at Indianapolis, Sept. 4 to 9, with E. K. Wilcox Post of Springfield. Arrangements have been made whereby all members who wish can secure tickets, which are good going by way of Washington and the B. and O. R. R., and also include a trip to Chicago after the encampment, for only $18; tickets are good for thirty days. Accommodations will be furnished comrades at Camp Lincoln in Chicago for $2.50 a week or 50 cents a day.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening Miss Grace Huntley read an essay on the milkweeds, and Rev. S. T. Frost gave an interesting talk on the "Botanical Gardens of Dublin." The gardens are situated about three miles from the city, and contain about 50 acres of ground, being about the size of Boston Common. In them all kinds of plants and flowers that are to be found are raised. The money for the maintenance of this enterprise is supplied by the British government. At the next meeting George W. Cross will read an essay on the parsley family.

Everything at present promises for a good crop of fruit this season, and at reasonable prices. A few Delaware and New Jersey peaches have already come into the market, and it is a rare thing to have this early fruit shipped so far this way. A peach car is now running from New Jersey to Springfield, and about next week will probably bring us a good supply of peaches. Those now in the market can be purchased for ten cents a quart. The dry weather may affect the native crop to some extent. Watermelons are now being brought from New Jersey and are selling for 25 and 35 cents each. They are quite good for the money. New Jersey muskmelons of good quality are in the market for 3 to 10 cents each. California pears are also to be had.

The Young People's Union of the Baptist church had a very interesting meeting on Tuesday evening. Charles B. Frost of Boston was the leader, taking for his subject the evils of intemperance. He gave an interesting account of his missionary labors among the naval prisoners at the Charlestown navy yard, stating the fact that nearly every prisoner is made such by the use of strong drink. Rev. W. J. Tate of Brightwood, the guest of Mr. Frost, gave a good address on the subject of the meeting. Mr. Badlong of Warwick, R. I., who has been a policeman for many years, was present and added much to the interest of the meeting by his remarks in relating his experience in dealing with drunkards and rumsellers. The meeting was largely attended for a midsummer night.

This village was released from the grip of the powers of darkness Tuesday evening for the first time in several months, the electric street lamps being put in operation from the Blanchardville station. There are five lights in the west end of the village which as yet have not been operated from Blanchardville because they are on a separate circuit from those now running. The company expects to have all its street wiring completed and the lights installed in all the villages by a week from next Tuesday. By that time everything will be so it can be run from the Blanchardville station. The new alternating current are lamps have been installed in the union depot. After October 1st it is expected that the dynamos for the incandescent lights will be run all night.

The Palmer base ball club went to Westfield last Friday afternoon and defeated the local team by a score of 10 to 9. The Westfields played a return game here Saturday which was one of the closest of the season. The Palmers scored twice in the first inning and did not make any more until the fifth, when another run was brought in; in this inning the visitors scored four runs through errors on the part of the home team, but were shut out for the rest of the game. The Palmers scored three times in the seventh, giving them the game by the score of 6 to 4. The features of the game were a throw made by Lombard, the catcher, to third base while lying on his back, and a catch made by Rafferty. The Palmers were to play at Westfield to-day, but the latter team thinks it has had enough. Our nine will play at Warren to-morrow morning and at Ware in the afternoon.

State Primary School Notes.

Miss Cederroth is in Boston this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss are expected home to-morrow.

Supt. Wheeler and wife spent the Sabbath in Rutland.

Miss Pearson and Mr. Adams are at Nantasket to-day.

Messrs Pearson and Page entertained at the kindergarten Tuesday evening.

Messrs. Sisk and Wetmore returned Wednesday from their trip to the World's Fair.

Miss Rogers is at her home, attending her mother, who has been quite ill but is now better.

Mrs. G. W. Adams and Miss Martha Adams of Winchendon are visiting at the school.

District Court.

Saturday these actions of tort were entered: Jerry Flynn vs. George W. Ely and trustee; George J. Morse vs. George W. Ely and trustee; C. Hockenberger of Bridgeport, Ct., vs. Amos Holbrook of this place; Clara B. Holbrook vs. George W. Collis; Sherman M. Stebbins of Monson vs. George T. Ballard of Hampden; Joseph Whitcomb of Springfield, et. al. vs. J. H. McCarthy of Monson. A case in action of tort and contract was entered by J. Simmons against the Consolidated Railroad Co. of Vermont. Action was deferred until next Saturday in the case of M. O'Connor against T. D. Potter & Co. of Bondsville. The liquors seized from John Crowley were ordered forfeited. Maxime Poro was charged with being drunk and had his case continued until Aug. 31st. Timothy Danehy of Monson paid $10 for having indulged in a drunk. James Breen, who has been on probation since July 6th, had his probation extended without date.—On Sunday evening William Cummings was found laid out across the sidewalk on one of the streets intoxicated, and told the court Monday morning that he had been robbed of what money he had. He was placed on probation to Aug. 28th. James Callahan for being drunk contributed $10 to the court.—Tuesday John Crowley of Thorndike was fined $50 for selling liquor in Monson; he appealed. Isaac Newhall, for breaking and entering, and drawing a knife on a party who interfered with him, was bound over to the September term of the superior court in the sum of $1000. William Ferguson of Ware, for drunkenness was probated to Aug. 31st. The liquors seized from Louis L. Clark were ordered returned, as he had a right to transport liquors within the limits of the town of Palmer.—Wednesday Michael Dolan was charged with vagrancy and was sent to the state farm at Bridgewater for one year. During the hearing some of Dolan's history was brought to light. He was born in Scotland of Irish parentage and his parents came with him to Marlboro while he was quite young. There he received a good education in the public schools until he was about 18. He then worked in a shoe factory about five years when, owing to the death of both his parents, combined with some trouble in the factory, he took to the road and has been a vagrant for about 10 years. He told the judge he had made up his mind not to travel any more at present, and he hoped to get a sentence of one or two months in the house of correction until the hot weather was over. John Foley of Rockville, Ct., who has been working in Monson, was assessed $5 this morning for being drunk.

There are two or three young men in the community who have amphibious propensities during this hot weather, but think that they will be under the necessity of purchasing bathing suits, as every time they try to refresh themselves with a swim a flotilla of pleasure boats is sure to appear on the placid waters of the Quaboag.

In the Union church next Sunday morning a series of special meetings will be commenced, to continue till the following Sabbath evening. Rev. J. H. Butler intends to conduct the services, and is to be assisted by Mr. Jackson of New Hampshire, an evangelistic singer. It is expected that Rev. Mr. Jenkins of Palmer will address the congregation on Wednesday evening.

During the past few weeks, while the electric light poles were being placed, and now as the wires are being strung, a general murmur of inquiry is heard in regard to the whereabouts of the committee that was appointed some time ago to look after the preservation of shade trees. There can be no doubt that in this matter the committee is of little efficiency when we behold the unnecessary mutilation of beautiful maples and other shade trees.

At St. Ann's church last Sunday the congregation had the pleasure of hearing, during high mass, a Sancta Marie, by Faure, and Laudamus te, by Bagioli. During vespers they were delighted by listening to a Tantum Ergo, and O Salutaris, by Bassini, rendered by Miss Eugenie Lambert of Holyoke. This lady's excellent singing on both occasions will long be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to be present at these services and hear her voice. Rev. W. Alexander of Holyoke presided at the organ.

Two prominent citizens of Holyoke, Rev. William Alexander, curate of the church of Notre Dame, and Charles E. Lambert, brother of the organist of the same church, came to this place Monday and joined a fishing party. When the pond was reached the company divided and occupied two boats, Mr. Alexander and Charles Lambert taking one and starting out immediately in search of the festive pickerel, Lambert doing the rowing and his companion holding the trolling line. The pair fished unsuccessfully for an hour, till one began to perspire and the other to become discouraged. The success of the party in the other boat added to their uneasiness, and when they were about to give up in despair the cause of their hard luck was discovered by their rivals. It seems that before starting on the expedition they stuck small corks on the points of the trolling hooks to prevent them catching in any of their clothing, and these they forgot to remove, and as cork is not the proper bait for pickerel it is not strange that the young men did not realize their anticipations.

Fishing is getting to be the favorite pastime it seems, now-a-days, judging from the numbers who embrace the opportunity while the mills are closed.

The reason the band has been unable to give open air concerts for the past two weeks is because several of the members are away on their vacations and will not return another week or so, and from no other cause as has been reported.

It is a disgrace to the village, the manner in which property is being destroyed by certain persons in the place. The pickets are being pulled off fences, and other damage done, which should be put a stop to. The guilty ones should be brought to an account, and the sooner the better.

Peter Gilbert, of last year's ball club, who is playing 3d base for the Springfield team, is playing great ball and is considered one of the strongest men on the team. "Pete" has many friends here who are pleased to know how well he is progressing, and hope to see him in the national league in 1894.

A petition will be presented the electric light committee by the tax payers of Commercial street asking the committee to replace the light which was planned for

Samuel Simmons, proprietor of the Monson Clothing House, and Miss Ray Trilling were married at the bride's home in New York Sunday evening. After a short wedding tour they returned to Monson, where they will make their home on North Main street.

Not often does Flynt Park have the honor of entertaining, as it did Wednesday, Dea. W. V. Sessions of Wilbraham. Mr. Sessions is in his 93d year, and enjoys the best of health. Robert Sessions, his father, participated in the throwing of the tea overboard in Boston harbor in 1773.

About seven o'clock this morning a fire broke out in Reynolds' four-tenement house on the Green, occupied by John Lyons, Luke Shields, Patrick Hanley and Egan Riley. There are several opinions as to the origin of the fire but it is probable that it caught around the chimney in the attic, where bedding was stored. The fire department was on hand promptly and the men worked hard, as did the volunteers. The hose from the mill burst in several places, which rather retarded action, but the building was saved, although the south part was pretty well gutted. All of the families had some insurance on their goods. Mrs. Shields and son are on the Nantasket excursion, so will not learn of their loss until their return to-night.

One of the local apprentices to the barber's trade was heard to complain a few days ago that he did not have the practice at hair cutting he desired, and upon being asked by one of the young men of the place why he did not invite some of the boys in to a free hair cut replied that he would, but did not think he could get them to come; whereupon the party mentioned stealthily began to look for some one who needed a hair-cut, and in a short time returned with no less than nine boys, and left them to patiently wait their turn. The undertaking, however, proved too much for the young apprentice for one afternoon, and he was obliged to put some of them over until the next day. The proprietor, hearing of the proceedings upon his return, was somewhat angry, but it was too late then, the apprentice had had his experience, and now is a barber of no mean ability.

WEST WARREN.

The cornet band gave a concert on the band stand Saturday afternoon.

Joseph Graveline, John Gilman and another were thrown from a carriage Monday morning by the horse stumbling and falling down an embankment about five feet high. The horse and carriage both turned completely over, but by lively jumping the occupants of the carriage escaped injury.

The marriage of Miss Mary Gilbert and George A. Barton took place at the residence of Charles Gilbert Monday morning. Only relatives and a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Putnam Webber. Mr. and Mrs. Barton left on the 10 o'clock train for a short wedding trip, after which they will reside with the bride's parents.

WALES.

The tax collector is ready to take the taxes.

Miss Edith Boyden of Worcester arrived Monday night for a months stay.

Times are hard. A good rain would help some; especially would the farmers rejoice.

Mr. Alders, of the telegraph office, killed a black snake 4 feet 2 inches long near his home Monday.

H. A. McFarland has been confined to the house several days by a return of the severe sprain he received in the back a few weeks ago.

The young people of the Baptist church will hold an entertainment in the vestry this evening. Refreshments will be served at the close.

The Excelsior mill has continued thus far running with a reduction in help. The managers hope to be able to keep the family help at work.

Several of the boys are nibbling at stocks. Look out, boys, and remember the bears we read of in the good book. They were hard on boys—there are some in New York.

Mrs. Johnson, with Miss Jane Wight, are preparing to shut up their home here and return to Whitestown, N. Y., where they have lived in former years. They are sisters of the late Mrs. Warren Shaw, with whom they have been staying during her illness.

Mail Driver Pease comes out with a new two-seated covered carriage to accommodate passengers. He connects with the Southbridge stage at Brimfield at 9 a. m., and about 4 p. m. with the afternoon mail team from Palmer to Fiskdale, also with the mail from Brimfield to Palmer about 2 p. m. This, with the morning and evening stage run by Mr. Dimmick, gives people a chance to go and come quite often during the day. Mr. Dimmick leaves here at 6 a. m. and arrives back about 8 p. m., leaving Palmer for Wales on the arrival of the 5.28 train from Boston.

WARREN.

A horse belonging to Edward N. Button fell in the road near the lumber yard of N. R. Moore one night last week, and died soon after.

Rev. Cecil R. Sherman, who spent his younger days in Warren, a son of Rev. David Sherman, was in town last week visiting friends. Mr. Sherman is located at North Brookfield as pastor of the Methodist church.

Mrs. Frank Tomlinson was the victim of a painful accident last week. After cleaning her gloves with naphtha she went to throw the rag used into the stove, carrying the gloves in her hand. The gloves caught fire and one hand was badly blistered, the other being also severely burned.

A Fatal Accident.

Lewis C. Whiting, who had a paint shop on Southbridge street, died about 5 o'clock Sunday morning from the effects of a fall in his shop the night before. He was found about 8:30 Saturday night by J. R. Gauthier, who went to the shop to see him, but could open the door only part way, as the body of Whiting lay against it. O. W. Barnes, P. B. Thayer and Dr. Gay were summoned, but the injuries about the head were so serious that nothing could be done for the patient, who had evidently fallen over the edge of the stairway in the dark and struck on his head. He leaves a widow and three children, who were all away on a visit to Stafford Springs.

Attempted Suicide.

A lad by the name of Ernest Farnum, from the state primary school at Monson went to work for Haschal Underwood on Wednesday of last week, and on Sunday morning did not appear. Search was made for him, and he was finally found in the barn in a dazed condition and vomiting green matter. He said he had fallen from the mow, but a box of Paris green was found in the hay, and some of the contents were scattered on his clothes. Dr. Gay, who was called, said the boy was suffering from arsenical poisoning. He is now better, and will probably recover all right. He is of a rather despondent disposition, and it is possible that he attempted suicide.

The question of who will be the next Republican candidate for governor is brought nearer to an answer by the withdrawal from the lists of William Whiting of Holyoke. Mr. Whiting announced some time ago that he would be a candidate if it was so desired, but has come to the conclusion that the man who gets the nomination must "hustle" for it, and declines to seek it in that way. He says that: "When I announced that I should be glad to become a candidate for governor this year I did not anticipate that there would be so many persons who would seek the nomination, and as it seems to be thought necessary for whoever succeeds to make a systematic effort to obtain the nomination, I do not care to be considered a candidate." This is in marked contrast to the spirit evinced by other would-be candidates, either directly or through their friends, and will redound to Mr. Whiting's credit in the future. The "hustlers" for office are not looked upon with favor by many Republicans, and it is possible that the outcome of three years ago may be duplicated if the scramble becomes too great. Mr. Whiting's withdrawal leaves Attorney General Pillsbury as the most prominent candidate at the present time, with a possibility of Lieut.-Gov. Wolcott or Mr. Greenhalge of Lowell.

Two steamers with cholera on board have arrived at New York during the past week. Several patients were taken from them and sent to the hospital for such cases, and one has since died, the body peing incinerated. There is little cause for apprehension, however, as the officers at New York seem to doing their work thoroughly. The coming of vessels from foreign countries with sickness on board is not a matter to be lightly regarded, however, and all such should be carefully looked after.

---

Congress assembled in extra session on Monday, and Speaker Crisp was reelected. The president sent a brief message to the body in which he reviewed the financial disturbances of the time and advised the prompt repeal of the compulsory purchase clause of the Sherman law as the remedy. The revision of the tariff was not to be lost sight of, but the other matter was of first and greatest importance under the present state of affairs.

---

Lake George was the scene of a sad calamity Thursday night of last week, when a steam yacht, run by an inexperienced pilot, struck an old wharf and sunk with 29 summer guests on board. The boat went down in a few seconds and nine lives were lost, the night being very dark.

---

Prof. Benjamin K. Emerson of Amherst College was seriously injured in a railroad accident at Lindsey, O., last Saturday night, and it was at first feared that he could not recover, but he is somewhat better now, and it is thought that he may be restored to health again.

A person is prematurely old when baldness occurs before the forty-fifth year. Use Hall's Hair Renewer to keep the scalp healthy and prevent baldness.

Dr. Lockhart of Boston says he uses Ayer's Hygienic Coffee in his own family and recommends it to all as a healthful drink. Robinson & Taylor sell it.

---

As a hair dressing and for the prevention of baldness, Ayer's Hair Vigor has no equal in merit and efficiency. It eradicates dandruff, keeps the scalp moist, clean and healthy, and gives vitality and color to weak, faded, and gray hair. The most popular of toilet articles.

---

Like a ship without a rudder is a man or woman without health and the necessary strength to perform the ordinary duties of life. When the appetite fails, when debility and a disordered condition of the stomach, liver, kindey and bowels assail you, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

My Wife Said

to me last night: "How much do you suppose we have paid out for doctors and medicine in the last year?" I told her I did not know. To doctors I have paid nothing, and five dollars' worth of Sulpher Bitters has kept health in our family.

Found Dead.

Last evening a person giving the name of G. R. Thompson registered at Hunt's Hotel, and desired to be called in season to take the 12 p. m. train for Chicago. Being unable to awaken him, the room was entered by means of the ventilator over the door, when the gentleman was found to be dead. He was advertising agent for Sulphur Bitters, which has an extensive sale. The coroner returned a verdict of death from heart disease. His body will be sent east immediately.—Cin. Commercial.

For Over Fifty Years

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

"HEALTH AND BEAUTY."

This is the title of a department in Fashions, conducted by Eleanor Rogers, M. D., a physician of many years practice and unusual success. It is devoted exclusively to the answering of enquireis in regard to every kind of hygiene—public, home and personal—as well as to the means and methods of improving the personal appearance by diet, exercise, and the legitimate use of cosmetics and all toilet appliances. It will also prescribe the use of medicines whenever expedient without a closer knowledge of the patient.

"GOOD FORM."

This department of Fashions is under the special care of one of the best known and most tasteful society women in this country, Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood, who makes it her special pleasure to answer such questions as pertain to social customs, etiquette, and the conduct of well-bred society.

"THE CORNER COUNSELLOR."

In this department of Fashions Octave Thanet, one of the wisest, wittiest and best-loved writers in this country, chats familiarly with women on all sorts of topics, grave and gay, and suggestive of home and social interest.

Fashions is a high-class magazine of fashion and literature. Its illustrations are artistic and graceful pictures, the work of the best engravers. Some of the best writers of the day are among the contributors to its literary pages.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.—Hampden ss. Probate Court.—To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Luther B. Peck, late of Monson, in said county, deceased. Greeting:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court, for probate, by Lucinda Peck of said Monson, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, and that she may be exempt from giving a surety on her official bond as such executor.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the first Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Palmer Journal, published at Palmer, the last publication to be two days at least before said court, and to mail a copy of such notice to each of said next of kin, fourteen days, at least, before said court.

Witness, William S. Shurtleff, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-sixth day of July, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three.

The hailstorm Sunday was very severe in some sections of the town. About 25 panes of glass were broken at Mr. Martin's shop and house, 74 panes at William Pease's hothouse, and smaller numbers at various other places.

Moses Gage and Mrs. John Hibbard, former residents of Monson, and Rev. and Mrs. John Hibbard of Southbridge have been visiting A. A. and C. M. Gage this week. Rev. and Mrs. Hibbard sail in October for India as missionaries.

The temperance people of Monson will be glad to know that Thomas Crowley, driver of the saloon on wheels which made its daily visits to the town a few weeks ago, lost his case at Palmer, and the liquors have been forfeited to the commonwealth.

Samuel Simmons, proprietor of the Monson Clothing House, and Miss Ray Trilling were married at the bride's home in New York Sunday evening. After a short wedding tour they returned to Monson, where they will make their home on North Main street.

Not often does Flynt Park have the honor of entertaining, as it did Wednesday, Dea. W. V. Sessions of Wilbraham. Mr. Sessions is in his 93d year, and enjoys the best of health. Robert Sessions, his father, participated in the throwing of the tea overboard in Boston harbor in 1773.

About seven o'clock this morning a fire broke out in Reynolds' four-tenement house on the Green, occupied by John Lyons, Luke Shields, Patrick Hanley and Egan Riley. There are several opinions as to the origin of the fire but it is probable that it caught around the chimney in the attic, where bedding was stored. The fire department was on hand promptly and the men worked hard, as did the volunteers. The hose from the mill burst in several places, which rather retarded action, but the building was saved, although the south part was pretty well gutted. All of the families had some insurance on their goods. Mrs. Shields and son are on the Nantasket excursion, so will not learn of their loss until their return to-night.

One of the local apprentices to the barber's trade was heard to complain a few days ago that he did not have the practice at hair cutting he desired, and upon being asked by one of the young men of the place why he did not invite some of the boys in to a free hair cut replied that he would, but did not think he could get them to come; whereupon the party mentioned stealthily began to look for some one who needed a hair-cut, and in a short time returned with no less than nine boys, and left them to patiently wait their turn. The undertaking, however, proved too much for the young apprentice for one afternoon, and he was obliged to put some of them over until the next day. The proprietor, hearing of the proceedings upon his return, was somewhat angry, but it was too late then, the apprentice had had his experience, and now is a barber of no mean ability.

WEST WARREN.

The cornet band gave a concert on the band stand Saturday afternoon.

Joseph Graveline, John Gilman and another were thrown from a carriage Monday morning by the horse stumbling and falling down an embankment about five feet high. The horse and carriage both turned completely over, but by lively jumping the occupants of the carriage escaped injury.

The marriage of Miss Mary Gilbert and George A. Barton took place at the residence of Charles Gilbert Monday morning. Only relatives and a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Putnam Webber. Mr. and Mrs. Barton left on the 10 o'clock train for a short wedding trip, after which they will reside with the bride's parents.

WALES.

The tax collector is ready to take the taxes.

Miss Edith Boyden of Worcester arrived Monday night for a months stay.

Times are hard. A good rain would help some; especially would the farmers rejoice.

Mr. Alders, of the telegraph office, killed a black snake 4 feet 2 inches long near his home Monday.

H. A. McFarland has been confined to the house several days by a return of the severe sprain he received in the back a few weeks ago.

The young people of the Baptist church will hold an entertainment in the vestry this evening. Refreshments will be served at the close.

The Excelsior mill has continued thus far running with a reduction in help. The managers hope to be able to keep the family help at work.

Several of the boys are nibbling at stocks. Look out, boys, and remember the bears we read of in the good book. They were hard on boys—there are some in New York.

Mrs. Johnson, with Miss Jane Wight, are preparing to shut up their home here and return to Whitestown, N. Y., where they have lived in former years. They are sisters of the late Mrs. Warren Shaw, with whom they have been staying during her illness.

Mail Driver Pease comes out with a new two-seated covered carriage to accommodate passengers. He connects with the Southbridge stage at Brimfield at 9 a. m., and about 4 p. m. with the afternoon mail team from Palmer to Fiskdale, also with the mail from Brimfield to Palmer about 2 p. m. This, with the morning and evening stage run by Mr. Dimmick, gives people a chance to go and come quite often during the day. Mr. Dimmick leaves here at 6 a. m. and arrives back about 8 p. m., leaving Palmer for Wales on the arrival of the 5.28 train from Boston.

WARREN.

A horse belonging to Edward N. Button fell in the road near the lumber yard of N. R. Moore one night last week, and died soon after.

Rev. Cecil R. Sherman, who spent his younger days in Warren, a son of Rev. David Sherman, was in town last week visiting friends. Mr. Sherman is located at North Brookfield as pastor of the Methodist church.

Mrs. Frank Tomlinson was the victim of a painful accident last week. After cleaning her gloves with naphtha she went to throw the rag used into the stove, carrying the gloves in her hand. The gloves caught fire and one hand was badly blistered, the other being also severely burned.

A Fatal Accident.

Lewis C. Whiting, who had a paint shop on Southbridge street, died about 5 o'clock Sunday morning from the effects of a fall in his shop the night before. He was found about 8.30 Saturday night by J. R. Gauthier, who went to the shop to see him, but could open the door only part way, as the body of Whiting lay against it. O. W. Barnes, P. B. Thayer and Dr. Gay were summoned, but the injuries about the head were so serious that nothing could be done for the patient, who had evidently fallen over the edge of the stairway in the dark and struck on his head. He leaves a widow and three children, who were all away on a visit to Stafford Springs.

Attempted Suicide.

A lad by the name of Ernest Farnum, from the state primary school at Monson went to work for Haschal Underwood on Wednesday of last week, and on Sunday morning did not appear. Search was made for him, and he was finally found in the barn in a dazed condition and vomiting green matter. He said he had fallen from the mow, but a box of Paris green was found in the hay, and some of the contents were scattered on his clothes. Dr. Gay, who was called, said the boy was suffering from arsenical poisoning. He is now better, and will probably recover all right. He is of a rather despondent disposition, and it is possible that he attempted suicide.

The question of who will be the next Republican candidate for governor is brought nearer to an answer by the withdrawal from the lists of William Whiting of Holyoke. Mr. Whiting announced some time ago that he would be a candidate if it was so desired, but has come to the conclusion that the man who gets the nomination must "hustle" for it, and declines to seek it in that way. He says that: "When I announced that I should be glad to become a candidate for governor this year I did not anticipate that there would be so many persons who would seek the nomination, and as it seems to be thought necessary for whoever succeeds to make a systematic effort to obtain the nomination, I do not care to be considered a candidate." This is in marked contrast to the spirit evinced by other would-be candidates, either directly or through their friends, and will redound to Mr. Whiting's credit in the future. The "hustlers" for office are not looked upon with favor by many Republicans, and it is possible that the outcome of three years ago may be duplicated if the scramble becomes too great. Mr. Whiting's withdrawal leaves Attorney General Pillsbury as the most prominent candidate at the present time, with a possibility of Lieut.-Gov. Wolcott or Mr. Greenhalge of Lowell.

Two steamers with cholera on board have arrived at New York during the past week. Several patients were taken from them and sent to the hospital for such cases, and one has since died, the body peing incinerated. There is little cause for apprehension, however, as the officers at New York seem to doing their work thoroughly. The coming of vessels from foreign countries with sickness on board is not a matter to be lightly regarded, however, and all such should be carefully looked after.

Congress assembled in extra session on Monday, and Speaker Crisp was reelected. The president sent a brief message to the body in which he reviewed the financial disturbances of the time and advised the prompt repeal of the compulsory purchase clause of the Sherman law as the remedy. The revision of the tariff was not to be lost sight of, but the other matter was of first and greatest importance under the present state of affairs.

Lake George was the scene of a sad calamity Thursday night of last week, when a steam yacht, run by an inexperienced pilot, struck an old wharf and sunk with 29 summer guests on board. The boat went down in a few seconds and nine lives were lost, the night being very dark.

Prof. Benjamin K. Emerson of Amherst College was seriously injured in a railroad accident at Lindsey, O., last Saturday night, and it was at first feared that he could not recover, but he is somewhat better now, and it is thought that he may be restored to health again.

As a hair dressing and for the prevention of baldness, Ayer's Hair Vigor has no equal in merit and efficiency. It eradicates dandruff, keeps the scalp moist, clean and healthy, and gives vitality and color to weak, faded, and gray hair. The most popular of toilet articles.

Found Dead.

Last evening a person giving the name of G. R. Thompson registered at Hunt's Hotel, and desired to be called in season to take the 12 p. m. train for Chicago. Being unable to awaken him, the room was entered by means of the ventilator over the door, when the gentleman was found to be dead. He was advertising agent for Sulphur Bitters, which has an extensive sale. The coroner returned a verdict of death from heart disease. His body will be sent east immediately.—Cin. Commercial.

"HEALTH AND BEAUTY."

This is the title of a department in Fashions, conducted by Eleanor Rogers, M. D., a physician of many years practice and unusual success. It is devoted exclusively to the answering of enquireis in regard to every kind of hygiene—public, home and personal—as well as to the means and methods of improving the personal appearance by diet, exercise, and the legitimate use of cosmetics and all toilet appliances. It will also prescribe the use of medicines whenever expedient without a closer knowledge of the patient.

"GOOD FORM."

This department of Fashions is under the special care of one of the best known and most tasteful society women in this country, Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood, who makes it her special pleasure to answer such questions as pertain to social customs, etiquette, and the conduct of well-bred society.

"THE CORNER COUNSELLOR."

In this department of Fashions Octave Thanet, one of the wisest, wittiest and best-loved writers in this country, chats familiarly with women on all sorts of topics, grave and gay, and suggestive of home and social interest.

Fashions is a high-class magazine of fashion and literature. Its illustrations are artistic and graceful pictures, the work of the best engravers. Some of the best writers of the day are among the contributors to its literary pages.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—Hampden ss. Probate Court.—To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Luther B. Peck, late of Monson, in said county, deceased. Greeting:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court, for probate, by Lucinda Peck of said Monson, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, and that she may be exempt from giving a surety on her official bond as such executor.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the first Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Palmer Journal, published at Palmer, the last publication to be two days at least before said court, and to mail a copy of such notice to each of said next of kin, fourteen days, at least, before said court.

Witness, William S. Shurtleff, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-sixth day of July, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three.

Rivals.

In gathering gloom
I see a star,
It is the end
Of a cigar,
My rival in
My lord's big heart.
I'm sure it has
The larger part.
I do not pout—
There is no use,
I do not all
Cigars abuse.
I merely steal
Behind that chair,
He somehow knows
That I am there!
I slip my hand
His shoulder o'er
Somehow his head
Tips back once more;
I smile my best,
In minutes ten
He wants that thing
Lit up again!

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HOW NO. 3003 DREW A GREAT PRIZE IN LOVE'S LOTTERY.

"I hardly think, Ezra, that she would suit thee for a wife."

Friend Mary Minton stood at the kitchen table kneading the bread, a snowy cap surrounding her sweet old face like a sort of working-day halo, a white apron tied around her ample waist. At sixty her color was as fresh as that of a girl, her eyes blue as the blue heavens above.

Ezra, her adopted son—Friend Minton and his wife had been childless—had just brought in a basket of russet apples, the very last in the corner bin of the barn cellar. He leaned against the kitchen window, playing nervously with the big, velvety leaves of the monster fish geranium that blossomed there. He was a tall, manly-looking young fellow, with clear brown eyes, a fresh complexion, and hair that grew in a curly mat all over his head. Friend Mary's glance softened as she looked at him. It was evident that he was the very apple of her eye.

"Why not, mother?" said he, "I know the village gossips don't like the Calverly family; but you're not one of the gossiping kind."

"She's very young, Ezra," meditatively answered Friend Mary, "and very pretty."

"Oh! if you call those crime—"

"Wait a minute, Ezra, thee has not heard me out. I deeply regret that instead of going to live with Friend Warburton, the minister's wife, she has preferred to enter the factory where are so many giddy girls and careless young men."

"But the pay was so much better, mother."

"Man doth not live by bread alone," oracularly answered Friend Mary. "Thee has been carefully brought up, Ezra. Thee must consider what is right and seemly in the way of matrimony. Thy father and I would break our hearts if thee went wrong after all our hopes and prayers."

"I trust that I shall never do that, mother."

"But thee must remember, Ezra, how powerful an influence the wife exerts over the husband."

"Mother, are you very much set against Eveline Calverly."

Friend Mary hesitated for a moment.

"I think it would break my heart, Ezra," she answered, "if thee were to wed with a daughter of Heth, like Eveline."

"Then that settles the question," said Ezra, quickly. "You have done everything for me, mother. I was houseless, homeless, friendless, when you took me in and cared for me, and I would be an ingrate, indeed, to turn against your wishes now. But, mother, let me go away for awhile. Let me go to Uncle Aaron, out in Montana, until—until I get over this."

Friend Mary lifted her tender blue eyes with a pitying light to his face.

"Is it so hard with thee as that, my son," said she. "Oh, I am sorry! I—I could almost find it in my heart—"

"Although," he interrupted, with a forced laugh, "I'm not by any means so certain that Eveline would have me, even if I asked her. Gerard Winthrop is going there a good deal of late."

"Yes," quietly spoke friend Mary, who by this time had patted her white, firm loaves into shape in their shining oblong pans, all ready for the oven, "and that is one thing I do not like. He is interested, they tell me, in a great lottery scheme; he is the agent of a company down south. The factory people have bought tickets, Eveline among the rest."

"Mother, I can hardly believe that."

"The superintendent himself told me, Ezra," said Friend Mary, closing the open door with a gentle click. "He regretted exceedingly that Winthrop had gained such a footing there. Yes, my son, perhaps thee had better go to Brother Aaron for a few months. Thee needs a change."

So Ezra Minton decided to take the step that seemed like wrenching soul and body apart. Friend Mary counted out his socks, saw to the buttons on his shirts, relined the little leather trunk with pretty paper and shed a few tears into the neat box of handkerchiefs as she packed them away.

"If Montana were not such a distance off," she sighed to herself, "or if he could go any other way except by those flying trains! Thank goodness, I never was on one, and, please Heaven, I never will be! To me it seems little short of a tempting of Providence."

She sat sorrowfully in the chimney-corner on the evening of Ezra's departure, paring the russet apples to make a dish of apple sauce. How loudly the kitchen clock ticked! How lonely the great silent room seemed!

"I think I did right," she said to herself, "and yet—"

Hush! There was a knock at the door. The minister's wife, perhaps, or Janet Golbe, the carpet-weaver, who lived under the mountain, come to borrow the dye-kettle.

"Come in, friend, whoever thee may be," said Friend Mary.

And Eveline Calverly entered the room, looking, under her little daisy trimmed bonnet, like a veritable daisy herself.

"Are you alone, Mrs. Minton?" said she, glancing timidly around. "Oh, I want to talk to you so much!"

"I am alone, Eveline," said the widow, her heart involuntarily warming toward the pretty, flower-like young thing Ezra had cared for. "But if thee does not mind, thee may call me 'Friend Mary.' It sounds more suitable to my ears."

"If it isn't too familiar," faltered Eveline. "You see, I wanted to talk to some one on whom I could depend. I—I have got a lottery ticket here," showing the white gleam of a strip of paper in her hand. "They coaxed me to buy it, and I am so sorry now. Please tell me what to do."

"Does thee really want my advise, Eveline?" gently asked the Quakeress.

"Oh, yes—yes!" cried the girl.

"Then I would tear the thing up and cast it into the fire."

Eveline glanced at the ticket, then at Friend Mary, and she tore the ticket in two and flung it on the floor.

"Three thousand and three," said she. "I dreamed one night that it drew a thousand dollars, but it is gone now."

"Thee will feel thy conscience lighter," said Friend Mary, consolingly, as she put her hand on that of the girl. "Art thee sick, Eveline? Thy hand is very cold."

Eveline bursts into a passion of tears.

"Sick!" she gasped. "Yes. No! I don't know. He has gone away, Mrs. Minton. He never came to tell me good-by."

"Does thee mean my son Ezra, child?"

"Whom should I mean?"

"Did thee expect him, Eveline?"

"I didn't know. I thought perhaps—oh, I have been trying so hard to be worthy of him! I have left off going with those girls. I've refused the foreman's invitation to drive with him. I've been reading 'Macaulay's History of England' and Gibbon's Rome' of evenings, and I loved him, Mrs. Minton—oh, I did, indeed—and he never came to tell me good-by. I suppose I ought't to tell you this, but I cannot help it."

Friend Mary moved uneasily in her seat. Her heart warmed toward the impulsive young girl. She began to think that perhaps she had been too precipitate in her decision. Suddenly Eveline started. So did Friend Mary.

"There is some one coming up the steps," said she; "several people. Dry thy eyes, my child!"

It was two of the factory girls, eager and breathless. They could scarcely find time to salute Friend Mary Minton before they addressed Eveline Calverly:

"Evy! Evy! your ticket has won a prize. No. 3003! A hundred dollars! They read out the list to-night. Oh, aren't you a lucky girl, though! We only wish it was us."

Eveline's glance involuntarily sought the floor, where lay the two torn pieces of the ticket. Jane Chertsey made a grasp at them.

"Why, what has happened?" exclaimed she. "But the number is all right. We can paste it together again."

Eveline looked at Friend Mary Minton.

"Give me the pieces, Jane," said she, and in another second they were blazing in the fire. "I will have nothing to do with the lottery, good or bad," she added. "I am sorry I ever bought the ticket."

"But, Evy, you've burnt up one hundred dollars!" screamed Lucy Jane.

"I've burned up a temptation!" cried the girl. "Do you think I would sell my soul for one hundred dollars?"

And once more she burst out crying.

Friend Mary sat late that night by her kitchen fire. She was thinking. Early the next morning she arose and dressed herself and trotted down to the railway station in time for the seven o'clock train.

"I was never on the cars before," she murmured, "and it's just like riding behind a flying dragon; but for Ezra's sake I must risk it. He won't leave Edgefield before night. I must see him first."

Great was Ezra Minton's amazement that afternoon when the quiet Quakeress, in her dove-colored gown and poke bonnet, came into the house of her sister, Friend Rahomah Simmons, where he was stopping while he made sundry preparations for his journey.

"Mother, what has happened?" he cried.

"Nothing has happened, Ezra," said Friend Mary, her cheeks very pink, her blue eyes sparkling. "I have traveled on the railway train. The Lord has been very good to me, and I have not been dashed to destruction, and I think, Ezra, thee had better change thy plans."

"Change my plans, mother?"

"Eveline has been with me, Ezra. She loves thee, I think, and I am far on the way to loving her. There is good metal in the child. Thee must come back home with me, Ezra."

"Do you mean it, mother, that she loves me?"

"Come and put the question to her thyself, Ezra," cooed Friend Mary. "I feel that I have done her some injustice. Thee must set that right. Oh, my boy! my boy! I always felt I should be jealous of thy wife, be she whom she might. But, Ezra, I don't feel so any more."

She stooped and kissed his forehead.

"Thee must make haste, Ezra. The flying dragon goes back at seven. I do not know that Eveline expects thee, but—"

Ezra Minton went back with Friend Mary. And though she had lost her one hundred dollars, poor, lovely, little Eveline had gained a double recompense—a loving husband and a mother-in-law, who helped her in all weak places and fully appreciated her strong points.

"For," softly spoke Friend Mary, "I am always ready to confess when I have been altogether in the wrong."—Toronto Mail.

MYSTERIES!

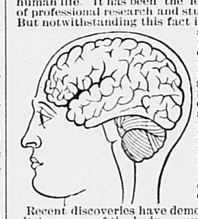
The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.



Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great mistake of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained in the above statement, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle.

DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

Cures Others

Will cure You is a true statement of the action of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, when taken for diseases originating in impure blood; but, while this assertion is true of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, as thousands can attest, it cannot be truthfully applied to other preparations, which unprincipled dealers will recommend and try to impose upon you as "just as good as Ayer's." Take AYER'S Sarsaparilla and AYER'S only, if you need a blood purifier and would be benefited permanently. This medicine, for nearly fifty years, has enjoyed a reputation and made a record for cures that has never been equaled by other preparations. AYER'S Sarsaparilla eradicates the taint of hereditary scrofula and other blood diseases from the system, and it has, deservedly, the confidence of the people.

AYER'S

Sarsaparilla

"I cannot forbear to express my joy at the relief I have obtained from the use of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with kidney troubles for about six months, suffering greatly with pains in the small of my back. In addition to this my body was covered with pimply eruptions. The remedies prescribed failed to help me. I then began to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla, and in a short time the pains ceased and the pimples disappeared. I advise every young man or woman, in case of sickness resulting from impure blood, no matter how long standing the case may be, to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla."—H. L. Jarmann, ::: William street, New York city.

Vacation Questions.

Do you know where the skies are soft and blue
And the robin's song is ringing?
Can you tell how the oriole builds her nest
In the drooping boughs a-swinging?

Have you heard the pewee's mournful note
And the brown wren's music after?
Or the bobolink's piping sweet and clear,
And the bluebird's careless laughter?

Have you seen the larks on a summer day
Rise up from the crimson clover,
And watched the flight of the dusky crows
The hills and cornfields over?

Do you know the haunts of the mocking-bird
And the home of the hermit thrushes?
Have you seen the light of the whip-poor-will Dance over the reeds and rushes?

Can you find the heart of the dim green woods
Where the baby ferns are peeping?
Or gather the berries' purple cones
By the country roadside creeping?

Do you know where the wild rose lifts her face
To the snowy clouds above her,
And the laurel flushes with dainty pink
For the eyes of those who love her?

Do you know the tales that the daisies tell
As they nod and bend together?
Or the songs that the murmuring pine trees sing
In the heat of the summer weather?

Go out to the woods. In Nature's school
There are lessons well worth learning,
And the teacher is loving, and sweet, and true,
And wise with gentle yearning.

A SPECULATION.

Mr. Gallivant had a tip. It came to him under conditions of great secrecy. He was not to say a word about it to his best friend, and above all not a hint, not the faintest, remotest suggestion of a hint, to his broker.

At this time Mr. Gallivant's circumstances were highly satisfactory to himself and his friends. He had bought sugar at 76 and sold it at 128, and he had bought Manhattan at 132 and sold it at 179. He was now building a house at Tuxedo, a schooner yacht at the Herreshoffs'; he had a nicely filled vault at a trust company's and an impressive balance at his broker's.

Mr. Gallivant's career as a man of affairs had afforded him a large experience with tips. He summed it up in this way: "A true tip is just so much gold coin, and no one but a drunken man, a born fool or a woman will give it away; women don't often have it to give, and so when you get a tip you want to study not so much whether it seems probable as the condition of the chap that gave. That's the test of a tip."

It was the test he was now endeavoring to apply to the tip he had received that evening. It was long past midnight, and he was standing in the drawing-room of his apartment with his back turned to the blaze of a hickory fire.

"Funny thing about that Follipot," he said; "funny about my being in such a crowd, anyhow. Now, let's see. Coots came into my office and says: 'Wife's going to have theater party; want you to come along; dine Delmonico's six-thirty.' I says: 'Sorry, dear boy, can't go; previous 'gagement. Didn't have previous 'gagement really, but—don't know that Coots much, don't know's wife 'tall; what'd he want t'ask me for? Well, he says: 'Must go, dear boy, must go; great party; "Lady Windemere's Fan;" wonderful play; Wilde, you know—chap that wore pantalets, Fauntleroy style; smart play; all 'bout bad men and swift girls; spicy.' I says: 'Very kind, love to go, but can't, really; 'spepsia—can't eat; see things—salted pecans, olives, sweetbreads, terrapin—want'em all; get sick.' He says: 'Dinner light—hurry, you know; can't let you off; lovely party; two young ladies—one fair, one dark; have choice.' Now, what'd he want t' insist like that for?"

Mr. Gallivant looked around him, and felt aimlessly in the direction of his vest pockets after a cigar. Presently he found one. With great deliberation he cut away the end of it. He struck a match and puffed away quite earnestly.

"If I let myself think about what Follipot said," he remarked, after a period of reflection. "I'll be hanged if I should believe him. Things sound so natural. Stock's been paying six per cent; no reason why it's been selling so low. They could move it up easily. All they need is to stand stiff and altogether. Now he said there was a meeting here yesterday between the New York and Western people. Well, I happened to meet two of those Western fellows on the street yesterday morning. Then he said that Dick Rasher, the King of the street, was in the deal. Well, I happened to stumble upon Rasher and Bowles, the principal man in the trust, at luncheon in a private room at the Savarin.

"All that hooks together—fits close; but what did he want to go and tell me for? I'd never exchanged a dozen words with Follipot before to-night in m' life. Interrupted my talk with golden haired girl, too, to tell me. Lovely girl—Coots right about that. Girl with views, opinions, and things. Thought play wicked, thought human nature good—didn't know Rasher, I guess. Don't want to get squeezed by a fellow like Rasher; got no bowels, takes fiendish delight in smashing poor devil like me. Follipot is an ass—and that's so much in favor of the story. Well, I'll stop thinking and go to sleep. If there's going to be a movement in whisky to-morrow, I want my head where it will work."

Mr. Gallivant, when he reached his office the next morning, had decided not to buy whisky. Logically there seemed every reason to credit Follipot's tip. Follipot was one of those clever young fellows who serve their highest functions by filling in at afternoon teas, and he was known to be well liked by the Bowleses. It was entirely within the probabilities that he might have obtained information as to the plans of the whisky-trust people, and he was just the sort of man who would enjoy the position of a knowing one in the eyes of a practical gambler like Gallivant. But, somehow or other, Gallivant's instinct was against making use of the tip, and Gallivant was very slow to resist his instinct.

He did not intend to operate heavily that day and gave less attention than usual to the telegraph instrument on his desk. Tickers Gallivant despised. He had begun life as a train despatcher, and he never could overcome his love of the telegraph instrument. The one on his desk was his guide, philosopher and friend. It connected with the exchange and with his broker's office and gave him the information of every transaction in stocks the very second it occurred. No matter how busy he was with other things, its click, click-click, click-click-click was always intelligible. He might be chatting with a friend, reading the morning papers, writing letters, or what not, but the voice of the telegraph instrument was born over all into his consciousness.

Mr. Gallivant gave the morning to his correspondence. He wrote letter after letter paying no heed to the markets. At last he grew tired, dropped his pen, threw himself back in his chair, stretched out his legs upon desk, and began to nod in reposeful slumber. The telegraph instrument ticked away industriously, and Mr. Gallivant offset it with a low, bass snore.

Suddenly he started—opened his eyes, turned his head quickly around from side to side as if to shake his facilities into their proper places.

"What's that!" he exclaimed. "One thousand shares of whisky sold at 57. Gone up two points! Gosh!"

Mr. Gallivant grasped his instrument and began to ask questions. Yes, he had heard correctly. Whisky was strong. Not much trading as yet—hold on, another sale had occurred at 57½! Mr. Gallivant drew a long whistle.

"That fellow Follipot told me the truth," he said, sharply, "and, with what I happened to know myself, I ought to have gone in. I've lost a fortune already by being too slow. Hey! Still higher; 57¾! That settles it.

Mr. Gallivant placed his order at once. "Buy me five thousand shares of whisky as close as you can. Buy quick!"

He could not repress a feeling of anxiety. Somehow it seemed as if the crisis of his business career were upon him. It seemed as if another "down" were coming. He had acted against instinct, and that had always resulted in misfortune. To be sure, five thousand shares were not many and he could close them out the next morning at a profit. But this he knew he would not do. He had started on a course of speculation in whisky, and he must go with his destiny. Mr. Gallivant believed in destiny. He did not believe he possessed the physical power to give his broker the order to sell his whisky the next day. "I'm in this thing to stay," he said, as he started for the Knickerbocker Club; "when I get out I shall be a millionaire or a pauper."

The elaborate dudes at the Knickerbocker Club were surprised to see Mr. Gallivant among them. Still more surprised were they to see him and Follipot get off into a corner and mysteriously confer. Follipot occupied with a business matter was unnatural and disturbing. But Follipot assumed the role of a man of affairs with creditable skill. He knitted his brows, and twirled his thumbs, and nodded his head with all the seriousness suitable to the discussion of grave matters. He told Gallivant all he knew. A syndicate had been formed by heavy men in and out of the trust to run whisky up to eighty-five and to hold it there. Rasher was surely in it. So was Knobbles of Chicago, and Stump of Pittsburg. They were ready to absorb if necessary, three hundred thousand shares. Bowles had told him all about it as a matter of personal friendship, and in order to give him a chance to make something. He mentioned it to Gallivant because he had taken a fancy to Gallivant and felt like doing a friendly thing. They went over the details several times and from several points of view. They had dinner together and Gallivant finally arranged to carry one thousand shares for Follipot, while Follipot was to continue his amiable relations with Bowles. Then Mr. Gallivant went home. "Yes," he said, "it's all right. Follipot is only an ass, that's all—just a nice, decent, pleasant little ass. He is the right material for the conductor of a true tip."

Whisky rose steadily, easily, surely. There was great trading. Mr. Gallivant carried another five thousand shares, then still another, then still another, and at last he had almost his whole fortune in whisky, and was winning or losing $30,000 a point. When his profits had reached a cool half million he had the confidence of a despot. Naturally secretive, he allowed no one but his broker to know of his transactions in whisky. He made few inquiries about the stock or the operations of the pool behind it except of Follipot, and every day vindicated his judgment.

But one morning at a meeting of a board of directors he encountered a heavy operator, who startled him with the question: "Hope you're not doing anything with whisky, Gallivant?"

"Oh, no, nothing at all," Gallivant replied, in the most unconcerned way. "But why do you ask?"

"If you are, you'd better stop and take your profits."

"What makes you think so?"

"The pool is weak."

"How do you know?"

"I can't tell all I know."

"Tell half?"

"Well, there's a little fool named Follipot—know him?"

"Yes."

"He hangs around Bowles."

"So he does."

"Well, when the pool started in to bid up the stock, he went around to a lot of people, telling them all about it."

"The devil he did!"

"Yes, he told me. I came near acting on what he said, too, when I saw the stocks rising, but happened to find out that he had told at least a dozen other fellows."

"No!"

"Sure. Of course Bowles sent him to do it."

"Very kind of Bowles."

"Very. The information was true, too, so far as it went. But you notice there have been queer fluctuations."

"Yes, so there have."

"Well, Bowles and Rasher, Knobbles and Stump, are queer men."

Mr. Gallivant thrust his hands deep into his trousers pockets and meditated. "They're as choice a firm of cut-throats as ever took to the highway," he said.

"Exactly. They haven't even the honor that prevails among thieves."

"You mean," said Gallivant, "that they intend to 'do' one another?"

"I mean that they are at it already."

Mr. Gallivant walked over to the ticker. He looked at the tapes. He returned to his chair and glanced sharply at his friend.

"Well?" said his friend.

"Whisky has fallen three points this morning," replied Gallivant, "and eighty thousand shares have changed hands."

"Somebody is getting from under—see?"

Mr. Gallivant made no answer. He was thinking.

"Nice young man, that Follipot—honest young man. Nice fellow, Bowles, to send you notice of the movements of the pool. How much did they pull you in for?"

"Thirty thousand shares," said Gallivant.

Mr. Gallivant's instinct now began to operative with a force and directness which assured him of its perfect condition. In five minutes he was at his broker's. In another five minutes his block of whisky was on the market and sold at only seven points less than the highest price the stock had ever attained. His profits were all he could have asked or reasonably have hoped for. But they did not satisfy Mr. Gallivant. He had something yet to do—to come out of whisky a millionaire and to pay his respects to Mr. Bowles. If he had made money it wasn't Bowles's fault nor Bowles's intention. He had been drawn into it to be despoiled, and Mr. Gallivant's large and well-developed nature began at once to work. He sprang on a limited train for Washington and spent the night in conversation with some of his country's patriotic servants. They nestled in a little back room at Chamberlin's, and talked of the wickedness of trusts. They were of one mind. They were satisfied that all trusts were an invasion of the people's rights, and an infraction of the laws, and that the whisky trust was the worst of all. The heavy hand of the government should be laid upon it.

Mr. Gallivant returned to New York that same night with a smile on his face and a curl in his mustache which bespoke a serene and cheerful disposition. The next day he sold fifty thousand shares of whisky short. Two hours later a message came over the wires that a joint resolution to investigate the whisky trust had been introduced in the Senate by Senator Bloke, and in the House by Congressman Sharper. The price of whisky certificates fell ten points. It went on falling. The resolutions were sent to a committee and it fell more. They were reported favorably, and it "slumped" again. They passed the Senate and it was down below the point at which the upward movement began.

Mr. Gallivant made another trip to Washington at about this time, and again he met his country's faithful servants at Chamberlin's. He carried with him a check-book, and he explained to them just how to tell a tip when they ran across one.—New York Tribune.

A SOLDIER ON THE SKIRMISH LINE.

We get the word and deploy in front of the regiment—a line of men from 10 to 15 feet apart—and advance across the old field, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. We know where the enemy is—in the green woods on the far side. There is fear that he is massing a brigade there, and that the first scen of him will be a line of battle sweeping across the field. We know where his skirmishers are—behind the fringe of bushes on the other side of the creek, half a mile in our front. Over the fence—across the level—down the slope, and ping! zipp! ping! come the bullets from the hidden skirmishers. Ah! a man down—two or three of them! If dead we can do them no good; if only wounded, they must crawl away to the rear, or lie quivering and groaning in some of the hollows until we are relieved. Our side of the creek also has its fringe of bushes, and at intervals there are rocks and logs and stumps. Like cats we creep forward—like cats we crouch behind cover and peer over the logs or to the right or left of the rocks.

"Pop! Pop! Zip! Zip! Thud! Thud!"

A hundred men on each side were blazing away, and the heavy bullets, fired almost at random, strike the logs and stumps with a muffled thud, or smash against the rocks, to be flattened like wafers and drop into the grass. That bullet was fired by an old veteran. I almost felt the burn of it as it whizzed by my cheek. That one was fired by a recruit, who is probably on the skirmish line for the first time. It went at least 20 feet above my head, droning like a huge bumble bee, and it fell among the troops far to our rear.

Who uttered that scream? The man on my right is safe; the one on my left has turned on his back. His cap has fallen off, and there is blood on his head and face. He is not dead, not even fatally wounded. A bullet plowed his scalp as he looked out from behind his cover to find a human target for his bullet. He cried out with the burning pain, but he mutters and curses, and feels ashamed of his weakness as he feels for his handkerchief and binds up his bleeding head.

The man opposite me is not over 60 feet away, but so screened that I cannot see him. I can judge of his position, however, by the line of his fire. All the bullets which come whizzing by the rock to the right, and all those which smash against it with a sound to make your teeth grit, are from his musket. Those which cut in from the left or pass over are random shots. By accident I have the captain's field glasses. I draw them from the case, rub up the lenses and cautiously level them from the left-hand side of the rock. For a few seconds I can see nothing but a blur of foliage. Then the details began to come out. There is a stump among the tangle on the other bank, and as I hold the glasses on it I catch sight of an elbow and a shoulder and a hat. A musket barrel is thrust forth and a sheet of flame darts over the creeping blackberry bushes, and "smash" comes a bullet against the rock. There is no mercy in war. From the skirmish line to the rush of a division it means cripple or kill.

I lay down on the grass and pick up my musket. I reach up and pull at the limbs of a bush to form a screen, and then carefully arrange for a dead shot. Now that I have located my man, I can follow his movements with the naked eye. I have not fired a shot for five minutes, and he is emboldened. He argues that I have been killed or wounded or driven away. He fires at the man on my right and the one on left, and I know that the third will come my way. I am ready, with my finger on the trigger and my eye along the sights, when the elbow appears in view. It is a small mark to fire at. Now the shoulder is pushed out—now I see the hat—now the head and half the body is uncovered. In his anxiety to get sight of me or learn my fate he is taking chances. Kill him? Why not? He is seeking my life. He is my enemy! I enlisted with the object of killing. There is no trembling; no quickening of the pulse; no fluttering of the heart. I cannot look into his eyes, but I imagine them fastened on mine as I pull the trigger and peer under the smoke. There is a shout—a hand is thrown up, and my enemy falls backward, to fire no more. Dead, or only wounded? What matters it?

BOSTON CAN MATCH IT.

There was a fire in one of the handsome private residences in Clinton street, Brooklyn, a few days ago, while an afternoon tea was in progress. In a moment the guests were in a state of great excitement. In the dining room are two messenger calls, and these were rung half a dozen times in as many seconds. Then two or three women rushed into the street and yelled "Fire!" A pedestrian considerately stopped at the next corner and turned on an alarm, and presently two fire engines lumbered up. Several lines of hose were dragged in, and the fire, which was in the wainscoting of the kitchen, was quenched after half an hour's work.

The firemen were winding up the hose preparatory to a return to their stations and the guests were discussing the fire with their hostess when a messenger boy slowly ascended the steps, humming, "Comrades, comrades, ever since we were boys." Walking to the parlor door he stooped humming long enough to inquire, "Call?"—New York Herald.

NO USE WISHING.

"You see," he explained to the ingenuous young thing, as he showed her the wishbone, "you take hold here and I'll take hold here. Then we must both make a wish and pull, and when it breaks the one has the biggest part of it will have his or her wish some time."

"But I don't know what to wish for," she protested.

"Oh, you can think of something," he said.

"No, I can't," she replied. "I can't think of anything I want very much."

"But we mustn't spoil the fun that way," he exclaimed. "I'll wish for you."

"Will you, really?" she asked.

"Why, yes, if you can't—"

"Well, then, there's no use fooling with the old wishbone," she interrupted, with a glad smile. "You can have me."—Detroit Free Press.

Fencing.—She—"Oh, we never could afford to get married in summer with our income. New potatoes and green peas and things come so expensive." He—"In winter, then." She—"My dear boy, think of the coal and gas."—Brooklyn Life.

When a Feller Takes a Day Off.

When a feller takes a day off—sets his soul to loafin' round
Where the hills climb up to heaven, an' the rapid rivers sound,
'Pears like the world is newer, with its loveliness and light,
An' his eyes are seein' truer, an' his heart's a-beatin' right!

When a feller takes a day off, there is lots o' things to see;
I kin hear the winds away off, jes' a welcomin' of me;
An' the violets peep so purty! an' the rose I ust'er miss
Feels the red a-rushin' round it, an' comes climbin' for a kiss!

When a feller takes a day off—O, he learns a lot o' things
From the very doves a flyin', with the music in their wings;
From the hills an' from the valleys, where the dreams an' dews is found—
When a feller takes a day off, an' his soul is loafin' round!

MADE ALLOWANCES.

A certain eminent clergyman, who is greatly loved for his gentleness and forbearance with offenders, recently said that an experience of his own, in years long gone by, taught him the grace of ready excusing. When he was a boy he was a very poor boy, but he had already a strong theological bent, and was studying hard during the winter and working even harder during the summer trying to get a preparation for college.

He wanted to be a preacher, and the fact that he didn't seem to be good for anything else tended to convince him that he had not mistaken his calling. One spring he was entirely out of money, and had to get out of school and go to work. Not being able to find anything to do in the small college town where he had been studying, the youth—call him Richard Vernon—went out among the farmers to see if he could get work from them. He found a man who was very busy with his spring's work and in a hurry to get the furrows ploughed in a big field for potato planting.

The weather was favorable for planting; the farmer's boy would be home from school the next day, which was Saturday, to do the dropping and covering. He told Richard that he might mark out the field with the plough for the planting and if he suited he might be hired for two or three months. Meantime the farmer saw that the boy was anxious to stay and that he had evidently a good disposition.

So the young theologian went to work with tremendous vigor. He did not stop to take breath until he had marked off a large tract of ground with deep

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 18, 1893.

AMERICA stands at the head in most things, and in bicycling is no exception. At the international races in Chicago last week Zimmerman of New Jersey carried off the honors.

MAYOR MATTHEWS of Boston has decided that he cannot be the Democratic candidate for governor this fall, and the party is looking around to find some one who will run, almost every prominent man in the party being "mentioned."

THERE has been some talk of nominating Charles R. Ladd of Springfield for state treasurer, and it is pretty generally conceded that Western Massachusetts shall name the man, but Mr. Ladd declines the honor, on the ground that his own business demands his time.

PROHIBITION may not always prohibit, but it usually tends in that direction, and the place where it does not lessen the quantity of liquor sold and decrease the amount of drunkenness has yet to be found. The city of Worcester had no license last year, and from May 1st to August 12th there were 606 arrests for drunkenness; this year there is license, and during the same time there were 1419 arrests for the same cause.

THE times are getting somewhat easier, and many of the mills which shut down a few weeks ago are starting up again. Large amounts in gold are arriving from England, the steamer Spree bringing $4,250,000 one day last week, the largest consignment ever reaching the United States in one vessel, and many of the national banks are taking out additional circulation, which will add materially to the circulating medium.

THE decision of the Behring Sea arbitrators has been announced, and while the exclusive property right of the United States in the seal is not allowed, the need of protecting the animal is conceded, and rules and restrictions regarding its capture agreed upon. These are binding upon the United States and England only, but both powers agree to use their influence in getting the other nations to adopt the same measures. The seal is now common property outside of the three-mile limit.

OVER $3,000,000 is lying in the treasury of the commonwealth, awaiting distribution among the certificate-holders of the defunct endowment orders. This would materially help out the "hard times" among many of those who were pinched in the downfall of the order, although the majority of them belong to that class of people who never lay up a cent, and it is probable that the money sunk in this way would have gone in some other and the holders have been no better off now.

As time goes on the probibillity that Mr. Pillsbury will be the next Republican candidate for governor grows stronger every day. Lieutenant Governor Wolcott, who was thought to have aspirations in this direction, has been quoted as saying that he would accept second place on the ticket, but has denied saying so and announced his intention of making a statement as to his position in the matter this week, but has not yet done so. He islosing friends by his dilatoriness, and a few days more will put him out of the race altogether.

THE farmers in the vicinity of Bloomfield, Ct., have been bombarding the clouds to-day in an effort to make them yield rain on the parched tobacco crops, and the result will be watched with interest. Small 30-inch balloons have been sent up, attached to each being a half pound of dynamite, fired with a fuse which explodes the stuff at an altitude of about half a mile. Out west a rainmaker is in trouble for causing the fall of too much moisture. He had been attempting to make the clouds give down, and they did, a cloud-burst ruining the crops of several farmers, who promptly sued him for damages. Whether he caused the rain or not is a question, but he had been claiming that he did.

UNCLE SAM'S navy is increasing all the time, the last vessel to be launched being the commerce destroyer Minneapolis, from the Cramp's yard at Philadelphia last Saturday. The vessel is the sister ship of the Columbia, both of which are expected to steam 21 knots per hour. The boats are built of steel, with a double bottom, the space between the two being divided into water-tight compartments. The engines, boilers, magazines, etc., are protected by a heavy steel deck and many feet of coal, while a wall of patent fuel five feet thick extends along the sides in the region of the water line throughout the vitals of the ship, protecting the machinery, etc., and forming a reserve supply of fuel in case the coal gives out. There are three propellers, which can be used together or any one alone. The normal coal supply is 2000 tons, which at a speed of 10 knots will enable the vessel to travel 26,000 knots. The armament will consist of an eight-inch breech-loading rifle, two six-inch rapid-fire guns, eight four-inch rapid-fire guns, 12 six- and four one-pounder rapid-fire guns, and four Gatlings.

NEWS MATTERS IN GENERAL.

Northfield Seminary is to have a new hall for religious meetings. It will cost $50,000.

The town of Stoughton in this state is much excited over the discovery of gold within its borders. Some of the sand assays $43.30 per ton.

Three boys were killed near Homewood, Pa., Tuesday by another boy, who exploded a can of powder under a pile of rocks where the others were hunting ground hogs.

The state of Indiana has been without rain for over two months with the exception of two small showers. The corn crop is nearly ruined. All the small streams are dried up.

A panic has been caused by an outbreak of yellow fever at Pensacola, Fla. Quarantine has been declared by the other gulf towns. People are escaping from the city as fast as possible.

The plans for the new Tremont Temple in Boston call for a fire-proof building, seven or eight stories high, built of iron, stone and steel. It will be erected on the site of the burned building.

Nancy Hanks failed to beat her record of 2.04 at Mystic Park Saturday. She made the quarter in 32¼, the half in 1.03¾, three-quarters in 1.35, and the mile in 2.08½. She was paced by a running horse.

Two safes in the West Medway saving bank were blown open by burglars yesterday morning. The explosion aroused the people and three burglars were frightened away. They took less than a dollar in small change.

A passenger train on the Atlantic and Danville road went through a bridge near Milton, Va., Wednesday morning. Seven people were killed and four injured. The bridge piers were undermined by high water.

The cholera is on this side of the water again. Some of the passengers on the steamer Karamania from Naples are held in quarantine at New York. Two died Sunday. A total of 20 suspects and patients are held. The disease is mild.

Chicago had another horror Monday morning, when the Senate Hotel was burned. Seven people were killed and 14 or more badly injured. There were 30 guests in the house. They were caught by the stairs taking fire and had to jump or be burned to death. The building had no fire escapes.

Minneapolis had a narrow escape from an awful conflagration Sunday afternoon. Over 200 houses were burned, 1500 people rendered homeless, and $2,000,000 worth of property destroyed. The fire started on Nicollet Island, and was communicated to Boom Island and the mainland. The city was saved principally by a strong south wind.

Mary E. Danehy, 39, committed suicide Tuesday morning by hanging herself to an apple tree between East and South Amherst. She was a domestic in the employ of Rev. Dr. Thomas P. Field. She arose as usual, but was missed later in the day. As she had remarked to her sister that she was tired of living, a search was made and she was found hanging. The doctors state that her head was so afflicted with catarrh that she was not responsible.

LOCAL NOTICES.

The Bunker Carriage Co., at the corner of Hillman & Dwight streets, Springfield, in the National Papeterie Co. building, are to close out and close up their business. The school board will meet at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Action will be taken toward filling the vacancies in the corps of teachers in the public schools.

A lively specimen of tarantaula was found in a bunch of bananas at Robinson & Taylor's store Monday. It was killed before it committed any serious depredations.

Arrangements have been made whereby the lockup keeper is to feed all prisoners. Heretofore prisoners have been supplied with the staff of life by the officer who made the arrest.

A gang of men have been working along the tracks of the Boston and Albany road near this station this week, running a line of levels along the tracks from Boston to Albany.

The local theatrical season will open the 26th, when Lucier's Minstrels will appear at Holden's opera house. The Dazzler is booked for the 28th. This is said to be a good company.

W. A. Weld, who has purchased W. R. Milligan's stock of boots and shoes, took possession yesterday. His office as tax collector will be at the store in the Converse House block.

Holden & Fuller have but a small number of orders on hand at their wooden mill, but hope to secure enough more to keep running. Unless others come soon however the mill must shut down.

The wires for the electric lights in the other villages of the town have been strung this week, and the lamps placed in position today. If everything goes well it is proposed to start up the lights to-morrow evening.

There was a little rain Thursday, just enough to freshen up the gardens a little, but not enough to make a lasting impression or send any more water into the springs, which are getting pretty low.

An attachment for $300 has been placed on the property of C. M. Foley of Monson in favor of Lloyd G. Harris of this place to recover damages caused by cattle belonging to Foley getting into Harris's garden.

The pastor of the Congregational church will give his second address to the men of Palmer next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The subject will be "Good Investments." Everybody is invited, and all seats are free.

A new electric arc lamp was placed opposite the high school building yesterday afternoon to take the place of one which fell with the trimmer in the morning and had its illuminating qualities seriously damaged.

The body of L. W. Burnham, 62, was brought here from Boston for burial last Friday. Mr. Burnham was a brother of James Burnham, and formerly resided in town. The interment was in the Thorndike street cemetery.

One industry in this village seems to be thriving. The proprietor may be seen busily at work at any hour of the day or night, and apparently is full of business. He is evidently unaffected by the tariff question, silver bills or the Geary law. It is the Chinese laundry on Main street.

J. W. Mundell, who has been employed in the freight office of the New London Northern road, has accepted an offer to go to San Diego, Cal., as station agent for the San Diego, Cuymaca and Eastern railroad, and will leave the first of September. He will sell his household goods at private sale before going.

There was a bicycle race on the park Tuesday evening between King and Tufts of North Wilbraham, to settle a dispute as to the best man. King took the lead at the start, but was passed by Tufts at the eighth, who held the lead until the last eighth, when King forged ahead and won by 30 feet in 2.55, with evident speed to spare.

The annual picnic and fair of the Baldwinville cottage hospital will be held at that place next Thursday. The scenery and groves at the place are quite beautiful, and the hospital itself is interesting. Lunches will be served on the grounds, and a day can be profitably spent there by leaving here at 8.05 a. m. and returning at 5.20 p. m.

Box 68 was pulled at 2.40 yesterday morning for the fire at the North Monson mills, assistance having been asked for. The steamer and large hose reel were sent to the fire, and the boys worked for an hour and a half in protecting the other buildings. The Palmer apparatus arrived at the fire about 15 minutes ahead of the Monson machines.

Tax Collector Weld will be at the store of H. T. Bishop in Thorndike Thursday, Aug. 24th, from 12 to 5 p. m.; at the office of the Boston Duck Co. in Bondsville Friday, Aug. 25th, from 12 to 4.30 p. m., and at the office of the Palmer Mill in Three Rivers Monday, Aug. 28th, from 12 to 6 p. m. to receive taxes. All single poll taxes must be paid on these dates.

Judging from the work of persons who have been posting signs through the town during the past few weeks they are not aware of the law passed by the last legislature, which took effect July 1st, forbidding the tacking of posters or signs on any shade tree along the highway. Some of the trees have been shamefully covered by signs of all kinds in the past, but they can be kept clear now.

The Odds Fellows of Massachusetts, southern Vermont and New Hampshire and Northern Connecticut are arranging for a grand picnic at Laurel Park, Northampton, on the 30th. The grand lodges of Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire have signified their intention to be present in a body, and about 20,000 picnickers are expected. Everything will be free to Odd Fellows and invited guests.

William Brewster, who lives east of the village, was found by the side of the railroad near Blanchardville Sunday morning, where he had lain a good share of the night. Dr. Holbrook was called and found that he had a dislocated shoulder and a number of bruises. Brewster at first claimed that he had been assaulted and robbed, but afterward admitted that he had been pretty full of tanglefoot the night before and couldn't tell what had happened to him.

The officials for the bicycle tournament on the park Labor Day are: Referee, F. A. Blodgett of Warren; Judges, L. E. Chandler, Palmer, S. W. Coe, Ware, A. H. Halford, Ludlow; timers, C. H. Bradway, Monson, W. E. Breckenridge, Palmer, F. D. Simes, Warren; starter, J. Sharkay, Chatham, N. Y., clerk of course, W. F. Waite, Palmer; scorer, J. W. Breckenridge, Palmer; executive board, S. W. Coe, L. E. Chandler, F. A. Blodgett, A. H. Halford, W. F. Waite.

Somebody went into the engine house on Park street one day this week when the door was left unlocked and dropped a quantity of small pebble stones through the grating over the sewer pipe in the hose washing room. As a result the sewer is clogged up and the water instead of going where it ought goes into the cellar. The sewer pipe will have to be dug up under the rear of the house and under the washing room, which has a cement floor, before the obstruction can be removed.

A good number of singers gathered at the Converse House parlors Tuesday evening in response to the request that they meet to arrange for rehearsals of the comic opera "Wanita." A good rehearsal was had that evening, and another is called for next Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock, when it is requested that as many as possible shall be present, especially the gentlemen singers, as it is necessary to have a good male chorus. Landlord Pierce has kindly tendered the use of the hotel parlors as a place for rehearsals, and they will probably be held there until it is necessary to have rehearsals on the stage.

The Palmer boys were beaten at base ball by the Warrens at Warren last Saturday forenoon by the close score of 12 to 11, and in the afternoon suffered defeat at the hands of the Wares at Ware, 9 to 6. To-morrow afternoon the boys will play with the Bondsvilles on the grounds here, the game being for $100 a side. Each club has won a game, and this is to settle the championship. A good game may be looked for. An additional attraction will be a bicycle race for a medal and the championship of Wilbraham and Ludlow. Next Thursday afternoon the Palmers will play the Northamptons on the grounds here.

The Boston and Albany road ran its last cheap excursion of the season to Boston and Nantasket Beach this morning, and 155 tickets were sold at this station. The New London Northern road also ran an excursion this morning to Newport by way of New London and the steamer City of Worcester. Nine attended from this village and the neighborhood. To-morrow the Christian Endeavor excursion will be run to Watch Hill, and it is expected that a large number will attend from this vicinity. Next Wednesday the attraction is Saratoga, the special train leaving over the New London Northern road at 9.40 a. m., going by way of the Hoosac tunnel and arriving at Saratoga at 3. p. m. Twenty-four hours will be given for the inspection of that place, and the round-trip fare is only $2.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening the prize offered by Dr. W. H. Stowe to the member who brought in the most new specimens of flowers in four weeks was awarded to Mrs. Oare, as she brought in 42 specimens. An essay was read on the parsley family. The subject for next week will be the lettuce family, with an essay by Miss Lilla Allen. The following prizes are offered by the society to the members who bring in the three largest numbers of new specimens in the next three weeks: First, a choice between either of the books, "The Trees of Northeastern America," or "The Shrubs of Northeastern America;" second, a copy of Miss Dana's book, "Wild Flowers and How to Know Them;" third, offered by Dr. Stowe, a copy of "Recreations in Botany." Nine members of the society are to strive for the above prizes.

District Court.

The case of M. O'Connor against T. D. Potter and Co. of Bondsville was decided in favor of the defendant. The plaintiff appealed.—Monday Zofija Robinson of Thorndike paid $5 for assaulting Katie Gwozdz.—Thursday M. O'Grady, for drunkenness was put on probation until Sept. 30. Thomas Callahan was fined $10 for drunkenness. A hearing was commenced before Judge Copeland of Springfield of a suit entered by Mary A. Randall of Brimfield against Mary B. Smith, administratrix, of Wales, for care and support of Achsa Drury, formerly of Brimfield. S. S. Taft appeared for the plaintiff and C. L. Gardner for the defendant. The hearing occupied the greater part of the day and is continued to-day. It is probable that the decision will be reached late this afternoon.

Mrs. Joseph Labell, who has been visiting in Montreal for some time, will soon return.

Several from this place attended the ball games at Springfield on Monday and Tuesday.

Miss Annie Quincy of South Boston is visiting her aunt, Mrs. John Bush, for a few weeks.

Martin M. Thomas has been appointed administrator of the estate of the late Malvina A. Dill.

The Misses Fogarty of Wilbraham were the guests of Mrs. Thomas J. Moran over Sunday.

Henry Brann, formerly of this place, now of Kentucky, was visiting friends here the past week.

Miss Beatrice Andrews has returned from her vacation with relatives in Brooklyn and New York.

Mrs. William Graves of Clinton and family are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Molloy.

Those who attended the excursion to Boston on Friday from this place report a very pleasant time.

A Polish wedding party occupied Union hall on Tuesday evening until about midnight with dancing, etc.

George Murdock is home from Baltimore, Md., being called by the illness of his mother, Mrs. E. G. Murdock.

The two tenements in E. N. Hale's new block are already engaged. The building is fast nearing completion.

Miss Nellie L. Fitzgerald, who has been visiting here for a few weeks, returned to her home in Boston Saturday.

A ball game on Tuesday afternoon between a club from this place and one from Three Rivers resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 16 to 15.

Tuesday being the Feast of Assumption, two masses were celebrated by the pastor, Rev. J. F. Lynch, at the Catholic church in the morning, at 5 and 8 o'clock.

John Moran of Spencer, formerly of this place, and a member of the John O'Gara hose company, was in town during the week on his way to Coney Island, where his company was to enter the firemen's muster held there Tuesday.

Three Electric Lights.

The petition calling for another electric light at or near the post office should receive the consideration of the board, as it is on the pricipal street, and with the present two lights which are staked out will not properly light the street. On Main street there should be one located near the property of Rev. F. J. Lynch, which would be about the center and would then perhaps light that street fairly well from the pine grove down to the corner of School street. A petition to the board will be presented from the tax payers, and it is hoped will not be ignored. Main street is one which is much traveled, and with only the two lights which are now booked for the street it will be impossible to give any kind of satisfaction, owing to the long distance between the two lights and the number of shade trees.

THREE RIVERS.

Mrs. F. White has been quite ill this week.

Dr. Desmaris spent this week in New York city.

Miss Burdick of Providence, R. I., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Holt.

Mrs. Endicott of Springfield was the guest of Mrs. Lavine, Wednesday.

Mrs. L. B. Kendrick is visiting relatives and friends in Bridgeport, Ct.

J. B. Brown has returned from Connecticut after a two-weeks' vacation.

Raleigh Davis of Belvidere, Vt., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lavene.

Mrs. E. N. Rice and daughter of Marlboro are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tenney.

Bengle Brothers of Springfield have opened their shoe shop in C. Murdock's store.

Mr. and Mrs. Provost have returned from Vermont, after a two-weeks' vacation.

Henry Ferrel and Stephen Moore are spending a vacation in Boston and vicinity.

Frank Lavine and S. P. Barnes attended the camp meeting at Springfield last Sunday.

Mrs. Sylvester Getchell and daughtars Ida and Alice spent this week with Miss Anna Murdock.

Miss Kendrick of Worcester is spending a few weeks with her brother, L. B. Kendrick, this week.

James Barbour has returned after spending two weeks visiting relatives and friends in Canada.

A. W. Warriner and family are spending a vacation in Westfield, at Mrs. Warriner's former home.

Mrs. Annie Tracy and children, Bertha and Charles, have gone to Canada for an extended vacation.

Rev. Mr. Hutchins of Indian Orchard preached in the Union Evangelical church yesterday evening.

F. A. Upham left here yesterday for Florence, N. J., where he is to spend a few days with his brother Frank.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Haynes and Mr. and Mrs. C. Ruggles attended the camp meeting at Springfield last Sunday.

A series of grove meetings, to be held in the grove near the red bridge early in September, is being arranged for.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts of Bourne street have moved into the tenement lately vacated by Joel Downey on East Main street.

Mrs. Eaton and son Harry of Worcester, and Mrs. Hopkins of Springfield, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Newell this week.

Rev. Charles Ayer of Stafford, a former pastor of the Union Evengelical church, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Upham this week.

Horace Paine is engaged in taking care of Charles Upham, who is seriously ill on the Eli Smith farm, between this place and Ware.

Mrs. Moore has moved to Lowell this week, where her husband is engaged as engineer at one of the large manufacturing establishments.

N. M. Nichols is away on a trip to a number of summer resorts in the southern part of the state, and is doing all the traveling on his bicycle.

Mrs. Martin of Medford and Mrs. Burgess and daughter, Miss Bessie, of Chicopee were the guests of Miss Mary Martin Wednesday of this week.

James Tricket rode to Waltham yesterday on his bicycle, and Mrs. Tricket and family left here to-day, intending to join him at that place, where they are to spend a weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hillman and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown went on a fishing trip to Greenwich Pond this week, and stayed at the Greenwich Hotel over night. They had some difficulty in securing a boat, and still more in finding a key to unlock it, but as Mr. Brown is an unusually expert fisherman he feels fully repaid for having visited the place.

Mrs. Powell, Jr., has erected a very handsome monument in the Four Corners cemetery in memory of her late husband, O. A. Powell. The stone is Quincy granite, and was made in South Framingham. The design is very pretty, the front being ornamented with a Masonic emblem, while the sides bear the A. O. U. W. and G. A. R. badges, which are very appropriate, as Mr. Powell was a member of both fraternities.

A Shooting Accident.

Miss Ruby Sharp had a narrow escape from fatal injuries Wednesday, while picking berries on the George Brown farm, between this place and Bondsville. George Merrifield, who is visiting his mother in Bondsville, and a friend, were out shooting, and chanced to walk through the field where Miss Sharp was. Not seeing her, one of them fired at some game which was close by, and a number of shot grazed her face, one taking effect about her ear, necessitating probing in order to extract it. Dr. Bliss does not think her injuries serious, and hopes to have her able to attend to her duties in a few days.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

A $60,000 FIRE.

A Portion of the Mill at North Monson Burned.

The four-story stone mill of the Monson Woolen Company at North Monson was discovered to be on fire early yesterday morning, and was wholly destroyed. The watchman had made his rounds at 1 o'clock and finding everything all right had gone to the boiler room and was at work on the fires, when his wife, who lives near and was up with a sick child, discovered the flames, which had broken out of a window in the fourth story and were eating their way up the roof on the side opposite the boiler house. The time was about 1.30. The fire had caught in the card room, though from what cause can only be guessed at. The fire protection was inadequate to cope with the flames, and the efforts of the men were directed toward saving the old wooden mill on the other side of the stream, and the office and dye house, and these were prevented from burning, though they had several narrow escapes, the old mill catching fire twice. When it was found that the other buildings were likely to go assistance was asked for from Palmer, and the steamer was sent from that place. The loss is about $60,000, of which $40,000 is on the building and $20,000 on the stock; insured for $50,000 in the Manufacturers' Mutuals.

The mill was what is known as a six-set, making beaver and kersey cloakings, but as it bought a part of the yarn used the product equalled that of an eight-set mill. From 75 to 100 hands were employed, and the monthly pay roll was between $3500 and $4000. There was a considerable quantity of cloth in the mill, probably between 4000 and 5000 yards, and a good supply of stock. The mill had been running full time right along, in fact was the only mill in the town which was running full time at the time of the fire. The company had orders enough on hand to keep going for some weeks, and as the demand for its class of manufactures is just now increasing it seemed probable that the mill would not be obliged to shut down at all.

Whether the mill will be rebuilt or not is yet undecided, and may depend upon the state of the market, but there is a good water power there, and it is hoped that it will not beallowed to remain idle.

The Town will Build a New School House.

The special town meeting held last Friday to see if the town would reconsider its vote in the preceding meeting on the schoolhouse question was largely attended, about 300 being present, and the action of the preceding meeting was most emphatically endorsed. Dr. G. E. Fuller was chosen moderator, and had no sooner taken the chair than a motion was made by E. D. Cushman to adjourn without date, on the ground that the question had been fairly decided at the former meeting. This was carried by a vote of 112 to 90, and the action of the preceding meeting stands. The work of clearing up the lot for the new school house to be built on State street has already begun. There has been much talk regarding the matter, such as getting the state board of health to condemn the State street lot, which it is claimed is unhealthy by its close proximity to the canal and its low, damp condition, though as far as the latter is concerned the under soil is good gravel, with no trace of moisture. It has been suggested by some also that the state inspector of buildings be called to say that the place is not suitable, but he can do nothing beyond seeing that the building is constructed as it should be regarding exits, and that it is properly ventilated, etc. The state board of health also has no jurisdiction in the matter, and the house will probably be built at once. The committee has several sketches of buildings in its possession, and will no doubt call for bids for the construction in a short time.

Another Suit Against the Town.

Joseph L. Allen of Palmer has brought suit against the town for $1000 for the loss of a horse belonging to him on January 12th last. Dr. Moore of Palmer had hired the animal at his stable to visit a patient at the quarry, and he reached his destination all right. On his return however the sleigh was overturned and the horse ran to the bridge between the two towns, where it slipped and fell, being killed by striking some of the timbers of the bridge or the approach. It is claimed that the accident was due to the negligence of the town of Monson in not clearing the road of snow, leaving a large drift which caused the accident. It will be noticed, however, that Dr. Moore had passed over the road but a few moments before; other persons had also been over the road, and it is not likely that the town will pay without a struggle.

Mrs. John Bucklin is home from her vacation.

Munn Pease draws the reins over a new horse.

Rogers & Co. are out with a newly-painted wagon.

Rev. W. H. Marble has returned from his vacation.

David B. Needham has returned from his visit at Washington and resumed his duties at Gage Bros.

Miss Lizzie Scanlon and Miss Nora Riley of Boston are spending the week with Miss Mollie Scanlon.

The regular business meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Methodist church was held Monday evening.

George Phillips will soon move into the house owned by Mrs. H. F. Miller, near the Cushman House.

Miss Helen Whittlesy and brother Richard of Evanston, Ill., are visiting their aunt, Mrs. W. Converse.

E. B. Francis has returned from the Belden stock farm at Rockville, and taken a position with Dr. Rand.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Grant and Mrs. F. A. Bliss returned Tuesday from a five-weeks' visit at the World's Fair.

Frank Morris and F. E. Severy left Monday for a bicycle tour to New Haven. They will be gone about a week.

Mrs. Herbert Heradon and son of Brooklyn, N. Y., have been spending a few days as the guests of E. H. Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Justin Carew spent Sunday in Springfield, and Mrs. Carew expects to spend next week at Dalton.

Hon. S. F. Cushman, Miss Hattie, Mrs. Edward F. and Robert Cushman returned Saturday from Poland Springs.

John W. Hall, foreman of the Monson Granite Co., had his thumb badly smashed while unloading stone Monday.

A concrete walk has been laid from the Methodist church to connect with the one in front of the Cushman property.

Miss Nancy Shea, who has been spending a few months with friends at Norwich and Block Island, returned Monday.

Mrs. Edward D. Cushman, her daughters Grace and Blanche, and Miss Gertrude Gage are at Block Island for a few days.

The Monson lodge of Odd Fellows occupied its new quarters in the bank building for the first time Thursday evening.

The Sault Bros. of Monson have been engaged to give an exhibition of physical strength at the fair in Palmer Sept. 20th.

Mrs. Dr. Andrews of Woonsocket, R. I., spent a few days the fore part of the week with W. S. Nichols on North Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Needham and son of Springfield are spending Mr. Needham's vacation with his mother, Mrs. Marvin Bradway.

Louis Miller of Springfield, who is spending the summer with his brother, Lyman Miller, has been at his home for several days.

N. S. Abbott and wife and W. C. Wright enjoyed a carriage drive through Ware, Enfield and Belchertown the fore part of the week.

A. W. Ferry and family left Monday for Gorman cottage, Willimantic camp grounds, where there they will remain for a week or ten days.

John D. Grady, with a company of friends, took a carriage drive through Hampden, Longmeadow and Springfield the fore part of the week.

R. M. and T. Reynolds have still further extended the time for the starting of their carding, spinning and weave rooms until next Monday.

The JOURNAL will hereafter be found for sale at the news stand of W. S. Murphy, as well as at the stores of W. N. Flynt & Sons and G. L. Keeney.

Mr. Craig of Springfield has been engaged as organist at the Catholic church, and the choir will resume its duties again the first Sunday in September.

The two bridges on State street have been replanked this week, and the abutments, which were washed out in the spring and fixed temporarily, replaced.

E. C. Bradway was painfully stung about the face and hands Friday while attempting to hive a swarm of bees owned by H. G. Rogers, which had swarmed on one of the trees on Main street.

The funeral of Michael Hussey, 69, was held at St. Patrick's church Monday morning. Rev. D. Mullen officiated at the church, and Rev. J. F. Lee at the burial, which was in the Catholic cemetery.

The breaking of the clutch to the engine at D. W. Ellis & Son's mill caused the greater part of the mill to shut down, and it will not start again until after the repairs which are contemplated have been completed, which will take about two weeks.

Is it understood that the town only pays half toward an eight-foot concrete walk? So for the fine broad walk from Central Block to Washington street, also the curbing, credit is due Heimann & Lichten, S. F. Cushman, A. D. Norcross and others.

Dr. A. T. Robinson of Monson and Frank Cutler of Attleboro enjoyed a days' fishing at Wales pond the fore part of the week. Upon their return one of the party reported a catch of 20 pounds of pickerel and 16 pounds of perch. This, however, was too much for Monson people to believe, and it was finally simmered down to a few pond shiners, a few flat fish, commonly known as pumpkin seeds among the boys, and one small pickerel. The most they had to show for their day's outing was a remarkably healthy complexion.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The North Wilbraham ball team defeated the Fairfields Tuesday, 14 to 7.

King and Tufts, with a number of bicycle enthusiasts, went to Palmer Tuesday evening to settle the question of which was the faster rider of the two, and King won by about 30 feet.

WEST BRIMFIELD.

Quite a number attended the last Boston excursion to-day.

Mrs. Andrew Crossman visited friends in town Wednesday.

Jonas Blodgett had a valuable horse killed by the cars recently.

Mrs. Charles Graves of Worcester is at home for a short stay.

Mr. Gillis of Boston is the guest of his sister, Mrs. Haskell Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Lawrence left Wednesday for a short visit in and around Boston.

Miss Millie Young, who has been spending a few days in town, has returned to her home in Springfield.

HAMPDEN.

Mrs. Julia Stewart of Monson was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson over Sunday.

Mrs. John Kenworthy has returned from a sojourn on the Blandford hills, somewhat improved in health.

Mrs. A. H. Thompson, with Mrs. Julius Stewart of Monson, left Monday for a two-weeks stay at Indian Neck, Brandford, Ct.

John W. West, commercial traveler for the Warren Thread Company of Boston, was recently the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John R. West.

The ladies of the Methodist society have obtained the long-needed cushions for the church, and feel amply repaid for the hard work done to obtain them.

The Ladies' societies of the Methodist and Baptist churches held a union lawn party at S. Chapin's last week Tuesday, and had a more than usually pleasant time, so much so that they propose to repeat the experiment soon.

BELCHERTOWN

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Longley gave a pleasant whist party last Saturday evening to a number of friends.

The coach formerly used by the Highland House for the transportation of guests has been sold, and goes to Ware.

Bennie R. Fairchild left Monday to take a position with his father at Norwich, Ct., and his place at the depot will be filled by Harry Sanford.

The tax collector has sent out his bills. A discount of 6 per cent will be allowed on all taxes paid before September 1st. There are 549 polls this year.

Miss Stella Shumway was the victim of a pleasant surprise visit by a number of friends last Saturday evening, her guests presenting her with a gold watch and chain.

R. K. Shumway had two ribs broken and received other injuries at his paint shop one day last week while attempting to get a heavy wagon down the incline to the street.

The high school will commence the 28th, with Charles T. Eaton as principal. The grammar and primary schools will commence September 6th, the Rock Rimmon, Holyoke, Federal and Union schools the 11th, and the other schools either the 6th or the 11th.

BRIMFIELD.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Stone of Milford have been spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shaw. The party visited Flynt's Park at Monson Sunday, and report a pleasant time.

Eddie B. Webber will be the agent for the JOURNAL in Brimfield after this date, and will supply all who wish the paper. Orders left with him will receive prompt attention; the papers will be delivered within a reasonable distance of the post office. Yearly subscriptions may be left with him if desired.

It seems as if some of the repairers of the highways work at that when there is nothing else to do, regardless of the time or condition of the soil. Some of the roads have been neatly scraped and rounded up during the past few days, but with the soil in the condition which the long dry spell has left it the roads would have been much better if left alone. But they have been "fixed" now, and the dry powder must be endured until there is rain enough to make it pack down again.

The assessors have given the tax book to the collector, who is now ready to receive taxes. These persons pay $50 or more: Samuel H. Adams $66, George Adams 52, Edward B. Brown 74, Henry Blodgett 56, Elbert L. Bemis 66, Sanford Booth 78, Edward Bliss 50, Oscar F. Brown 58, J. R. Brown 53, A. B. Brown 83, Philip Barnes 64, George F. Chamberlain 57, H. L. It is possible that the town may be lighted with electric lights, as parties have been looking over the place with that object in view, and will submit estimates of the cost.

Patrick Linnehan fell from a pear tree Sunday morning and was picked up senseless, but soon recovered and was pronounced not seriously hurt by Drs. Hastings, who was called.

A man attempted to board the 2.06 p. m. express Wednesday after the train was in motion, but slipped and was dragged some distance. The train was stopped and the man was not much hurt.

The barn of Loren Howlett, on the road to West Brookfield, was burned about 1 o'clock yesterday morning, with ten head of cattle, hay, grain, etc. The loss was $2000, with insurance of $800. The fire is supposed to have been incendiary.

Everett Damon, who disappeared from his home about two weeks ago, and from whom nothing was heard for some time, was located Monday at South Ellington, Ct. While at work before he disappeared he fell off a log and knew nothing more until he came to himself at the above place, having in the meantime wandered about in a dazed condition.

A special town meeting is called for a week from to-morrow to see what action the town will take in relation to requiring the center village, known as Factory Hill, to remove the buildings and all obstructions out of the limits of the highways, or to act in relation to the same; and to see if the town will rebuild the bank wall on the southerly side of Main street on Factory Hill, and cause the same to be placed on the line of the street; also to build a new sidewalk and procure suitable curbing for the same.

An Elevator Falls.

The elevator used at the new mill of Sayles & Jenks for carrying mortar, etc., to the upper stories, fell at noon last Friday, injuring two of the three men who were on it. The load for the elevator was two barrels of mortar, and the workmen had been forbidden to use it, but after loading it Daniel Cavanaugh, Jerry Foley and a man named Cone got on. Their weight proved too much, and the rope broke as they reached the third story. Cavanaugh suffered a fracture of the check bone and several cuts, while Foley was severely shaken up; Cone received only a slight scratch on the arm. All will recover.

The Assessors' Figures.

The assessors have finished their work and find the total valuation of the town to be $2,458,835, of which $461,460 is personal and $1,997,375 real estate. The total tax is $42,355, and the rate is $16.20 on $1000. There are 1261 polls, 399 horses, 1190 cows, 264 sheep, 414 neat cattle, 64 swine, 694 houses, 3261 fowls. These persons pay a tax of $100 or over.

Charles L. Hubbard and Robert Wright have petitioned the superior court to discharge a mortgage on certain real estate occupied by them. The mortgage was given April 5, 1853, by Alexander P. Lane, to secure a note, and they assert that they or their predecessors have had undisputed possession of the land since that time, and more than 20 years after the expiration of the time limited in said mortgage for the full payment of the conditions thereof, and that no payment on account of the debt secured thereby has been made, or any other act done in recognition of the valid existence of said debt within the 20 years, or from said period up to the present time. They assert that they believe the debt has been paid but inadvertently left off the record.

WARE.

Mary Jane, aged 36, wife of Joseph K. Hutchinson died last Friday. She leaves a husband and four little ones to mourn her loss.

Mrs. J. Livingston, daughter of Rufus Hinckley, was badly burned Saturday by the upsetting and igniting of a can of naphtha at her home in Boston.

The ball games last Saturday were well attended. The Wares defeated the Palmers 9 to 6, but were beaten by the Ambersts 17 to 16 in a 11-inning game.

There was a good attendance, a good time, and some money added to the treasury on account of the ship social at the Methodist church Wednesday evening.

One of the large old elms in front of Yale's drug store was cut down Wednesday morning, it having become so decayed at heart that it was unsafe in a high wind.

The holders of the sewer loan have given notice that the payment in September of $3300 will be required in currency, which will make quite an additional expense.

Didn't Want a Girl.

Last summer my wife's health was all run down, and she wanted me to hire a girl to do the work. In a little while I found one I thought I would suit her, when to my surprise she said I need not hire any one, as she felt much better, and thought another bottle of Sulphur Bitters would cure her.
DONALD GREY, 41 Worcester square, Boston.

Could Not Keep

Shop without them. I consider your Sulphur Bitters a remarkable blood purifier. I know of several people whose cases were considered hopeless, that have been entirely cured by your medicine. The sale of Sulphur Bitters is so large here that I could not keep shop without them. E. S. YATES, Pharmacist, 99 Essex street, Lawrence, Mass. 20

The Chinese pay their doctor only so long as he keeps them in health. They believe in preventing rather than curing disease. This is sound sense, and one of the strongest recommendations of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a medicine which not only cures diseases but prevents them.

Another Aged Person

Tests the healing waters of Leon's famous fountain and is cured. He says he considers Leon's Sarsaparilla the Greatest Remedy on Earth.

The Kind that Never Fails

Inflammation of the Bladder and Enlargement of Prostate Gland permanently cured.

We are in receipt of the following letter from Mr. H. N. Woodcock, a well-known and prominent citizen of Waldo County, Me.

Gentlemen:—For the benefit of suffering humanity I deem it my duty to say that for many years I have been troubled with Inflammation of the Neck of the Bladder and Enlargement of the Prostate Gland, occasioning frequent passing of water, and obliging me to be up frequently nights. My diseases, with broken rest and age, seemed to be working together to drive me to my death. I tried our most prominent local physicians and many different medicines, but without any benefit whatever. Three bottles of Leon's Sarsaparilla completely cured me, and I am now, at the age of 70 years, well and hearty. I consider Leon's Sarsaparilla the greatest remedy on earth.

Her Mother's Ways.

When I went courtin' Mary Lize,
She made the nices' kind er pies;
She wuz the neatest, high or low,
An' I wa'n't feared ter tell her so.
An' after all these married years
Them's all the sentermints she hears.
An' it don't end with cookin' things,
Coz all she does, an' sez, an' sings,
Makes her the sweetest, kindest wife
That ever helped a man thru life.
She on'y likes one kind er praise—
"My wife hez got her mother's ways."

An' now I think on it awhile,
It used to be her father's style,
Er sayin' jest thet sort er thing
When he would hear her mother sing.
Lor', I hev seen him settin' there
A-rockin' in his high-backed chair,
An' I hev heern him tell ter me
How thoughtful she would allers be.
Sez he: "She's more nor with my praise,
My wife hez got her mother's ways."

An' thet ain't all: it does me good
An' makes me proud, ez well it should,
Ter hear thet son-in-law er mine
Keep the word passin' down the line,
He took my gal away f'um me,
An' I giss him an' her agree:
Coz 'twarn't but just the other day
I chanced ter overhear him say
A tellin' of my darter's praise:—
"My wife hez got her mother's ways."

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

SHORTEST AND LONGEST.

The longest day is in June, they say,
The shortest in December.
They did not come to me that way:
The shortest I remember
You came a day with me to stay,
And filled my heart with laughter;
The longest day—you were away—
The very next day after.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

MY COUSIN.

My cousin Elsa had, I am sorry to say, grown into a provocative woman, with a dirty complexion and a tendency to hint on insufficient evidence that men whom she met were in love with her. She gave these hints to a confidante, and the confidante always told the men, and the men as a rule were very angry. Sometimes they complained to me. She was just pretty enough to make her story probable, and this was exasperating. I pointed out to them that Elsa was the kind of a girl that had to do something to make her mother suffer, that there was no authentic instance of any one who knew her well having taken her seriously, and that it was best to bear quietly with the ways of women. I did what I could. I told her that it was vulgar to pose as the car of Juggernaut, but although she is quite vulgar enough to consciously avoid vulgarity she would not see it.

I came upon her late one night at one of her mother's parties when nearly every one had gone. She was wearing the most affected clothes, liquid eyes and a small pout.

"Poor little me!" she said in her favorite girl of four manner, "what have I done? I feel positively certain that Mr. Wysloup will kill me."

"Yes?"

"Indeed, yes and yes and yes! He would take me into supper, and ever since if I said a word to any other man he has scowled at me in a positively murderous way."

"Elsa," I said, "I will give you six lessons in the art of implication for a shilling. It is cheap, but I hate to see you do things inartistically. It is all right with me, of course, but I fancy you had better not tell other people that Wysloup is in love with you."

"I never said he was. And why mustn't I tell?"

"Because Wysloup is dangerous."

"Oh! Why dangerous? Then I think I will."

She did, and Wysloup heard of it. He is connected with the proprietor of the Wysloup multiplex stock. The multiplex stock is, if one may trust the advertisement, an added luxury to life and cannot wear out. It has certainly conferred more fortune than honor upon the nephew of the proprietor. If in your ignorance you cheerily ask Wysloup if he is connected with the multiplex stock, he will tell you frankly that he is its nephew. But when once he knows that you are aware of his connection he does not permit any further reference to it. For instance, Denner happened once to be talking at the club about the possibility that he might have to leave his house. A certain railway had a great envy to go through his front garden. Some one asked him if he felt anxious about it.

"Yes," said Denner, "I am in a state of most awful suspense, like my multiplex stocks." Wysloup was present and heard this, but said nothing. Later, at whist, Major Birdmount—who was all liver and suspicions—was coupled with Wysloup against Dristield and Denner. The major is quite unable to believe in extraordinary luck at whist unless it happens to come to himself. He would distrust his own mother if she held 7 trumps. Consequently it was unfortunate that Denner commenced by dealing himself the whole of the 13. With great difficulty the major held his tongue and spoke nothing, but his face darkened. Denner was greatly surprised. Wysloup smiled a faint ghost of a smile. Presently Denner noticed that the major was watching him intently. As Denner is a perfect ordinary and honest man he was naturally annoyed. But in spite of his honesty when it came Denner's turn to deal again he dealt himself 11 trumps with the ace and king of another suit. He could hardly believe his eyes. He flung down his cards and won the rubber.

As the major rose to go he said, "My children had been meaning to take me to the Egyptian hall to-night, but whist's good enough for me." No man probably likes to have it implied that he is cheating for the sake of shilling points at whist. Denner was furious and lost no time in making the major very much less vague and much more humble, but he was nevertheless exceedingly annoyed about it. Of course it may not have been Wysloup that was responsible, but I have noticed that those who vex him generally get punished, and he can do anything with the cards. Besides Wysloup had been very busy losing money to the major at ecarte on the following day. Now, the major cannot play ecarte, and Wysloup can. This was the only occasion on which it had occurred to me that Wysloup had the battered relics of a conscience.

I was curious to see how it would take my cousin Elsa's audacity. She had hinted at Wysloup's devotion in a conversation with young Cecil Banks. Banks is a repeater. He told Wysloup all about it. Further, he told me he had told Wysloup. Now, I thought, Wysloup will cut her dead and make no secret why he does it, or he will set some scandal afloat about her. He did nothing of the kind. He treated her with the most delicate and respectful attention. He took every chance of meeting her. He seemed at first to desire nothing more than to be forever her humble and silent worshiper.

Once or twice as she stepped from the carriage up the strip of carpet to some party to which Wysloup had not been invited she saw him standing in the crowd, half in shadow, cloaked, watching her with raptured eyes and a romantic air as impressive as the advertisements of the multiplex stock. On the occasions when he did meet her he by no means monopolized her. He took with humble gratitude as much of her society as she vouchsafed to him. He remembered and showed her that he remembered every word she said and every preference she had expressed. He was reverent and chivalrous with her. His manner was perfect. He was splendid. He was Elizabethian.

I do not think Elsa had been treated with abnormal reverence before. She luxuriated in it. She ceased to say anything that would imply that Wysloup was fond of her, yet she talked a good deal of him. She told me one night that he was the only man she knew who had a really noble nature. I said: "All right, but let it stop at that. Don't marry him." She said ecstatically that one would not marry Sir Galahad. I said that I had never tried. Then she told me that I was vulgar, which was fairly true.

Of course a week or two after she came to me with a letter in her hand. "You know," she began, "that poor, dear mamma does not like Mr. Wysloup. She asks him to things sometimes because I make her, but she hates him."

"Yes?"

"Well, I'm in great trouble. He's written to me—a proposal, and I have accepted him. Oh! oh! I hadn't expected it, and I'm not worthy, and I never called any one Algernon before in my life. I want you to break it to mamma and tell her it's all right."

"You won't like it. He's going abroad to look after the colonial interests of the multiplex stock. You had better write and say that you've changed your mind. What's that letter you've got there?"

"It's his. It's the letter. I can't bear to let it get out of my hands."

"The address on the envelope," I said, "is not in Wysloup's writing."

"Well, it is the same as the writing in the inside and the same as the acceptances he wrote to our invitations. I wish we hadn't destroyed them."

I went to a drawer and pulled out a sheet of note paper. "There," I said, "I saw Wysloup write that and sign it. Compare it with the letter. I have known Wysloup's handwriting for years."

It took me time to convince her, but I did it. She became slightly illogical. She said that Wysloup ought to be ashamed of himself, and that it obviously was not he who had played her the trick and that I was as much to blame for introducing him to her—which, by the way, I never did. She also said that it would kill her, but it didn't.

This is the reply she received to her acceptance in Wysloup's own handwriting:

DEAR MISS HARDING—I gather from your letter that some person has been writing to you a proposal in my name, and that you have been a victim of a vulgar practical joke. I must thank you for the very warm and flattering expressions that you used about me, and I am indeed sorry that I cannot plead a right to them. But I shall hope to be always a brother to you. It came to my knowledge a few months ago that you had coupled my name with yours in a very unjustifiable way. I shall therefore retain your letter as a hostage. As long as you refrain from taking such liberties in the future no one will see that letter but myself. Again apologizing for my inability to be to you all that you could wish, I remain yours respectfully, ALGERNON WYSLOUP.

Elsa spent a vast amount of tears, gasps and torn handkerchiefs over this letter. "How dare a man say that he will be my brother?" she exclaimed. Then she once more referred to the probability of her immediate decease.

Wysloup left for England a few days afterward, and we never found out whom he had got to write the letters for him. For all we knew he might have disguised his own handwriting.

When Elsa married Sir Peter a year afterward, Wysloup sent her as a wedding present a gold bonbonniere with her love letter folded small inside it. He once more showed the relics of a conscience.

A few weeks after I caught Elsa speaking of Wysloup to a dear friend.

"Yes," said Elsa sweetly, "there was something between us, but it could never be. He left England, you know, directly afterward. I do so hope that his life is not quite spoiled."

So Elsa struck the last blow. But then she was never hampered even by the relics of a conscience.—Sketch.

VICTORY FOR DANA'S!

Read this Wonderful Statement, sent us by Church & Hamlin, Pharmacists, Cor. Williams and Pleasant Sts., New Bedford, Mass.:

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.

DEAR SIRS:—I have had Chronic Nasal Catarrh for many years, and have been a great sufferer. Have had five Physicians who have told me my disease was so bad they could not help me. My throat was so bad I could eat only the softest food for six months. My nose was swollen out of shape. I could not drink two swallows of water at a time without its being forced through my nostrils. My throat was often so sore I could not eat, and one Physician thought I must have a surgical operation. I had given up all hopes of recovery, but through the influence of friends I began using and with the first bottle began to improve. I have taken three bottles and can assure you I am wonderfully improved, physically and mentally. My throat is all healed; I can eat any hard substance, and people who know me say it is a miracle.

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

Respectfully yours,
VICTORIA H. JOHNSON.
